Hockey Instruction

City Youngsters Learn the Basics

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

With the recent defeat of Team Canada '74 still fresh in everyone's mind what better time to open Belleville's Basic Hockey School than Friday.

The Russians beat Canada with a unified effort. They beat them not with a group of individuals, but with a group of players who concentrated on the basics of the game.

"We give the boys a knowledge of what the game is about," said the school's administrator, Cy Rochford, "we teach them skating, shooting, stick handling and how to play their positions so that they'll better understand the game."

Each week the boys enrolled in the course will spend an hour on the ice and 15 minutes in hall at hour in a classroom for a chalk talk.

The school was most successful last year and because of popular demand will reopen on Friday for the start of its first semester. Each semester is 12 weeks long and costs each boy $17. The second semester opens in January.

The instructors of the course are the same as last year. The chief instructor is Lionel Dorbrild and his assistants are Lionel Reilly and Floyd Crawford.

"By teaching the boys the basics of the game," added Rochford, "we allow them to develop their own skills properly. The school does not inhibit the individuality of each boy, but rather advances his personal ability."

Boys are divided into age groupings, but may be put into higher or lower groups according to their rate of development.

Age divisions are as follows:9-9, 10-11, 12-13. The sessions are known as white, green and gold, respectively.

Green will take to the ice at 6 p.m. with a chalk talk beginning at approximately 4:45.At 5 o'clock the white group will have its classroom session and begin its on-ice training at 6 p.m. Finally the gold group will train on the ice from 7-8 p.m. and have a chalk talk immediately prior to ice time.

Registration for the school takes place every day at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

There are still 40 vacancies left for the opening semester, but administrator Rochford expects all of them to be filled by Friday.

Jackie Gordon Will Coach Stars

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jackie Gordon gets a NHL assistant chance to coach at his alma mater North Stars when the National Hockey League opens its 27th season tonight.

Gordon, who stepped down as Minnesota coach in favor of Father MacDonald last June 30, will be back behind the bench with the Stars play Pittsburgh Penguins at Met- ropolitan Arena.

The Stars kept Gordon on as a scout for the rest of last season and gave him the general manager's job when Wren Blair was dropped in the off-season. Later, he got back his old coach's job as well.

As coach and general manager, Gordon faces a building job with the Stars, who missed the playoffs last season for the first time since 1968 as Stanley Cup entrants in the West Division.

Gordon is one of five coaches making his new jobs this year with two of them, Bep Guidolin of Kansas City Scouts and Jim Anderson of Washington Capitals, making their debuts tonight with expansion teams.

Guidolin, who quit Boston Bruins in a contract dispute after leading them to a first-place finish in the East Division last season, guides the Scouts tonight against the Maple Leafs in Toronto.

Anderson scouted for the Bruins last year after playing in the American Hockey League for 17 seasons and coaching minor league teams at Springfield, Mass., Oklahoma City and Dayton, Ohio. The Capitals open at New York Rangers at Madison Square Garden.

The rest of tonight's schedule has New York Islanders at Montreal Canadiens, Atlanta Flames are at Vancouver Canucks, Chicago Black Hawks at Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis Blues at the California Golden Seals.

The league's other two new coaches, Don Cherry of Boston and Floyd Smith of Buffalo Sabres have the night off.

Cherry, a veteran minor league player, moves up from Rochester Americans of the AHL. Smith, who scored 139 goals in 11 NHL seasons, moves up from Cincinnati Swords of the AHL, replacing Joe Crozier, who moved to Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association as coach and general manager.

Guidolin isn't likely to catch Leafs' Jacques Tavarelli, coach Red Kelly has been telling the Leafs the Scouts "are going to be really tough."

"Why, I'd rather be playing the Boston Bruins in our first team than Kansas," he told a reporter.

Feux Follets Dazzle Crowd

By EUGENIE LANG

A packed house was on hand at Centennial Secondary School recently to witness Feux Follets The Spirit of Canada under the sponsorship of the Belleville Yarnton Benefit Fund in connection with the Belleville Branch of the National Ballet of Canada. There was not one dissatisfied person in attendance as witnessed by the applause that burst forth throughout the entire two hour plus performance.

The entire production was one of exciting movement, colorful costumes and vivid portrayal of the varied aspects of Canadian history, culture and ethnic backgrounds. A troup of about 30 dancers accompanied by a trio of musicians kept the audience enthralled from opening Indian scene to closing curtain.

Nine different scenarios made up the full production, staged Oct. 3rd, each carefully researched in regard to dress, properties and era represented.

The aboriginal Plains Indians were recreated with scary realism along with native dances that reverted to the dominant beat of the drum. Settlers brought out the full company in a square dance sequence and railroad trilogy.

The Scottish Tradition revived our Gaelic heritage with dron of assulated bagpipe and a ritual of reel ending in ancient Dance of Swords.

The finale brought the French Canadian to the forefront with his rhythmic Spoon Dance and well-known folk songs of Quebec.

Sing portions were given sensitive interpretations by Jeanie LeClair and Brian McKay.

"A PROVOCATIVE, SHREWDLY MADE SHOCKER!"
When Charles Bronson begins to shoot the bad guys, it's difficult not to cheer him on with loud shouts of encouragement. And so New York has its first vigilante and perhaps its first real crime deterrent. IT ALL WORKS!" —Kathleen Carroll, N.Y. Daily News
"RARELY IN SCREEN HISTORY HAS A MOVIE CAUSED SO MUCH VIOLENT AND CONTROVERSIAL REACTION FROM BOTH AUDIENCES AND CRITICS! WE ARE READY FOR ACTION. BRONSON PROVIDES IT. THRILLING! A COMPLEX AND STARTLINGLY ORIGINAL FILM THAT WILL ANGER AND PROVOKE!" —Rex Reed, N.Y. Daily News
"A TIME-BOMB OF A MOVIE. exploding at just the right moment in a glare of truth that will touch and terrify us all. It crackles with the electricity of dangerous big city streets, and is so timely in its terror that the switchblade seems to prick the viewer's skin, the bullet seems to whiz along his ear. A WINNER!" —Norma McLain Stoop, After Dark
"DEATH WISH IS A ROUSER FOR EVERYONE WHO WANTS SAFE CITIES—WHAT I CALL THE FED-UP GENERATION. IT'S A FIRST-RATE THRILLER! Bronson gives a bang-up performance!" —Gene Shalit, NBC-TV
"A VERY IMPRESSIVELY MADE FILM! It taps every urbanite's fears and exasperations about the spread of crime in the streets. It's certainly the kind of film that will have some kind of profound social impact!" —Kevin Sanders, ABC-TV
"A FIRST-RATE SUSPENSER! What makes this fantasy work is the superb performance of Charles Bronson. The breath-stopping denouement and tidy-twist resolution will satisfy every basic instinct we liberals' are heir to!" —Judith Crist, New York Magazine
"A MASTERPIECE OF CATHARSIS ... A DARK GOOD ACTION FLICK ... IT ACTS OUT A LOT OF PEOPLE'S FEELINGS. A MASTERFUL MANIPULATION OF A NEEDLE THAT PRICKS US WHERE IT HURTS!" —Leonard Harris, CBS-TV

Council Explains Role of Committee

PICTON — Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson this week suggested to town council that explanation of committee of adjustment hearings to the public might be necessary.

"It might be worthwhile to have an explanation of these hearings so the public is better informed," he said.

His suggestion followed a motion that Mayor James Bird attend two hearings scheduled here this month.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis explained the committee is established to notify all persons within 300 feet of a proposed development. This affords them an opportunity for representation.

Picton reeve Ross Cruikwright said residents of homes near Kentwood Nursing Homes Ltd., Ontario St., are petitioning by application for an addition to the facility. He described some of them as "strongly opposed" and said they plan to attend the public hearing Friday, Oct. 11 at Shire Hall.

A notice of the hearing forwarded to council states, "This notice is sent to you because you are either the applicant concerned, a person having an interest in the property, or an assessed owner of a neighbouring property. You are invited to attend this public hearing to express your views or be represented by counsel for this purpose."

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDEROSI

Thursday, October 10

Aries (March 21-April 19) Someone will try to put a bit of a damper on one of your major interests. It won't be enough to keep you from having a good time.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You'll be more pleased with the results if you take your work you're thinking about having others do around the house.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) If you're hoping to conduct some business under a social cover it won't work out too well today. Treat each area separately.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You're a bit concerned that someone you're doing a favor for doesn't know it's solely your doing. Relax. He does.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't become discouraged if others don't see the merits of your ideas immediately. Later they'll come around to your way of thinking.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Situations you're presently involved in where profit is a motive look reasonably favorable for you to-day and tomorrow, if you stay on top of things.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're a master at working out compromises if you really try. Today, your innate talents will be put to a test. Be fair, as always.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't be deterred from going shooting at targets you've set for yourself. The small frustrations are all manageable.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sidelines you're looking for to solve a problem of importance to you and bond you'll get without the aid of experts or professionals.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your present position is stronger than you realize. Stop contemplating the negative aspects. Start using the opportunities at hand.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're likely to take some positive steps now, rather than wait on another to make the initial approach in a situation where you're both affected.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) An interesting situation is developing. It will have a favorable effect upon your work or career. It will call for initiative on your behalf.

Win at Bridge

Both vulnerable

West	North	East	South
3♠	4♠	5♥	6♠
Pass	Pass	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead—♥7

By Oswald and James Jacoby

You can have a lot of fun with today's hand if you cover up the East and West cards. Now try to make your spade slam after East wins the first trick with the king of hearts and returns the five of clubs.

You win in dummy and cast afford to play one round of trumps. Both opponents follow. NNow, there is a very simple way to proceed. Play a second trump and go after diamonds. If the suit breaks 3-2 you will have a million tricks. A second line will be to try to ruff both your losing hearts. That will fail if West started with just two hearts and the jack of spades.

Is there a third way? There sure is! You can draw the defence's last trump; ruff a heart; ruff a club back to your hand and run off all your trumps.

If West has a diamond stopper he will be squeezed out of it since he will have to hang on to the queen of clubs. If East has the diamond stopper he will also be squeezed since he must hang on to the ace of hearts.

This play is known as an automatic double squeeze. Only West can guard against the jack of clubs; only East can guard against the queen of hearts. Therefore, neither one can protect diamonds.

CARD Sense

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 N.T.	Pass	2♣
Pass	2♥	Pass	3♠

You, South, hold:
♠ A K 8 4 ♥ A 7 4 ♦ Q 4 ♣ K Q 3 7

What do you do now?

Compete with a bid of three hearts. Your partner could realize that you aren't showing a sub zero.

TODAY'S QUESTION
You do bid three hearts and your partner continues to three notrump. What do you do now?

'Sugar' Meanings Confuse Issue

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am pregnant with my second child.

Shortly after the first son's birth I became very nervous, weak and dizzy and thought I was cracking up.

A doctor suggested a six-hour glucose tolerance test. I found I have low blood sugar. I quit eating sugar immediately and within two weeks I was much better.

I am still eating no sugar but my obstetrician doesn't seem to know much about it. He says I need to eat sugar and I know I can't.

I want to know why this trouble started affecting me so badly after the baby was born. Was it the pregnancy?

Now I'm worried that after the new baby's birth I'll be real sick again.

How close is this to diabetes? I read in your column that there were more stillbirths with diabetes. Are my fears justified?—Mrs. D.D.

I would judge that you are overworrying in at least a couple of respects, and I'd suggest that you keep on eating the way you are and stop worrying about having the trouble flare up when the new baby arrives. I'll offer some reasons.

First, your obstetrician, perhaps without being aware that you have had a glucose tolerance test, may not know that you use "sugar" in the same sense you are.

When you say "sugar," you mean sugar from the sugar bowl, candy, sweet desserts and such. Chemically there are quite a few "sugars" all related but not identical. The sugar we eat is sucrose. There are other sugars, however, which is milk sugar, and others.

There's glucose, which is also known as blood sugar. It's similar in that it represents a simple form of energy or fuel for the body, and it is perfectly true that we need it. You know from experience what happens when the blood sugar level temporarily falls too low in your system.

But here's the fortunate aspect. You don't have to eat sugar at each session—to get the glucose you need. You can get it from the various carbohydrate foods you eat—bread, cereals, vegetables. You even get some from the protein foods you eat; such as meat, cheese, eggs, fish.

Low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) can't be "close to diabetes." It is true that some folks who eventually develop diabetes later in life, but that does not mean that all, or even the majority, do.

You don't have diabetes now and there's no point in fearing that your coming child is going to be endangered by a disease you don't have.

As to why your first delivery brought on your troubles with low blood sugar, nervous tension can be a significant factor, and having the first baby can be an anxious time for a woman who has a tendency to worry.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Do you recommend a waiting period after taking birth control pills, before getting pregnant? If you do, how long?—R.C.R.

Yes, a waiting period is very much indicated because it reduces risk of a miscarriage. Three months ought to be adequate, but extra couples of months beyond that would be a precaution.

Dear Doctor: Do you think a home that was inhabited by a person who had emphysema is a safe place to live?—M.W.

No—no more than you should disinfect a home because someone died of a heart attack or cancer or gunshot wound or broken neck. Emphysema is not a germ-borne disease.

IN MEMORIAM

BOWERS — In loving memory of a dear father, Norman Bowers, who passed away Oct. 9, 1972.
Dad, you left us suddenly and quietly, but it left a void
In my heart never a longing,
To hold your hand, to say goodbye.
Words may express how much we miss you,
But they can't express how we miss you.
Memories are all we have left,
But they bring back memories,
My smile fades all the while.
—Forever, Sister.

CANNIFF, Brian — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away Oct. 9, 1971.
Sadly missed by his wife Jean, daughter Gail and son Brian.
Gail has grown up quickly,
And we all 15 grown were thrown,
In the time of this dark tragedy.
In the pride of manhood days,
When we would give if we could only,
But Brian," to the same old way,
We take your words to be your guide.
We sit with you and chat awhile,
We walk with them as you do,
We wave from your hand or say goodbye,
But each time we say your name,
You seem to smile and say,
"I'll be with you in memories."
—Always loved and remembered by sister and family, Grandma Bowers and Carol and sisters Patricia Smith and Phyllis.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to express sincere thanks to Dr. Morrison, relatives, friends and neighbours for cards, flowers, gifts and prayers received during my stay in hospital. Especially to Dr. O'Boyle, Miss Bates, Miss Hall, Miss Hubbard and the entire staff of 6th and 4th floors. Thank you.
Lola Pound.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

to avail yourself of a 10% mortgage. The past two weeks has seen numerous prudent purchasers burying our Pioneer with low interest rate mortgages. We have a long, low ranch bungalow still level on the west side, with a garage on the east side, a four bedroom two storey on west side and a completely roofed split level on the east side. Not only do these houses have low interest rate, but the cost price is far below the reproduction cost.

LARGER HOMES

We have a choice of three, four bedroom homes on the west side. Two of them have over 2,500 square feet and one has 1,900 square feet. Each one has a family room and fireplace.

Most of these houses are nearing completion but there is still time to select paint and flooring colors.

Fabled San Francisco Losing Status as Port

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tourists still flood the streets and restaurants of Fisherman's Wharf but the rest of the once-fabled Port of San Francisco is rotting, obsolete and almost broke.

Ships of the world still sail beneath the Golden Gate to discharge cargoes but most of them now steam past San Francisco's antiquated piers to the modern Port of Oakland, across San Francisco Bay.

"Oakland will never replace San Francisco as an attraction or a name but we've eclipsed San Francisco as the port city of northern California," said Charles Seifert of the Port of Oakland.

San Francisco port officials refuse to yield their traditional supremacy to Oakland.

"The port is competitive now and we're going to be even more competitive in the future," said Monroe Sullivan, executive assistant to port director Bernard Orsi.

San Francisco was a world-famous, prosperous port 15 years ago when the containerization process emerged. Cargo is loaded into long steel crates stacked like shoeboxes on the decks of ships, then lifted by huge cranes onto truckbeds and railroad flatcars.

Oakland began building a container port in 1962. San Francisco stayed mainly with the older method of handling cargo in slings or on wooden pallets.

Today, many of San Francisco's port tenants have switched to containers—and to Oakland, now the world's second-busiest container port, after New York.

Eighteen San Francisco piers are being modernized, but won't be ready before 1980. Old wooden piers stand rotting and largely empty.

"Those piers were built during the horse-and-buggy days," said Cyril Magnin, former president of the port commission. "There is no economic use for those old piers, unless you store cars in them or make some kind of a hooky-tonk business out of them. They can't be changed."

The port's annual income has shrunk from $4 million in 1965 to $2.2 million last year. The three million tons of cargo handled in San Francisco last year was less than half of Oakland's tonnage—7.75 million.

Mayor Joseph L. Alioto is seeking $8 million in federal aid for modernization and San Francisco's board of supervisors voted to take part in an investigation of the port's plight.

Sullivan insists that the port has a future.

"We're going to have a multiport complex for LASH (lighter aboard ship) cargo, roll-on roll-off, and several other kinds of cargo," he said. "We're not limiting ourselves to containerization."

He blamed some of the port's problems on budget cuts by the board of supervisors and environmentalists.

Foes of high-rise construction stopped a planned 300-foot U.S. Steel building on port land near the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge. The project would have meant income in modernize, Sullivan said.

Students Turn Pond Into Science Class

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. (CP) — Not much was known about Sanfa Maria Lake until a class of 26 students descended on the 30-acre pond with test tubes and microscopes and turned it into a practical science demonstration.

Located about 40 miles northwest of this Vancouver Island centre, the little water age-shaped body of water lies between low mountains that were logged over years ago. New growth in the area has brought 10-and 15-foot firs and hemlocks back to the shore.

Today, a great deal is known about the lake, the ecology of the area, the animals and birds who inhabit surrounding woods, thanks to the work of the Grade 9 and 10 students from Campbell River junior high school.

Led by Robert Mills and Stanley Ritchie, teachers of their environmental studies courses, staff from the British Columbia fish and wildlife branch and employees of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., they spent a week "camping out and bitin" on Santa Maria Lake.

All were there to observe the hard hats supplied by the logging company, the skeleton of a hooky-tonk — business out of them. They can't be changed." land.

They mapped the shoreline, studied the single stream which flows out of the lake for marine life and, in several overnight sets, fish nets and took samples of the material on the bottom.

Water temperatures were drawn, photographs taken, temperatures checked and possible recreational values of the lake were noted.

"In short, they learned, and were helped a great deal about the chemical, biological and physical aspects of Santa Maria Lake," said Forest Service spokesman Ray Wormald, who reported on the unique educational experiment for the government.

Each evening, they drove down to sea level from the lake's 1,000-foot elevation, over rough logging roads in the community of Kelsey Bay where they stayed in the local hotel at their own expense.

After supper, students set up microscopes.

They confirmed that the area around the lake, though still limited with scars from logging slash and studded with big stumps, is home to a fair large variety of wildlife—deer, bear, cougar, squirrel — and is a gathering-place for many birds, including Canada geese and loons.

Retiring Indian President Begins Attack on Corruption

BOMBAY (CP) — Lil's for 80-year-old Venkata Giri, who has just retired as India's president, continues to be busy.

"In fact, my real work has just started," Giri told reporters in his four-bedroom bungalow in a suburb of Bangalore, capital of the southern state of Karnataka.

From the 300-room presidential mansion in New Delhi to this drab and obscure house has been a drastic change for the veteran Indian politician. His monthly pension, including all allowances, will be less than $200.

But Giri apparently does not mind the change. "I'm now a common man and propose to take an active part in the nation's affairs," he said.

Giri proposes to start a national campaign against "all kinds of corruption and inefficiency." He told visiting MPs that "I cannot remain silent when so many sad things are happening in our nation and moral values are being undermined."

The former president said he is particularly concerned about "unprincipled" behavior by politicians, corruption in the administration and "the gulf between the rulers and the people."

Giri has announced that he will set up a network of vigilance bodies "to clean up our society and moral environment."

These bodies, manned by responsible citizens, are to focus public attention on politicians and government officials who misuse their authority, on businessmen who corrupt and are corrupted by politicians and on farmers and grain merchants who board foodgrains.

Giri spends four to six hours a day meeting with citizens to learn about their grievances.

He has toured parts of Karnataka and adjoining Tamil Nadu state to see for himself the difficulties of poor people at a time of soaring inflation and shortages of many essential commodities.

Giri said he is particularly saddened by the long lines of people before food ration shops. "With a little organization, the queues can be shortened," he said.

Saraswati Giri, the ex-president's wife, is occupying herself with the difficulties of housewives.

"Mr. Giri and his wife have become the custodians of our morals," said Narayan Rao, a retired college teacher, who has joined the ex-president's campaign.

Electricity Replacing Paper Cash

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians will move increasingly away from reliance on paper payments to electronic payments systems become technologically superior, says a commercial letter from the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

"While it is realized that the payments mechanism will probably never be cheapness or easiness," the letter says. "There are clear indications that it will become increasingly automated and it could evolve in the direction of a system where credit in the payee's account is made at the same time that the payee's account is charged."

The letter predicts that rising costs and growing delays in making paper payments will make the more convenient and cheaper alternative of electronic payments will cause people to reduce their cheque writing.

A machine-readable identification system for repetitive payments, on-line terminal at each point where payments are made and an established line of credit for all customers are the prerequisites for the electronic system.

Salaries, wages, pensions and other payments will be increasingly credited to individual accounts, recurring payments will be deducted automatically and other payments will be made through point-of-sale terminals in retail outlets, the letter says.

The speed at which the electronic system will be introduced would be determined by the public's readiness to accept new relationships and patterns of behavior.

Error in Olympic Coin

OTTAWA (CP) — A spokesman for the Olympic coin program said Tuesday that an error has been discovered in one of the Olympic coins now in circulation.

The error involves the $10 coin in the first series which pictures a world map. The wrong die was used, resulting in the year 1974 appearing on the obverse side of the coin, beside the Queen, rather than 1973.

The spokesman said the error was limited to one die and to a maximum of 8,000 to 10,000 coins of a total of two million struck.

Since the error was not immediately discovered, all the coins left the mint and have been sold throughout the world.

Peter Degraf, a local coin dealer, said he had ordered some of the mis-struck coins from someone who spotted them in Switzerland.

"I'd buy them at $50 a coin, right off the bat," he added.

Davis Hits Campaign Trail

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis, with byelections in the offing, sets out today on a two-day campaign tour.

He will visit Cornwall first, where Guy Leger, 34, is out to retain the Ontario legislature seat for the Progressive Conservatives in the Oct. 17 byelection.

Mr. Leger is being challenged by three others for the seat, left vacant by the resignation of former labor minister Fern Guindon.

Mr. Davis will be in Ottawa Thursday night for the Conservative nomination in Carleton East where Ottawa Mayor Pierre Benoit is the only candidate.

A. B. R. Lawrence, a former cabinet minister, resigned that seat. The byelection is to be held Nov. 7.

Looking for Wood Markets

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada wants easier entry for its forest products into the European Economic Community, which can be accomplished if the nine EEC members lower tariff and other trade barriers, trade minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday.

He told a visiting EEC forest products mission in Ottawa Tuesday that Canada has received some concessions for its newsprint and wood pulp products entering the EEC, but not enough.

Portugal Congratulated

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada expressed hope in the United Nations on Tuesday that the remaining minority regimes in southern Africa will follow the example of Portugal and grant independence to their peoples.

Canadian delegate Robert Elliott raised the point in the committee on colonialism in congratulating Portugal for its recent action in freeing its African colonies. Canada greeted the step with "relief and deep satisfaction" and was impressed by the speed with which the new Portuguese policy was implemented.

"In recent months, new pages have been turned in the history of decolonization—the first of chapter relating to southern Africa," he said.

"It is to be hoped that the remaining minority regimes in southern Africa, drawing upon the Portuguese example, will without delay or equivocation, enable us to proceed to the successful conclusion of that record."

Wolves Prowl Sheep Herds

EMO, Ont. (CP) — Farmers near this northwestern Ontario community are complaining about loss of livestock to packs of prowling wolves.

Gerald Bullied, one of the farmers most severely affected, says wolves killed and dragged off 29 of his sheep in a one-week period in July and forced him to sell the remainder of the flock early.

"I was losing them so fast I figured I had better get rid of the rest or I wouldn't have any left," he said.

Other farmers in this area close to the Minnesota border about 30 miles south of Emora complain of similar problems.

George Thompson, predator control officer for the Ontario ministry of natural resources in nearby Rainy River, says the absence of small game in the bush is forcing the wolves to roam closer to civilization in order to survive.

Not Worried

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday that problems with a reactor at Pickering, Ont., are unlikely to affect foreign sales of Candu reactors.

Mr. McDonald told reporters the fault in the Candu reactor generating electricity at Pickering seems to be in the manufacture of the device, not in its design.

He said three other Candu reactors owned by Ontario Hydro are working well.

The broken reactor was not leaking nuclear material.

Women's Rights Bill Reintroduced in House

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill amending eight statutes, the first of a series of changes to give men and women equal status under federal law, was reintroduced in the Commons Tuesday by Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

Originally introduced last May, the bill died on the order paper when Parliament was dissolved for the July 8 election.

Mr. Lalonde, minister responsible for women's status, said Canada Pension Plan amendments and a new Citizenship Act, removing other inequalities based on sex, also will be introduced before the end of the week.

The CPP amendments coincided with the last Parliament. The new Citizenship Act, was presented during the last Parliament and announced again in the throne speech Sept. 30.

Other measures tied in with the over-all program to improve the status of women include veterans rights amendments and Criminal Code amendments to protect victims of rape from unwarranted character attacks when they testify in court. Both are planned later in the current session of Parliament.

Besides the Criminal Code, the bill would amend the Canada Elections Act, the Immigration Act, the Public Service Employment Act, the Pension Act, the Civilian War Pensions Allowances Act, the Unemployment Insurance Act and the National Defence Act.

Technician Unaware of Emergency

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — A technician on call the night a jet crashed near here last February told an inquest into the accident Tuesday he was not informed of any emergency.

Udald Christin said he was called to fix a beacon at the airport which guides planes to their approach for landing but was never told an approaching aircraft might need the beacon that night.

"If I had known then of that plane's attempted approach landing in Frobisher Bay I would have left things the way they were as soon as I had one of the two FY beacon transmitters working," he said.

Nine persons were killed Feb. 27 when the plane, owned by Brethour Realty Services Ltd. of Oakville, Ont., crashed six miles from its destination on a flight from Keflavik, Iceland, to Frobisher Bay.

Home Construction Continues Slump

OTTAWA (CP) — Housing construction activity continued slumping in September with over-all urban starts in the first nine months down 21 per cent from the corresponding period last year, says the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC).

CMHC said Tuesday that preliminary figures show that urban housing starts reached 133,903 at the end of September, a decline from 154,140 at the same time in 1973.

Housing starts have dipped below last year's record pace which every month since May, Government and industry housing economists had predicted would be the case.

But multiple-unit housing, which includes most rental stock is down 31 percent from the same period in 1973.

Flower-loving Man Alone for 61 Years

LARDEAU, B.C. (CP)— There's no power, running water, telephone, television, or car at Teddy Evans' farm.

He has no horse, cow, dog or kitten. But he does have his flowers and that's all he ever wanted.

"I'm an Englishman—that's why I'm crazy about flowers," explained Mr. Evans, 86.

For 61 years he has lived alone on his farm in the tiny sheltered valley near the isolated Lardeau River in the West Kootenay, in southeastern B.C. A narrow gravel road links him with the nearest town, Kaslo, 35 miles south.

He has some groceries delivered twice a year but he makes or grows everything else he needs.

"All my life, I've liked to be alone," he said. "When I came here, most people thought I was crazy and maybe I was. But there are different kinds of lunatics."

He left Liverpool when his parents suggested he work in a fat factory in northern England. He found a railroad job and worked the brakes line along the Lardeau River.

That's how he came to buy his 40-acre spread with its spectacular view of the Selkirk Mountains.

"The whole place had been badly burned by a forest fire and it didn't look anything like it does now," said Mr. Evans. "But I had to stay because of the railroad job."

Today there are meadows, an orchard, flower beds, vegetable gardens, stone walks, fences and several buildings made of logs.

The only assistance he had was from his father, who died years ago at the age of 97, and a horse he no longer has.

"The soil's not too good here, but there's a little creek that brings down silt every spring," said Mr. Evans. "So I built a catch basin and in the fall when the creek dried up a bit, I hauled the silt over to the farm."

His first home was a small cabin which burned down in the 1920s. Then he built a spacious two-storey house with glassed-in porch.

He began building the house during the summer of 1929, using his horse to haul trees to the site. He moved into it during the fall of 1929 and finished the inside that winter.

The kitchen contains a cast-iron wood stove and a coal-oil lamp. Water comes from the creek via a length of plastic pipe but in winter he must melt snow. His furniture is handmade.

He began growing tulips commercially in the 1920s and continued until his retirement at the end of the Second World War. He sold his bulbs but couldn't market the flowers because the only transportation was a once-a-week train.

He got his original bulbs from Holland and added more every year. His old records, written in a perfect copperplate hand, reveal he once grew 100 varieties of tulips, 25 kinds of narcissus and all kinds of irises and crocuses.

His business peaked during the war when Dutch bulbs were unavailable. He worked alone and his acres of flowers—2,000 tulips to a row—required constant attention.

One problem was mule deer eating the tulips.

"They started on one end of the field and worked their way right across," said Mr. Evans. "In the end I had to shoot them."

Mr. Evans still tends a vegetable garden and rumors of flower beds. He has a root cellar and grows so many vegetables that he gives many away.

Cooking is not one of his talents and he was too busy with his flowers to get married.

He has friends and relatives living close by who keep an eye on him. In recent years they have cut his hay, chopped wood and re-roofed his house.

Mr. Evans said he will stay on his farm until he dies and he has no patience with people trying to buy him out. On his front gate is a sign: "This property is not for sale."

"No one bothers me any more," he said.

Man Who Helped Elect Lougheed Now Having Second Thoughts

By ALAN ARBUCKLE

CALGARY (CP) — When Art Smith, president of International Jet Air, helped Peter Lougheed get elected premier, he never expected to end up competing with the Progressive Conservative leader.

But that's the way it turned out when the Alberta government bought Pacific Western Airlines (PWA) this summer and Mr. Smith, 55, says it's enough to make him think of going back into politics.

"I happen to be an ardent free enterprises, in fact I'm beginning to wonder if I am a member of a dying breed," he said in an interview.

"I think the only thing that would bring me back into (politics) is if I could be convinced that there was an opportunity to represent private initiatives and the private sector. . . .

"If we destroy the individual or corporate initiative to do things for ourselves, we'll end up as a nation that makes a living collecting taxes from one another. I think it's that serious."

Mr. Smith served two terms as a Calgary alderman, one as an MLA, three terms in the House of Commons and was defeated in a bid for this city's mayor's chair. He also spent four years at the United Nations, two of them assigned to Dag Hammarskjold, the secretary-general.

In 1965 the junior high school graduate who never did get back to finishing his education, opened a public relations firm with a borrowed typewriter and his wife as his secretary.

Until early 1971 he was involved, among other things, in public relations, including helping the Conservatives unseat the Social Credit party in Alberta and building a forestry complex for the Malaysian government. Then he joined the Alberta conglomerate Allarco as a vice-president who got tagged with the specific duty of making Jet Air pay.

That was before Mr. Lougheed decided to buy PWA.

"I think in this last situation (Premier Lougheed) made a mistake.

"The justification for (buying PWA) was flimsy, the consequences of it were, I thought, never explored and it is contrary to all of the principles on which he campaigned.

"If there is a continuation of obsolete plain socialism developing in Alberta or in the country then I would decide to re-enter the political forum with one objective and that is too see a return to sanity.

"There is no way that Jet Air is going to compete with a government-owned airline that established itself as a Crown company and avoids federal income taxes, that has the resources of approximately $200 million or $1 billion a year and can buy any number of planes.

"I object on two counts. It totally dislocates the ordinary market place and it's contrary to the principles on which he was elected."

But a threat from the government he helped form is not Mr. Smith's only headache. There was also the federal government which has been slow to grant Jet Air routes where passenger travel is heavy and this, coupled with a record of losses, has led to a staff cut to 71 from 135, an end to scheduled routes and a decision to concentrate on Arctic charter business.

"The regulatory system in this country is so slow it is gradually strangling the opportunity for private, small companies to expand in the areas of the regional carriers. Unless the federal government changes that system there won't be any third-level carriers in this country in a couple of years because most of them are in very serious financial difficulties. . . .

"I'm not asking for any subsidy, merely the right to fly competitively.

"All the authority Jet Air has had is that I lost is to fly literally from nowhere to nowhere.

"We are not going to continue as a wide gauge buying we are going to get some routes when we are caught in between two governments, one as a competitor and the other that over-regulates us."

When Art Smith isn't flying about caring for the concerns of Jet Air, he's trying to grab a little time with his family. His has two grown sons and he and his wife adopted a baby girl five years ago.

As for his secret ambition: to write contemporary political history—there just isn't time.

That leaves Mr. with his overt ambition—making a contribution to the economic makeup of Canada.

"I suppose that my central objective . . . is to see that this country, particularly Western Canada, continues to build on those industries that are going to be in the long . . . beneficial to it because we have too few Allarcos.

"I would think that our company is unique in terms of being a multi-industry company and with Dr. (Charles) Allard (Allarco's president) I hope to prove that we can select those industries that can be beneficial to the shareholders and to the province as a whole.

"I always have been a strong federalist. I don't believe in the political separations that many people advocate because I don't think they are justified. I don't think they'll work. On the other hand I think it is nearly time for Western Canada to stop crying and develop, as it must, an economic muscle . . . and I think Allarco is making a contribution to this."

Fights Former Ally

Toronto Bank Branch Caters to Community

TORONTO (CP) — When the Royal Bank of Canada opened a new branch in the low-income Riverdale district last June, it opened on the type of service it should provide.

Riverdale is the bank's second community branch. Its counterpart in Montreal and another opening shortly in Winnipeg drew their operating guidelines from similar neighborhood discussions.

He said the bank is anxious to adapt its system to meet the needs of the community.

"It starts with experiments like this. But what we learn here will be studied, modified, tested and applied where possible throughout the Royal's network of branches.

"You get an idea of what we're trying to achieve when you consider how we turned cheque-cashing policy around. In most conventional branches the onus is almost totally on the unknown customer to give 10 good reasons why his cheque should be cashed.

"Here, we work from the assumption that the cheque will be cashed — with good faith, a smile and the same kind of minimum identification that prudence dictates in any other branch."

Housing Lacking In France

PARIS (CP) — The French have an even more urgent need for adequate housing than other countries of the European Economic Community.

In the cities, for example, thousands live in inadequate accommodations or unhealthy areas and the country holds the European record for homes constructed before 1900.

By comparison, England and West Germany have constructed 36 per cent of their housing since the turn of the century and blame percentages exist throughout Western Europe.

In Paris alone, 70,000 families are listed as "poorly housed." Of this number, about 57,000 families live in areas designated as unhealthy.

Construction starts have lagged behind Western Europe as a whole. Between 1945 and 1952, the country built 135,000 new homes a year while West Germany constructed 480,000.

There are signs the situation may be gradually improving. Since 1970, the government has taken steps to speed up the number of housing starts.

Both workers and the aged find it easier today to own property and 500,000 new dwellings were built in 1973 with 540,000 more under way.

Last year, a new housing law established a national agency to renovate 300,000 homes a year. Provisions were made to help the aged, the handicapped, new friends and unmarried mothers find adequate accommodation.

The changes, however, did little to benefit the plight of lower-income workers faced with the prospect of doing only between $200 and $250 monthly for a three-room flat in urban areas.

The housing crunch has been underscored by the dramatic exodus of Parisians into the suburbs. In 1962 for example more than 250,000 people left the city.

Although the influx into the suburbs did something to offset the demand for new homes in the cities, the number of poorly housed families has doubled since 1970.

ROB BRANCH BANKS

BOSTON (AP) — One reason bank robberies are on the increase is that many branches are located in areas where police protection may be inadequate, says James O. Newspher, special agent-in charge of the Boston FBI office. There were 92 bank holdups in the 12 months ended June 10, 1974, says Newspher, who added banks are increasingly building branches "in shopping centres and in rural areas."

Computers Help Find Stomach Ills

BOSTON (AP) — Computers may help detect abdominal ills when the work of four scientists at Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH) is completed.

David A. Chesler, Saul Aronow and Gerald M. Polucci are working on an abdominal scanner under a grant from the National Cancer Institute. Jack Wittenberg, a radiologist, is planning actual use of the device.

It will supplement but not replace traditional x-ray examination, said Dr. Paul F. New, chief of neuro-radiology at MGH.

A similar device for the brain has been used 2,500 times in the last year to diagnose brain tumors and hemorrhages at MGH. It takes x-rays of the brain and uses a computer to create images which can be studied by physicians.

The abdominal scanner will be more difficult to make because it will have to cover a larger area than the brain scanner.

In addition, the patient will have to hold his breath for 15 seconds for each x-ray slide and if internal organs move during the process the picture will be blurred.

Millhaven Director Feels Former Tensions Have Eased

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — John Dowsett, acting director of Millhaven Institution, says tension has eased in the federal penitentiary where a dispute between administration and staff erupted last spring.

The 53-year-old retired lieutenant-colonel in the Canadian Armed Forces assumed his post in July after the prison had cooled down under the temporary directorship of Arthur Trono, acting regional director of Canadian penitentiaries in Ontario.

Guards had booked off sick to protest conditions in the prison and excessive overtime. Cells were searched for weapons following assaults on guards and work and exercise programs for prisoners came to a halt.

New guard-prisoner relations are relatively tension-free, Mr. Dowsett said in an interview.

"It's not the image one would get outside — you see inmates and staff talking and laughing."

However, community groups still are barred from the prison.

To maintain the eased atmosphere, Mr. Dowsett said he spends more than an hour each day walking through the maximum security quarters, recording prisoners' complaints.

On the other hand, "I have made it perfectly clear to the inmates that they will treat guards with respect that's their due, in this institution," Mr. Dowsett said.

Swearing at a guard costs a prisoner time in isolation.

Despite the light-duty, military style of his director, Millhaven allows concessions to its 322 prisoners.

About 100 have special diets including kosher, two types of bland, vegetarian and even 1,000-calorie diets.

Prisoners bought and received permission to alter their television-watching time to catch the Canada-Russia hockey series.

But security also has been tightened at the prison, from which 14 prisoners escaped in July, 1972.

The director, whose last armed forces post was to command the school of intelligence and security at Canadian Forces Base, Borden, continues to hold his post of deputy regional director, security, with the penitentiary service.

He said prisoners are not allowed closer than 30 feet from the 14-foot chain-link fence which holds rolls of barbed wire.

Lighting, thought to be one factor which allowed prisoners to cut their way through the fence to freedom two years ago, also has been improved.

Until another four towers are built, guards survey prisoners in recreation yards from temporary shelters around the perimeter.

Prisoners coming from workshops or recreation areas are searched with metal or hand detectors. Cell and yard checks are carried out regularly.

Regular Meetings Promised

Indians Win More 'Input'

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of Canada's 300,000 registered Indians are to have regular and frequent access to a federal cabinet committee to discuss their problems.

An agreement for such consultations was reached Wednesday following a 90-minute meeting between a cabinet group led by Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan and the National Indian Brotherhood executive.

Brotherhood president George Manuel told reporters later he credited the Native People's Caravan for breaking down "the gatekeeper's role played by the civil service and giving us direct access to the cabinet."

He said it was frustration of Indian communities in not getting their grievances past the public service to the cabinet decision-making level that led the caravan group to stage a demonstration that turned violent during the opening of Parliament Sept. 30.

He said the same frustration was felt by elected Indians. The cabinet committee now understood and responded with the agreement for regular «meetings.

"It's too bad that this kind of situation has to develop before cabinet responds," Mr. Manuel said in reference to the demonstration.

"It looks like we made a breakthrough and I think we can credit to a large degree the grassroots people saying enough, enough of this bull . . . " he added.

Mr. Buchanan also referred to the frustration felt by the Indians from procedures necessary to get to the federal government.

Working together, the cabinet and the brotherhood would give more input to decisions affecting their lives, the minister said.

Said Mr. Manuel:

"To me, the cabinet said today in endorsing a formalized relationship, 'OK, you have a problem, OK we agree with the demonstrators that there are serious problems in all of the issues they raised, and that we have to build a structure upon which cabinet and your organization can sit down to discuss these problems and to find means and ways to resolve them."

Mr. Manuel said that the brotherhood has dropped earlier demands for investigations into the Sept. 30 demonstration.

Instead, he said, a three-day executive meeting he brotherhood started Wednesday would consider holding its own investigation into whether the RCMP was justified in using its riot squad for the first time since it was formed several years ago.

There was no response from caravan leaders amid reports that the original group of 200 had dwindled to less than 100.

Mr. Buchanan also acknowledged that some caravan members are seeking financial aid to go home and added the department has a responsibility in that regard to under-age Indians as well as to others.

Native People Seek UN Seat

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Latin American and Canadian Indian leaders met Wednesday to compare experiences in integrating into the societies of their countries and to demand a Latin American Indian seat in the United Nations.

The group of 30 leaders includes representatives of the Chulupi and Guarani tribes of Paraguay, Kolla and Calchaqui of Argentina, Parini of Brazil, Aymara of Bolivia and others from Ecuador and Colombia.

George Manuel, president of the National Brotherhood of Canadian Indians, and Rev. Jose Chipenda of the World Council of Churches are attending the five-day meeting that started Wednesday.

Conciliation Fails, Pilot Strike Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — A strike by 1,200 Air Canada pilots was a possibility Wednesday after release of a conciliation report here, but a company spokesman said that he was hopeful a settlement can be reached within a few days.

Tories Let Grain Bill Go Through

OTTAWA (CP) — Back-to-work legislation to end the six-week Vancouver longshoremen's strike received final approval in the Commons today.

Only the Conservatives have opposed the legislation, which would end the strike but also impose a settlement based on recommendations of a conciliation report prepared by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria.

After Commons approval, the legislation would have to go to the Senate and then most receive royal assent. It becomes law the day after assent is given.

Henry Kanes, secretary-treasurer of the 550-member Grain Workers' Union, said Wednesday the workers would return to their jobs and could have export grain moving again by Tuesday if the legislation is passed without delay.

The strike against five grain elevators has virtually halted the flow of grain out of Vancouver and brought complaints from Chinese and Japanese buyers.

The bill was approved by the Commons labor committee after four hours of discussion Wednesday night. The Conservatives criticized the government for not allowing witnesses other than Mr. Munro and department officials to give their views on events during the 19 months of bargaining.

Stormont Voters 'Reminded' of Grants

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Stormont voters are being urged by a former cabinet minister to elect a Progressive Conservative member in the Oct. 17 byelection to ensure that government grants continue to flow into the riding.

"I'm not threatening anyone," Fernand Guindon, former Ontario labor minister, told Progressive Conservative party workers here Wednesday.

But he said Premier William Davis and members of the cabinet "are only human" and a decision to endorse an Progressive Conservative might weigh on their considerations.

"If we miss the boat on the 17th, we'll stand to lose—I know that for a fact," Mr. Guindon said.

Mr. Guindon resigned his provincial seat in order to contest the riding in the July federal election, and lost that contest to Cornwall Mayor Ed Lumley.

However, he has been prominent in campaigning for Guy Legge, a Cornwall businessman, who is the Progressive Conservative nominee in the Oct. 17 byelection.

The Liberal standardbearer is Paul Rocheleau, a local lawyer, and history teacher George Samis is running for the NDP.

Wednesday, both Opposition Leader Robert Nixon and Mr. Davis campaigned in the riding on behalf of their candidates.

30 Provincial Buildings Coming Unglued

TORONTO (CP) — At least 30 Ontario buildings, including some schools, churches and arenas, are in danger of collapsing because of faulty glue bond in wood beams and columns, the provincial ministry of consumer and commercial relations announced Wednesday.

The technical standards division of the ministry said in a news release that all owners of the buildings have been notified that glue-laminated parts produced by Chiasa Forest Ltd. of British Columbia between 1967 and 1971 show signs of deterioration under high or fluctuating humidity.

The humidity problem was first discovered in some glue bond in wood beams and columns, the provincial ministry of consumer and commercial relations announced Wednesday.

The news release said other parts are without the problem.

Rev. J. A. Goldsmith, pastor of Pineland Presbyterian Church, Burlington, one of three churches affected, said he got a letter and a telephone call from the ministry this week.

He said he was told an inspector would visit him in a month or six weeks.

Among the remaining buildings affected are 20 schools, mostly in rural areas, one church in Hamilton and another in Kitchener, and possibly several arenas or lodges, including the Rhe Mountain Resort near Collingwood.

Harold Yoneyama, executive director of the technical standards division, said the ministry has appointed the Toronto consulting firm of Morrison, Hershfield, Bruce Wilson and Leader Edward Heath kept plugging at the undecided voters, maintaining there were enough Britons of this orientation to swing the result of today's balloting into the Conservative column.

Mr. Wilson called for a general election to settle whether Britain will stay the socialism of the Labor party can pull Britain out of its deep economic troubles or whether they stand by Heath's conservatism.

Pennies Split Party

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of Republican candidates in next month's United States elections have dissociated themselves from the anti-inflation surtax that President Ford contends would cost taxpayers only a few cents a day.

Criticism from Republican Senate and governorship candidates came as the senior Republican on the House of Representatives ways and means committee, Herman Schneebeli (Rep. Pa.), said he believes the fate of Ford's five-per-cent surtax proposal "rests on the American public and what they tell us when we go home."

Ford, who has conceded that many thought the tax proposal "politically unwise" just four weeks before the Nov. 5 elections, tried—a new approach in defending it Wednesday at his news conference in the White House Rose Garden.

A family of four with $20,000 gross income would pay $42, or 12 cents a day, while a family with $16,000 income would pay only $3—or less than one cent a day, Ford said.

And he said that only 28 per cent of U.S. taxpayers would pay any additional tax.

MANILA (AP) — Eighteen workers were killed today when their scaffolding broke and they plunged 18 floors to the ground at a bank under construction in this Philippines capital, officials said.

Joan Kennedy Impaired

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Joan Kennedy, the wife of Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem., Mass.), has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after her convertible crashed into the back of an auto stopped for a street light.

Police Patrol Boston

BOSTON (AP) — A force of 450 Massachusetts state and Metropolitan policemen patrolled school yards and street corners in South Boston today to help quell racial violence and enforce court-ordered busing of school children. Busloads of black children quietly entered schools in the neighborhood.

Pollsters Give Edge to Labor

LONDON (CP) — Britons voted today in their second general election in seven months, attempting to give a new sense of direction to a country in crisis.

Clusters of voters gathered at the polling stations in the sunny Midlands, in the harsh east in Scotland, but rain and fog brought a dismal pall to the south.

A rush-hour bomb hoax in Belfast delayed the voting there.

If the forecasts of all the major pollsters are to be believed, the governing Labor party was narrowly favorite to be returned to power. But the polls have been dead wrong in the past.

This time, pollsters conceded that late shifts by undecided voters and apathy might result in an upset.

Members of Prime Minister Harold Wilson's minority government, which ousted the Conservatives from power last February, urged supporters to make them they voted.

Though flattered by the predictions of pollsters picking Labor to win by a wide majority, Home Secretary Roy Jenkins cautioned on the eve of the election:

"It's not going to be quite as easy as all doctors as that."

Underlining Labor's great fear of a lost over-all vote, Jenkins said: "I think, frankly, there are going to be difficulties about getting a turnout as big as the 79-per-cent poll at the last general election . . . "

More than 40 million Britons were eligible to vote. Balloting began at 7 a.m. EDT (1 a.m. EDT), with the polls closing 15 hours later. First results were not expected until 7 p.m. EDT.

Prime Minister Wilson said he believed Labor to be "on the eve of a great victory."

As Wilson and his colleagues sought to prevent Labor complacency, Conservative Leader Edward Heath kept plugging at the undecided voters, maintaining there were enough Britons of this orientation to swing the result of today's balloting into the Conservative column.

Mr. Wilson called for a general election to settle whether Britain will stay the socialism of the Labor party can pull Britain out of its deep economic troubles or whether they stand by Heath's conservatism.

Fall Harvest

The fall's the time of year when nature gives us a bountiful harvest. There's apples, pears, grapes, and pumpkins just waiting to be carved into Jack-o'-Lanterns. Eight-month-old Karen Walton of Belleville sits pretty with a smiling pumpkin and a basket of grapes at her feet in front of a grocery store in Rosamore. Making up the pumpkin's face are squash, radishes, red peppers and watermelon rinds. In the poultry yard, two-year-old Amy Airhart calls over some ducklings. Late starters, these little ones won't be ready for Thanksgiving. Christmas maybe ?

WHAT IS HISTOPLASMOSIS?

It is a fungus infection of the lungs contracted by breathing contaminated dust. It is more likely to be found in rural areas, than in cities this fungus affects animals, also. It tends to be a comparatively mild, but chronic sickness. Most cases offer no serious problem.

No danger is, that it can be confused with tuberculosis and some people hesitate if are afraid to go to a physician fearing a tuberculosis diagnosis. Never have any fear when visiting a physician. The least he can do is to help you live longer and more comfortably.

Budget Presented To Executive

FRANKFORD — The Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority projected budget for 1975 has hit the $300,000 mark in what an authority spokesman today called a "drastic" increase over the $223,000 outlay in 1974.

The proposed budget, in the works for the last two months, came under initial review during an LTRCA executive committee meeting in Frankford Wednesday.

The spokesman said the increase can be blamed on three factors.

Authority staff has increased from two in mid-1974 to five next year. Purchase of various equipment has also added to costs.

The authority now is in its development stage, and with the addition of both personnel and equipment, will intensify work on its various conservation areas.

Major property acquisitions of previous years have ended, except for the continued additions of land along the Trent River in Trenton.

Only a few properties must be bought before the authority has the land needed for Trenton's green belt project.

However, authority members, 17 area municipalities will not feel a dramatic increase in their levies, said the spokesman. A large portion of projected expenditures are covered by provincial grants.

It is likely the $300,000 budget will be decreased upon review by ministry of natural resources staff in Kingston next month.

Although final budget cuts will not be known until January, 1975, an indication of the province's position will be come apparent in November, the spokesman said.

Squadron Marks 30th Birthday

By AL RABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The Flying Elephant at CFB Trenton marked without ceremony Wednesday its 30th anniversary since its formation in India during the Second World War.

Better known as 436 Tusker Squadron, it was authorized to form in September 1944 but its first personnel finally gathered on Oct. 1 — 30 years ago Wednesday at Gaujal, a fighter base in the Punjab of India near the Kashmir border.

Except for a seven year period between 1946 and 1953, the squadron has been active in the heavy transport and tactical airlift capacity.

Originally, it was created, with its sister squadron, 435 "Chinthe", now in Edmonton, to supply troops in Burma from bases in India and Pakistan. During its short tour of duty in the war, often in weather marked by days of almost endless the squadron built up 32,00 flying hours and logged four million air miles carrying supplies and troops.

Since then, its role has expanded almost as many times as it has moved. It was finally settling at CFB Trenton in 1971.

After the Second World War it was stationed in Down Ampney in Gloucestershire, England. Disbanded and then reactivated in 1953, it moved to Dorval, Quebec.

To fulfill its role as Canada's mover of goods in NATO and United Nations operations, the squadron moved from the Dakota aircraft to the C-119 Boxcar. The C-130E Hercules replaced Boxcar aircraft a year after the squadron moved to CFB Upland near Ottawa from Trenton's first regular service flying squadron.

Almost immediately, its role changed from a domestic to an international carrier. 436 Squadron aircraft have acted as United Nations peacekeeping workhorses, flying to Cyprus, the Middle East, Berlin and Germany have gone to disaster victims from Manila to Biafra. Regular supply flights are also made weekly to bases in the Canadian north.

The major event of the squadron's history will occur in 1976 when its colors will be presented. Likely by a member of the British royal family. The year will mark 35 odd years of service by the squadron.

Trailer Overturns

TRENTON — No one was injured Wednesday when the trailer of a tandem dump truck rolled over into a ditch while pulling an eastbound vehicle on Highway 2, six miles west of here.

Brighton provincial police said the truck, driven by William Cansdinan, 51, of Madoc, was in the process of passing another vehicle, signalling a left hand turn, when the accident occurred.

Driver of the second vehicle was Joseph Vrooman, 37, of Colborne. Police report minimal damage to the Vrooman vehicle.

Charges are pending.

Fire Guts Residence

STIRLING — A 19-year-old boy is credited with saving his sleeping Ken Donly family early today after fire broke out in the kitchen of their Front St. home here and spread upstairs into the bedrooms.

Awakened by smoke at 2 a.m., Jeff Donly, of 122 Front St., roused his parents and two sisters.

Stirling Fire Chief Graham Monck said the fire started in a kitchen electrical appliance. Once begun, it spread to the second-storey wall between the bedrooms of Jeff and his sister, Miss Carol Donly.

Firemen were forced to cut holes in the roof to fight the blaze.

Chief Monck said Mr. Donly was found fighting the blaze when firemen arrived. He estimated damage to the house, owned by Valmay Richardson of Hastings Manor, at $5,000.

The Cockpit Kid

It's not an easy job flying a 436 Squadron Hercules aircraft, but 20-year-old Pauline Gagnon seems to have the situation well in hand.

Actually, the daughter of WO Robert Gagnon was in the cockpit of a Hercules flight stimulator during 436 Squadron family day festivities this weekend. The squadron marked its 30th anniversary in Trenton Wednesday.

Plagued by Malaria, World Traveller Back

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

John Svoboda, 36, formerly of Shilton and temporarily living in Prince Edward County, came close to death three times while malaria while teaching in Nigeria before deciding to leave on to visit Asia, where hepatitis threatened his life.

Mr. Svoboda attended Stirling-Rawdon district high school, Albert College, and spent two years in France earning his university diploma. He then came to Carleton University in Ottawa where we was a top student, winning scholarships and graduating with an Honor BA in French and Linguistics.

In 1971, he signed a contract with the Nigerian government to teach and went to Katsina Ala on the former Biafra border, arriving immediately after the war there ended.

The village was spread on two sides of a river, its prime existence being a ferry crossing. The 1,000 inhabitants lived in small family compounds surrounded by walls of sticks.

Mr. Svoboda spent four months here. During the malaria did not work. He was in an endemic area where 65 per cent of the population had the disease constantly.

"When you have malaria you feel like you are going insane," Mr. Svoboda says. "You are fully conscious while having delirium. The first two days you think you are dying, and the third day you know you are dead, and then pass out."

Malaria beset the teacher three times; twice being found lying in a roadside ditch. At this time he decided to leave Nigeria, desiring to discover a purpose in life before he died. Malaria can recur up to six years after having had it, so he fears the threat another three years.

Mr. Svoboda flew to Casablanca, Morocco, by Christmas, 1971, spending four months recuperating on the Moroccan seashore.

There were so clothing stores as on one means of income, Mr. Svoboda became a tailor, moving right in with his clients, making their clothes in exchange for food, etc.

In April the traveller went to France and in June bicycled to Venice, catching the train to Turkey and Iran. A bus took him to Afghanistan where he stayed a month.

The Canadian-born adventurer crossed northern Pakistan, arriving in India in late August. The next five months were spent studying under a spiritual sage in Amritsar, a holy Sikh city.

The Pakistan-Indian war was just over when Mr. Svoboda went to Kashmir, living aboard a houseboat on a mountain lake.

After a time he returned to India, residing in a Hindu monastery at Rishikesh.

The holiest of all Hindu cities, Benares, was his next stopping point, where, strangely, Mr. Svoboda lived with a Burmese Buddhist priest.

Taking vows, the Quinte area man spent 10 days in intense meditation, not talking, sitting on the floor with legs crossed for 14 hours a day. He lived on fruit, cooked vegetables and unleavened bread.

In December, 1972, Mr. Svoboda moved to Goa for warmer quarters, living in a fisherman's hut on the ocean's edge.

March of 1973 found him at Katmandu, Nepal, where he contracted hepatitis. The temperature was 120 degrees in India, so he moved to cooler Kashmir again to recover.

By February, 1974, he was in Morocco again.

He returned to Canada this spring and spent the summer in a Hastings County bushland hunting camp. Once weekly, food was brought in to him.

Now that the highly educated world traveller has returned after studying other cultures and religions, contemplated all summer and finally emerged from the bush, what does he think and plan to do?

Mr. Svoboda says that by the time he is middle aged "our civilization will be past its decline . . . dead. The theatre of history moved west, but it will return to the east. There are many uniquely western things worth saving . . . whatever you feel is worth saving in this civilization is a state of decline."

He says he will probably be moving on soon, perhaps to Vancouver which has a large Chinese community. There, he would like to teach French in exchange for being taught Chinese.

"But I leave life open. I don't want to live for a career, but live for life," the honors graduate says.

Milford Potter Opens New Village Boutique

MILFORD — The Village Pottery, a country boutique, will open this week in a century-old Milford store.

Proprietress Anne James who studied pottery making at The School of the Art Institute in Chicago, describes her work as self-expression.

"I enjoy clay very much. For me, it is a way of expressing the way I feel about life in general," says the young artist.

Mrs. James came to Prince Edward County regularly for summer vacation before settling here with her family permanently more than two years ago. It was during one of these summer visits she met Prince Edward potter Joanne Carnahan and became interested in pottery making. She studied this craft for two years and now specializes in creating functional ware. The Village Pottery is the showcase for her work.

Student-turned-teacher, Mrs. James this fall is instructing a pottery-making class. Last winter she taught her craft at Benson Park Hall in Picton through the Prince Edward Arts and Craft Association.

Mrs. James' Milford village home includes an attached store dating back for a century as a Main St. landmark. The room housing her kiln was once a tavern, the oldest ever.

On one occasion, when several of the tavern patrons were inebriated the floor reportedly collapsed beneath them.

The tavern in later years became a dry good store, a fish packing plant and also served as a general supply store.

Today as The Village Pottery, the country shop recreates the simplicity of another era.

In addition to Mrs. James' pottery, woven wall hangings by Deborah Hollett of Demorestville are offered for sale. Miss Hollett also will bake bread for sale in the store.

A gingham apron and crocheted shawl made by Colin Morris fill another corner of the boutique. She will also display attractive skirts made from recycled blue jeans.

Mrs. James, who has established her work at Prince Edward County fair and Milford fair remarks she misses the creative stimulus of school.

"There are many other people in the county doing highly creative things," she adds.

The potter, whose shop will open this Friday, does not plan to advertise store hours. Since shop and home are attached she expects to welcome visitors on a "drop in anytime" basis and says she will probably be at work at her potter's wheel.

Mrs. James says she and her suppliers will price goods reasonably in hope shoppers will buy these hand-crafted items as Christmas gifts.

Everything Set

Pots are a staple item for the Country Boutique, says proprietoress Anne James. The shop, located in Milford will open for business Friday. Mrs. James is an active potter and will be selling some of her wares in the new shop.

Students Walk for Mentally Retarded

PICTON — Prince Edward Youth for the Mentally Retarded (PEYMR) this Saturday will hold its seventh annual walk-a-thon to raise funds for the Prince Edward Association for the Mentally Retarded.

The walk will begin at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute at 9 a.m., and it is hoped more than 100 persons will participate.

Native Rights

Virtually alone among newspapers in this country during the federal election campaign, The Intelligencer suggested there were other issues besides inflation to which government and people should be directing their attention.

Native rights for instance.

This newspaper persistently questioned the contemporary wisdom that Canadians are a "fortunate" people, while ignoring the manifest problems of the Indian and Eskimo people.

We cited conditions in isolated places like McDougallville, a native ghetto on the fringe of Red Lake in Northwestern Ontario, and the upsurge in the incidence of diphtheria, pneumonia, Indian and Metis in Alberta due to poor sanitation and housing.

But now that the Indians are openly and militantly drawing attention to such problems, the Marxist-Leninist crowd are being blamed.

Blamed for the violence on Parliament Hill at least. But this is no more than a red herring, for Communist agitation or not the wonder is that trouble did not erupt long ago. The Indians have been put down, if not ignored, for so long that it was only a matter of time before unrest fired into direct action.

All this while Ottawa along with the Canadian International Development Corporation and the World Council of Churches hailed themselves with moral and material aid to "liberation" groups in Africa, and with gratuitous criticism of racial policies in South Africa.

Now Prime Minister Trudeau and Anglican Primate Dr. Scott are telling the Indians they should not resort to violence. Maybe not, but is it surprising if they do?

Health Checks

The rise in the number of diphtheria cases, mentioned above, is due in part to increased vigilance by health authorities.

"We bring these higher rates of cases upon ourselves, by going out looking for them," Dr. Bill Watt of the Alberta health department has been quoted as saying.

By the same token, he admits, the disease may be more widespread than health statistics indicate. As it is, figures tabled in the Commons before this July 1 election showed diphtheria cases in Canada more than doubled between 1972 and 1973 — from 68 to 169. More than half of these were in northern Alberta.

Health authorities attribute it to the squalid, overcrowded living conditions of the native people.

It is compelling to think about — and more to the point, it should lead to appropriate remedial action by the authorities.

The Time is Now

Just over a decade ago a young Mohawk fashion model called Willi'Theta Horn went to the Montreal Gazette soliciting public interest in the needs of her people. She was hoping to obtain scholarships and jobs to help Indians.

Miss Horn is not heard from much these days, but practically alone throughout those years she pressed the case of Indian rights, from her home in Caughnawaga to Belleville to Buckingham Palace and elsewhere.

There were audiences aplenty. Miss Horn was nice to look at, was articulate, charming, and not infrequently, dramatic. But politically speaking, she was before her time; it anyone retained anything of her message, no action resulted.

Ten years later, time is running out. We can no longer afford to stand aside and ignore the native people.

Priorities

We noted recently the poor response to a survey of city councillors on their priorities for Belleville for the next few years.

Alderman Joe Cox was one respondent, while alderman Ben Corke's reply was misinterpreted as a letter to the editor.

And then there were none.

A Loss in Riding of Stormont Could Bode Ill for Conservatives

By DON O'HEARN
Green's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

CORNWALL, Ont.—There's a byelection here in Stormont Oct. 17 which could be one of the most significant we have had.

Not particularly, as some would say, because it will be test of the Davis government and its record.

The opposition that byelection are tests of the standing of governments generally is one that the writer has never bought.

Those invariably byelections are local fights centring on personalities and with the issues, if any, centring on local conditions.

And this particularly applies here in Stormont.

For it has been rather unlikely a non-partisan riding in the sense that no party dominates it.

In the nine provincial elections since 1934 the Conservatives have taken the seat five times and the Liberals four.

Federally it has been predominantly Liberal, but like several other ridings in the province there is a large share of voters who go Liberal federally but Conservative provincially.

And on the voting record it seems evident that no party candidate is the unbeatable candidates is most important.

The real significance of the byelection is on the public relations aspect it will have on the stature of the three parties.

The Davis government, which has been under a pressure by way of criticism and lost two byelections to the Liberals last year—the only two it has had to fight—rather desperately needs a win. A defeat would tend to class it as a loser, and also would have an adverse impact on the Carleton East byelection which is scheduled for next month.

The NDP could also very much use a win.

In 1971 it came into the house just one seat behind the Liberals as the official opposition, with 29 members to 30.

But last year's Liberal byelection wins widened the gap to 22 to 19 and this together with the apparent dropping of in NDP support has the party at a low spot.

Another defeat would be serious, particularly as the Liberals have been given a boost taking the seat here this time.

The byelection is probably at least significance to the Liberals of the three parties. It doesn't need a win quite as desperately as do the other two.

But that doesn't mean it isn't important to the Grits.

They have had momentum since they won last year. And a further win here would accentuate this.

A contrary side to the importance of this vote is that those who appreciate it least are probably the people of Stormont.

They do not seem at all excited, or even concerned, about their byelection.

This may change before voting day. But at this point it would seem that what could be quite a fateful decision may actually be settled quite casually.

Unable to Cope with Terrorism Argentina Faces Growing Chaos

By JOHN D. HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

When does an urban guerrilla movement become a civil war? In Argentina where a five year old three way tough urban guerrilla outfits have kidnapped and killed 100 leading Argentine and foreign executives and military officers, the government has officially forbidden press speculation that the country is in a state of siege.

The constant kidnappings were accentuated late last month by the apparently accidental death of retired Chilean army chief of Staff General Carlos Prats and his wife in a Buenos Aires suburb and the subsequent assassination of Dr. Jorge Prandizi, brother of the president of Argentina in the late 1950s.

In the last few years executives of U.S. and European companies have been kidnapped with as much as $10 million demanded over in ransoms for those who survived. Several have been savagely murdered or have been hidden.

And now the nation of guerrilla movements of the Montoro and People's National Liberation Army is concentrating on rich and prominent Argentine executives beginning with a member of the most-packing-house family with the most wealthiest industrial families in Argentina.

All this has been going on in the crying post-Peron months in the widow in power. Ben has the support of the army, most of the trade union movement and this troubled republic and many of a thoroughly sorry middle class who normally were opposed to the labor-supporting Peronistas.

Why this growing and very tough urban guerrilla movement in a country once considered like Canada as a rich, prosperous and political stable nation at the other end of the hemisphere with a bright future?

There are believe it or not, no simple answers. Urban guerrilla terrorism is a phenomenon of our times which has arisen for common political, social and economic reasons.

In Argentina part of the cause was their association with an unpopular but once beloved Peron's overthrow in 1955 and return in 1973, moreover moving increasingly to the left.

After the long period of Peron and during his brief presidency in 1973-74, he turned sharply from them, ordered the army and police to control them, and encouraged them to the foreign companies he himself once wooed out of the country.

Another reason is undoubtedly the growing social unrest in Argentina, accentuated by the economics of Peronism itself since 1955 and the failure of successive civilian and military governments to find a formula for economic stability.

So a way though tottering on the brink of civil strife, Argentina has not technically reached that stage. But the business community has refused to take up the slack in the capital way against guerrillas which will mean that ten terrorists hope will take over.

That would mean Argentines fighting Argentines with a complete breakdown in the political order, the disastrous results of which are hard to imagine.

Argentina, plagued with inflation, a government unable to control the social classes set against each other, is slowly but surely going the way of Chile and neighboring Uruguay where the military when governing had become the most effective anywhere.

Erosion of Capital and of Stocks Twin Problems for the Government

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

For the first time in, the two years, Canada this month has a budget that is working. It works. That should be cause for optimism. Three budgets in two years have seen the Canadian economy slip into its deepest trouble of the postwar era, if not the post-Depression period.

Remember? That has come to a stop. Prices are rising at the fastest pace in modern times. There seems to be a mood of growing concern about the financial system, a psychological shift away from the old, prudent habits of saving and investment, a new craze to switch into much modest stores of value as gold and real estate.

What, if anything, do Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his majority Liberals plan to do about the economy now?

To judge by the recent Throne Speech, the document that establishes the outline of the parliamentary program, they have no more than the same as they have been doing all along—call all labor and sectors to exercise restraint (a request that suggests labor, for one, has always rejected), resolving vaguely to restrain government spending, and to comfort in the fact that our economy is not as sick as others are, promising to hold talks with outside experts on means of protecting pensioners and others against inflation.

It almost sounds as if the government, sometime earlier this year, had made the shocking discovery of inflation (just as Richard Nixon "discovered" the Watergate affair after it was the crime), decided it was a bad thing, resolved to turn its attention to it any time now.

An extreme view of this is that the prime minister knew about inflation as long ago as 1969, when he had some decisive steps that did slow down the boom of the time for a time.

But since then, he seems to have had a lot of bad luck in terms of dealing with inflation. After all, inflation automatically brings in more tax revenues.

As a lawyer, coming originally from the socialist side of the political spectrum, Mr. Trudeau seems to have been unwilling to recognize the role of capital—that is, of people's savings, put at risk—in fostering Canada's recent prosperity. It is making new jobs, is improving real incomes and in helping to create a standard of living that is the envy of other people everywhere.

"Capital" and "capitalist" have almost become dirty words, and "investment" may soon be another.

Under the twin pressures of inflation on the one hand, and ill conceived anti-business legislation on the other the capital market has been withering away.

Only the largest and most successful corporations can borrow at long-term today—small, new or second-tier companies have no hope of raising a new issue, no matter how high the interest rate.

Stock prices have fallen to their lowest levels since mid-1962 (although the drop is much more severe than that, when adjustments for the fall in decline in the dollar's worth during the past 12 years). Not a single major common-stock issue has been offered in Canada this year.

Those relatively few investors who are still active in the market will not risk their capital in new issues or shares, except for buy listed shares of successful, long-established companies or something like five or five times current per-share earnings.

What will it take to induce them to take the risk of capital out of non-productive gold and silver bars, and put it back into ventures that could help the economy to grow again?

The answer, probably is the prospect of a reward commensurate with the risk.

That means at net rate of return, after taxes, that (a) offers the year to-year chance of the value of the dollar, and (b) offers a substantial extra in the way of a true return on capital.

Right now, inflation is not an exceptionally astute or lucky investor can manage that. The Canada Savings Bond investing in typical blue-chip securities, will suffer a loss in purchasing power equal to about half the inflation rate.

Canada's great post-war prosperity was, fuelled by investment capital that was not positively taxed. Investors risked their savings. Sometimes they lost, sometimes they gained. The risk was all theirs.

The government's 1971 Tax Reform Act changed all that. Gains on invested capital were to be taxed as income, despite the essential difference between risk-taking and assured employment.

Canada will need $425-billion in new capital between 1974 and 1985, according to a projection recently published by the Conference Board in Canada. This represents a substantially higher proportion of the National Income than has been the norm in recent years.

Much of that vast amount is slated for heavily needed energy projects. Almost one-fifth of it is required for new housing.

If there is to be any hope that these and other vital capital-by means other than printing new money, that is—the federal government must:

—Implement its Throne Speech promise to restrain its own spending, and thus become less of a competitor with industry for the scarce supplies of capital in the market.

—Encourage the creation of capital gains, one of the biggest single factors in the stimulation of capital markets, and at least provide exemptions to ensure that the capital is invested in productive Canadian enterprises.

—Encourage a climate towards foreign investment, which is absolutely essential to the growth of the economy over the next decade.

—Show more sensitivity towards the business sector, which has suffered by a plethora of recent and pending anti-business measures which is being badgered by administrators who construe any business activity in the least as possible light.

Pierre Trudeau and his cabinet colleagues seem to find pleasure in the role of leader of the proud and productive sectors of our society. That is a pleasure that will have to be replaced with a spirit of co-operation if society is to secure still more serious economic ills.

PM Captive of the 'Liberal Left' Says Veteran MP Gerald Baldwin

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa - Two years ago, when Conservative House Leader, veteran MP Gerald "Ged" Baldwin of Peace River warned that Prime Minister Trudeau and what he calls the Liberal "Left" were deliberately trying to destroy the middle class, he was laughed off the floor and jeered off as an alarmist.

But with inflation running wild, unemployment and heading, according to the highly-respected Conference Board of Canada, to 14 percent next year, he finds that many of his colleagues refused to take him seriously then are listening to him now.

And what he has to say is even more alarming.

This veteran of 16 years in Parliament sees Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau as the architect of the mark of modernism—he wore in his "humble" minority government, the undisputed political leaders of what the Alberta MP calls "Liberal Left" and "Left" in control of the party and the government.

Mr. Baldwin is accusing this group of working deliberately for the collapse of "Canadian society as we know it", with the purpose of "pushing Canada into a strange new era of, organized federal government socialism."

Ged Baldwin can't be called a knee jerking Conservative reactionary, however, but he does see himself as the captive, willing or unwilling, of the Liberal Left, and able now only to appease it.

"This government collapses under the pressure of every outrageous wage demands are made," he says.

Mr. Baldwin, under the screams of the increasing thousands of middle class people who are screaming the taxpayers."

He is not in sympathy with the pranksters, persuading the voters that a "middle class" exists, who is bribes of the taxpayers' dollars are two different and unrelated kinds of people.

"And it entrenches the power and further the faith of the Liberal Left deliberately pumping the middle class inflation to increase the pressure on, and bring the collapse of middle Canada."

The middle class Mr. Baldwin defines as the industrious, solid citizens who "pay their way, work hard and live by its principles. It is the backbone."

"It used to be, well, let's call it freedom of choice," he remarks. "Now it's frightened. What frightened it? taxation which the Trudeau inflation drains away." Spends pretty grim, so what to do?

"People feel helpless," says Mr. Baldwin. "The only thing left is to alert themselves to the peril and bring irresistible pressure of Trudeau.

He and others suspect that if people become desperate enough in this parlous state they will look to John Turner for leadership."

Tree Felling Program Criticized

Editor
The Intelligencer:

In an old city such as Belleville graced with beautiful old trees, it is distressing to see these trees removed in such a cavalier manner. Many of us believe that the charm and beauty of Belleville lies in its tree-lined boulevards. Let us not be desire to emulate our major cities, cursed with concrete, and barren suburbs.

Recently we watched the fallen red shark being placed on numerous trees, some of which appear perfectly healthy. Often the workmen themselves have no idea why particular tree is being removed, or matter sometimes only a few small branches that fall.off in a high wind.

We would particularly like to ask our council the following questions:

(a) Is the person who decides which trees have to be removed qualified to do so?

(b) Why does the responsibility for our trees lie with the Engineer's Department and not the Park's Board?

Engineers are fine men but tend to think in straight lines.

(c) Why are the trees not pruned so that dead branches can be removed?

(d) Why were a dozen or more silver maples in prime condition on Victoria Avenue (Victoria Avenue (It would seem that $240,000. has been spent for just a few yards of sidewalk and a new sewer.)

We would not waste any of Belleville's most beautiful assets in this profligate manner. Is this council concerned?

Gravel Bug

Editor
The Intelligencer:

I feel it's about time a law was enforced to protect the public from gravel trucks.

These trucks cause a lot of damage to cars from their gravel flying all over the highways. With the damage flying around does to automobiles, just imagine what it could do'to a person walking along the highway.

I feel a law should be enforced stating that a gravel truck should have its cargo secured with a tarp or other material, of great strength to prevent the problem of flying gravel.

Inquest Delayed

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Toronto lawyer Paul Copeland succeeded Wednesday in having an inquest into the death of a Millhaven penitentiary prisoner until at least Oct. 30.

In the interim, he said he will try to have orders made to let six other prisoners at Millhaven have their lawsuits presented.

The prisoner, Kenneth Nalon, 45, died Aug. 18 in his cell. At the time, prison officials said his death was an apparent suicide.

Prisoners at the penitentiary have asked Mr. Copeland to have their views at what conditions could possibly have turned Nalon to suicide presented to the inquest.

Nalon was serving the second year of a life sentence for murder.

Pick Limits

TORONTO (CP) — Transportation Minister John Rhodes said Wednesday the province may impose selective reductions in highway speed limits in some areas.

However, he stressed that the government is not considering a general blanket reduction such as the one announced in British Columbia."

Mr. Rhodes said statistics on highway speed reduction in the U.S. do not show conclusively that lower speeds are directly related to fewer road deaths.

Heads Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — Peel County Judge Barry Shapiro will conduct a public inquiry into allegations of guard brutality at Toronto's Don Jail, it was announced Wednesday.

Richard Potter, minister of correctional services, said an order-in-council has been issued to start the inquiry.

Dr. Potter said after a cabinet meeting the scope of the hearings will include working conditions of staff at the jail and the recruiting and training of guards.

Bodies Found

KINCARDINE, Ont. (CP) — The bodies of two Cambridge, Ont., men, missing since Tuesday night when their 17-foot boat capsized in Lake Huron north of here, were found Wednesday.

Police said the bodies of Patrick Dowdy, 36, and Laurence Georges Beal, 39, were recovered, but William Barnwell, 21, of Chatham, another member of the fishing party, was still missing.

A fourth man, Norman Joseph MacLeod, 36, of London, Ont., is in satisfactory condition in hospital in this community about 45 miles southwest of Owen Sound suffering from shock after a 2½-hour swim to shore.

Bank Cuts

DETROIT (AP) — The Michigan National Bank of Detroit will close all savings accounts with balances under $20 starting next week because of rising handling costs, bank officials said.

"Close to a quarter" of the bank's saving account holders now have less than $20 on deposit, said Michigan National President George Pierson.

He said the bank can no longer afford to serve those small customers.

"What has happened is that we're kind of a victim of inflation. We find people are using savings accounts as checking accounts . . . going in and out of the bank for a $10 transaction," said Pierson.

Strike Hurt

MONTREAL (CP) — Although sales should not be lost, a strike that halted Canadian shipping on the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence seaway for two months could cause foreign customers to lose confidence in Canada's labor situation, Nick Bedrawy, Montreal port manager, said Wednesday.

Referring especially to grain shipments, Mr. Bedrawy said customers will honor their contracts with Canada "but will question the stability of labor in this country."

The strike by marine and dock officers, which ended last week, resulted in low grain stockpiles in Montreal elevators.

Smokers Have Deficiency Of Vitamin C in Blood

OTTAWA (CP) — Smokers have about 20 per cent less vitamin C in their blood than nonsmokers.

This recent discovery was made from data gathered during a Nutrition Canada survey of the nutritional health of more than 20,000 people.

The findings, released here, also were reported Wednesday at a conference on vitamin C at the New York Academy of Sciences by Dr. Omer Pelletier of the federal health protection branch.

Researchers found that the median level o vitamin C in the blood of smokers was 20 per cent lower than that of nonsmokers. But for those smoking more than 20 cigarettes a day, the median level was 40 per cent lower than that of nonsmokers.

However, the vitamin-C level of pipe or cigar smokers was similar to that of male nonsmokers.

About 35 per cent of men and 40 per cent of women surveyed smoked cigarettes, while about seven per cent of the men were pipe or cigar smokers.

Dr. Pelletier, a biochemist, said earlier studies elsewhere on volunteer groups had produced contradictory results. Blood smoking and vitamin C levels.

The survey indicates many smokers risk succumbing to diseases like scurvy, a disease almost non-existent in Canada. But its health value has been hotly debated following evidence it may block the growth of cancer, speed growth and healing among children, increase resistance to surgical stress and substituted in part ofr the health needed by diabetics.

Freed Diplomat in Good Spirits

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — ...ner of the Dominican Republic-United States diplomat Barbara Hutchison was in good spirits ...ment after seven lethal terrorists ...ed a million to nothing," the ...ssaut her and six other hos...tages in return for safe conduct ...night after the 13-day episode ended.

"Suddenly I became a fre...mendous bargain; I went from ...ses of 37 killed prisoners. They got nothing except a safe get-away.

The terrorists, who had held the hostages since Sept. 27 in a second-floor room of the Venezuelan Consulate, were flown aboard a special Dominican Jet to Panama, where they proclaimed victory and said they were exhausted.

As they left the Boeing 727 at Tocumen International Airport near Panama City, the gunmen, led by leftist Radamanes Mendez Vargas, were met by LL-Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega, chief intelligence officer of the Panamanian National Guard.

Miss Hutchison, director of the U.S. Information Service (USIS) in the Dominican Republic, said she and the other hostages were treated well during the siege and even developed "sometimes of a friendship" with their captors.

But she said there were many tense moments, the most difficult being "the waiting and then the various cries as they occur."

"There was a package of dynamite, and we were living with that."

She said that gunmen and hostages alike often were short of water. The government intermittently allowed food — and drink to be taken to those inside the consulate.

Miss Hutchison told reporters that despite her ordeal she intends to continue her tour in the Dominican Republic that began in 1973 after a long USIS career in other parts of Latin America.

"Mendez bet me $5 that I would have to leave the Dominican Republic because the said all diplomatic kidnap victims have to leave the country once they are freed," she said. "But I was informed that I would have the option to go or stay, and I told Mendez I was staying."

The hostages—who also included two secretaries, a messenger boy, a Spanish priest and the Venezuelan consul and vice-consul—were greeted by friends and relatives when they emerged from the consulate.

"Thanks to God. Thanks to God," shouted the wife of Venezuelan Vice-Consul Waldemar Alvarado as he walked from the building.

Pipeline Firm Wants Guarantee

OTTAWA (CP) — Interprovincial Pipeline Ltd. said Wednesday it may need financial guarantees from the federal government before going ahead with an extension of its pipeline to Montreal.

Company executives, worried about oil supplies in the West, said if studies show western oil is unable to provide 250,000 barrels of oil a day to the Montreal market, the company will need a "minimum revenue guarantee" from the government.

Interprovincial asked for an adjournment of the hearings or a deferment of a board decision until a board report on oil supplies is available late this month. The board reserved decision and scheduled another sitting this morning.

Under the proposal, if movement of oil through the pipeline fell substantially below 250,000 barrels a day the federal government would be asked to continue to absorb the tolls on the final costs of the pipeline, company president David Waldon told the board.

Those costs would include depreciation, interest, property tax and certain operating costs such as maintenance expenses.

He said if there was not enough oil available to supply the Montreal market, the pipeline could only be justified on grounds it provided "security." As strictly a security measure, it becomes doubtful if the company can handle the project alone," he said.

Mr. Waldon told the hearing that when the application for the 638-mile extension from Sarnia, Ont., to Montreal was first presented last spring, there was no concern over oil supplies in the west.

"We presented a brief from the Canadian Petroleum Association showing there would be more than enough oil to supply traditional markets west of the Ottawa Valley energy board line in addition to the 250,000 barrels for Montreal."

But later assessments from industry showed there might not be sufficient supplies within a few years, he said.

John Blight, vice-president and treasurer of the company, said the federal government has not yet been asked about a minimum revenue agreement.

The company wants to see the board report on oil supplies before approaching the government or working out details of what the proposal could cost.

Seeks Funds To Test Solar Energy

TORONTO (CP) — Engineering professor Robert Swartman of London, Ont., said Wednesday that 10 experimental houses heated by solar energy should be constructed across Canada.

The University of Western Ontario professor told a conference of the Pan-American Federation of Engineering Societies that "it appears technically feasible to utilize solar energy for cooling of buildings in Canada."

Prof. Swartman has submitted a proposal to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for research money for solar homes.

"We must provide funding for research in alternative energy sources—not just dribbles, but substantial amounts," he said.

He said solar devices should be encouraged, possibly through eliminating property taxes on such home improvements.

Adolph Feinpold, chairman of the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Ottawa, told the conference that persons who produce and consume energy do not pay its full "real" costs.

The "real" costs of energy are borne by those who live near power plants, those who are affected by environmental pollution and taxpayers, he said.

ALL IN THE FAMILY/Isabel Huggan

Diplomatic Tactics For Dinner Time

Making meal-times pleasant is a common resolve made by husband, wife and the whole family. But how often does it work?

Everybody knows the importance of eating in a tension-free environment. Food swallowed in anger or resentment does as much harm as good — and family squabbling can dull even the keenest appetite.

But, somehow, we too often fall back into the old pattern of argument, harsh words and whining, when we all get together at the table.

"Mom, you know I hate eggplant. I can't eat all this. I won't."

Or . . . "Kenny, stop kicking your sister under the table. Now!"

Or . . . "I know you're trying to economize, but chicken livers three nights in a row?"

Or . . . "But why can't I have the car?"

Or . . . "This report card is a disgrace. Haven't you studied at all?"

It doesn't have to be like this if you lay down one basic rule: the table is neutral territory, no fighting allowed, no airing of grievances, no exchanging of cold-war hostilities.

There are ways, to make dinner a positive experience for every member of the family. Here are some gleaned from articles and family living that I think make sense and are easy to follow.

Schedule your dinner hour at a time convenient for all so that no one has to "eat and run".

If a child doesn't like a particular food, give only a very small helping. Having definite tastes is often very important to growing up.

Depending on the age and inclination of your children, invite them to assist with the meal. Setting the table is generally a thankless job but tossing the salad calls for a little flair and, done at the table, can be applauded.

Many youngsters drive a lot of satisfaction out of stirring, chopping and slicing food for the meal. They'll have a larger interest in keeping the dinner climate sunny if they feel directly involved.

Most families adhere to a rigid seating plan, almost as if they were in school. Every so often, why not trade places?

Similarly, different members of the family can take turns "being in charge" of meal-time conversation. It can be as simple as a junior-level "how and tell" or as complex as a discussion about a teen-ager's sociology assignment.

If arguments do occur or tempers flare, what to do? Most authorities agree that being sent away from the family circle is the strongest — and most useful — punishment.

The offender, repentant or not, is at least not causing any more trouble at the table. Given a little time to cool off, he or she should be allowed to come back.

Being sent to his room without the rest of his supper may be a painful fate if the meal is pancakes and syrup. It can also be what a clever scallywag had in mind when he refused to eat his broccoli! But the alternative — banishing the step at the table till he finishes the cold vegetable — isn't any more useful.

Parents who know the basics of good table talk don't use the time for touchy discussions about their problems. They set aside the concerns of the adult world for the good of the entire family, and it works to their benefit as well.

Try to have a "special" dinner "once a week, whether it's the Sunday roast if you can afford one of those days!) or home-baked beans. Candlelight, napkins, a flower on the table and soft music are good mood elevators every now and again. Children tend to respond with good behavior if the atmosphere is party-like.

Even if your family already has the knack of keeping meal-time pleasant, you might want to try out some of these notions. They certainly can't do any harm!

Don Leslie demonstrates as Mary Doyle models cross-country fashions.

Cross Country

'Skiing Is Easy As Walking'

In the 1950s, skiers split into two camps, Don Leslie said yesterday.

"The lazy ones took up down-hill skiing; the ambitious skiers took the cross-country."

Mr. Leslie was demonstrating the techniques, equipment and clothing of cross-country skiing to the Belleville Christian Women's Club.

"If you can walk, you can cross-country ski," he told the women. "Even if you walk with a cane, you can do it."

Mr. Leslie, of Leslie's Ski-Doo, outlined the advantages of the newly re-emerging sport: "To down-hill ski you have to get in the car and drive to a place with a hill. Then you spend up to $18 a day to ride up so that you can slide down.

"But you can cross-country any hour of the day or night. You can go at any speed you want, where you want, when you want."

He emphasized that skiing clothing for cross country is very, different than for down-hill skiing.

"You dress as you would for jogging," he said. He recommended long underwear covered by light waterproof clothing that would act "like house insulation and keep the heat in and the cold out."

Wearing knickers and long heavy socks, he said the short pants were most convenient and comfortable for long sliding strides.

Gloves, a toque, sunglasses and a belt with loops to hold excess clothing and compartments for "a snack", were additional wearing apparel.

He said that since cross-country skis are prone to tip breaks on uneven rocks and stumps, skiers also carry a spare plastic tip "to get them home".

The skis themselves are light and made of one of several substances and made in several widths.

The narrowest skis are "racing" skis and are suitable for little else. Wider are the "touring" skis that are most suitable for hobbyists. A combination ski incorporates the features of both of the above. Bushwackers are the widest cross-country ski.

Mr. Leslie told the women that the sport is a safe one.

"You don't get hurt when you fall," he said, demonstrating the supple ski boot worn with cross-country skis.

He said no instructions are necessary and that even using the skis is not as difficult as people think.

"There's no age limit," he concluded, "anyone can do it."

It's Cheaper, Too

"I can't count the number of whole families who came in to be outfitted for cross country skiing," Don Leslie told the Christian Women's Club Wednesday, "but a whole family wouldn't dare come in for downhill skiing equipment."

Mr. Leslie was comparing the costs of the two sports for the group.

An mid-range skiing ensemble including skis, boots, poles and gloves might cost about $75 for one person, he said.

"Compare that with a down-hill outfit which could run from $250 to $400," he said.

A Thankful Thought

Having our annual United Way Campaign in October is a pretty good idea, since the day of the year when we're supposed to thank our fellowmen, particularly those of the harvest, also falls in October. But just as we can't do without the annual harvest, we can't do without our United Appeal Agencies either. Two in particular which we take for granted are the Civic Action Committee and the Navy League. Both go on about their work, competently and unceasingly. The Civic Action helps out in family emergencies right when they happen, without any red tape. And the Navy League keeps right on producing good citizens. I'm thankful these organizations are around; they're blessings. Count them by helping the United Way.

New, Convenient Hours

Trenton Optical, 16 Bridge St. E. is happy to announce new hours. On Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesday and Saturdays, they'll be open 8:30 a.m. 'til 5 p.m. But on Thursdays and Fridays, they'll be open 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Trenton Optical is now convenient in its hours, as well as its location at the corner of Pinnacle and Bridge Streets. And because Trenton Optical is an independent optician firm, they needn't hardly push prices to its range of glass frame styles — and $5 prices. And you don't need an appointment for those new hours either.

Taking Advantage of Daylight

While you're driving around the lovely countryside this weekend, you may spot that very special property of your very special sign which says "Gord Robbin Real Estate". You'll know you've found the home and the real estate company for you. And the advantage of Gord Robbin's suggestion that Xtra cut hours of daylight are fast slipping away, please call and make your appointments to view property in the early evening while there's still light. The Gord Robbin office is open on Saturdays til 5 p.m. So you have that option too. Just call 968-6475 and arrange to see that property you've been waiting for.

Just Right For Boys

Wray's Home Furnishers, 366 Front St., have done it again with their tasteful window display. Only this time, they had a little help from their friends. Good Shepherd Store and Interiors and Bob Barlow. The display is the perfect boy's room, complete with a Captain's bed, a drawer chest, bookcase, trip'd dresser with mirror, desk and chair, all in maple with a natural finish. All this is displayed atop a wash-bowl, colonial spice carpet. The bureau knobs and the lamps are from Gord. That's helping Dad out isn't it? Perhaps this ensemble is just the one for your son.

An Added Dimension

I dropped in to the Quinte Sewing Centre in the Quinte Mall on Saturday, I happened to notice large bolts of material with prices ranging from $1.98 per yard and up, and I was immediately picked out by owner Ostrim. Customers, told him what kind of fabric they were seeking — color, texture, purpose and price — and in the twinkling of an eyelash, Ostrim had a few bolts to meet their requirements. A day-dawning firm needed a special kind of zipper; he got it. This is the kind of service imitative of Gord Quinte Sewing Centre. They don't sell just machines and fabrics; they sell their bole concept of sewing.

Staring You In The Face

As you may have a little more time this weekend perhaps you're going to put on the storm windows (hint, hint). And perhaps you're going to put some vinyl siding on your homes. And that aluminum door on the porch isn't smiling properly and there's a crack in the glass. A month from now will be time to call Belleville Aluminum Products, Glass and Mirror, 254 Pinnacle St. call help get those repairs done now and replace those wooden windows with all-weather aluminum ones. And you'll soon be pretty thankful you did, won't you?

A Lovely Time To Go

Tony Warren of Davison and Davison Travel, 188 Front St., believes that autumn is a great time to visit Britain — including October. He and his competent staff can plant you in a lovely area of Britain where you can soak up the history and relax from business pressures and the great thing about a vacation in Britain is, you always learn something. The Warrens have found that out every time they've gone back. And you can not this knowledge to good use in planning your particular 'Holiday in Britain' package — with Davison's help of course.

The Final Alternative

Today we conclude the final episode of our wall covering series with interior designer Paul Bernard of Bernard Interiors, 47A Campbell St. Paul lists the alternatives and the quality and variety of the most common simulated wood-grain panellings. They're fine for rec rooms and basements. And for a really unique one, you have to be patient in your search advises Paul. And if you have natural wood panellings, don't forget you have to maintain them with mild detergents and treat them with oil to maintain their natural hues. But for a really unique touch to part of a room, Paul suggests using ceramics. And if you want to make any home or room really unique, call Paul Bernard at 962-6976.

That Reasonable Lunch

Now that the cooler weather is a fact of life, you're probably tending to have a hot lunch. In the dining room of the Hotel Belvedere, 366 Front St. you can get an appetizing hot lunch, very reasonably priced. And a hot plate for $1.25 is also available until 2 p.m. in the John Cabot Lounge or the Henry VIII Room. If you want to come in out of the cold for something hot — and tasty — give the Riviera Room at Hotel Belvedere a try. Italian food is a specialty too.

I Hate To Be A Pessimist . . .

But, if you haven't had your car prepared for winter and winter happens to take it into its head to arrive, (we're already had one scare) and you aren't ready, you're going to be more than pessimistic: you're going to feel foolish. That's why the people at Vader's Car Sales, 341 North Front St. want you to call them and make an appointment to get your car winterized. Vaders are Datsun dealers but they're similar car specialists and allow specialists when it comes to winterizing. Call them before old Man Winter gets the last laugh.

A Blessing You Can't Count

That's true at your house, if you haven't enjoyed the joy of an Aquafine Water System with your Mister Schreiber. Water is one of those necessities of life we take for granted. But there's no need to take hard water for granted just because we're happy to have it. An Aquafine Water Softner treats hair, skin, clothes, dishes — and even the dog — with the same care. Mr. Schreiber, if you haven't enjoying the blessings of an Aquafine softner this Thanksgiving, that's no reason not to be enjoying one next Thanksgiving — or even before then. Call 962-6562 today.

...Thanksgiving Weekend

Let's hope the weather next weekend is as lovely as the weather last weekend, since we'll have an extra day to enjoy it. And the people at Sidney Ian, 385 Main St. W. would like to wish you the best of weekends — and of Thanksgiving. There is still a supply of the local harvest at Sidney Ian, including those Thanksgiving show-offs, squash and pumpkin. Great ideas for centre pieces for that Thanksgiving dinner. Enjoy yourselves, Sidney Ian will be open Monday too.

People and Events

ST. JULIEN IODE

The October meeting of the St. Julien chapter of the IODE was held at Muriel Kempton's home in Carlton with Regent Thelma Bailey presiding.

Loreen Ellis, the education secretary, reported that the A.E. McCall bursary was won this year by Philip Martin of Quinte Secondary School.

Volunteers were requested for the Charity Tea to be held in the Quinte Mall October 31 to November 2.

UCW RALLY

The 13th South Hastings Regional Rally of the Belleville Presbyterial of the United Church took place October 7 in Melrose United Church.

Regional President Helen McLaren presided over the day's events.

During the morning a literature display was presented after which delegates were welcomed.

Melville secretaries Olive Peyton, Evelyn Throop, Alfreda Bates, and Alma Rowe reported on areas such as membership service social action, Christian education and citizenship.

The afternoon session concerned the Day of Quinte Conference slated each September at Camp Quin-No-Lac.

Singing and devotions were conducted by Rev. Robert Bates, and Rev. Stephen St. Mark's and Deseronto UCW members.

Following the noon meal for the 130 women was provided by the Melrose UCW in the Church hall.

PURDY TO SPEAK

Al Purdy will be guest speaker at an open meeting of the Writers' Union of Canada in the gallery of Corby Library. The public is invited to hear Mr. Purdy, one of Canada's most celebrated widely-read poets, October 17 at 3 p.m.

Born in Wooler, educated in Trenton and Belleville and living now beside Robin Lake near Ameliasburg, Mr. Purdy says he's a "degenerate Loyalist stock".

His first volume, "The Enchanted Echo", was published in 1944 and since that time he has published more than a dozen books of poems. His most recent book, published this year, is "In Search of Owen Roblin".

He's been the recipient of four Canada Council Awards and in 1967 received a Centennial Medal. In 1968 he received the Governor General's Award for The Cariboo Horses.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I was stopped cold by the letter from the woman who hated to be photographed because she was overweight. She complained that certain members of her husband's family were very sneaky. They snapped candids of her when she was off guard and single at every opportunity.

My husband's mother felt the same way, and it was for near-ly the same reason. She was self-conscious about her teeth. The dear woman died before I had a chance to meet her. I regret this because I'm sure we would have been very good friends.

The family respected my mother-in-law's wishes, and there's not a single picture of her anywhere. How my family children and I would have treasured a single photograph of her, alas, there is none.—Say Cheese, Please

Dear Cheese: "Vanity, thy name is woman!" How many thought of her high school yearbook or telephone in the way back? I'll bet with a little imagination you could dig one up.

Dear Ann Landers: In recent weeks you have printed a number of letters about mothers and daughters who couldn't get along. A psychiatrist quoted was wrong when he said: "Perhaps if the child showed some concern for the mother, the emotional upset might serve as a bridge to help them both."

I couldn't disagree more.

My mother and I had fights all the time. I recall one that went on for 25, which was four years after I married. I bent over backwards to please her but never could. She told me that when I was born she was embarrassed because I came too soon after my brother. I remember the black-and-blue marks from her fingernails when I misbehaved, and the headaches from being slapped on the side of the head. I recall the day she pushed me against the stove because I didn't dry a glass properly.

When I took my dad's advice to sit and marvel out of the house she accused me of thinking I was "too good for the family."

Many years have passed and we get along fairly well now. I had almost forgotten the hell I went through until I read that letter in your column. I don't know what happened to change things. Maybe it was just the passing of time, or perhaps the Lord has dealt with her. Thanks, Ann, for letting me air my feelings.—Been There Too

Dear B.T.: If your description of the way your mother treated you is accurate, the woman was mentally ill. Perhaps your relationship improved when she regained her mental health. Consider that possibility, please.

Joy of Creating for Children

By DORIS CLARK

"Mummy look what I made. I did it all by myself."

Dorothy looks at all the way home from school carrying the still warm Canadian loaf of bread in her fat little hand. It was a beautiful loaf and mother admired it. Dorothy glowed with pride.

I don't think there is anything more rewarding, more ego-building than to create something with one's own hands! This is what we mean when we say a child needs to achieve.

With the right equipment and teaching, Dorothy or Don — at whatever young age can make something to be proud of.

Mummy can encourage this in school work and can give opportunities for worthwhile tasks at home. The mother who received the bread said, "Isn't that lovely! Would you like to make one like that for us all on Sunday. It is a big pan!"

Take a chance, mothers! Let your own little Dorothy or Don mess up the kitchen. Let let them have the fun of creating something there.

Dear Doris: When I first met Bill he really impressed me as a gentleman. I am divorced. My son of 17 worked for Bill at his garage last year but wouldn't go back this summer because of the way Bill used slang language in the time. He said Bill has a temper like one wouldn't believe — and I bet this is one time. He would swear so much and kick the machinery when it broke down and holler at my boy, which made him lose confidence in himself.

When I met Bill I was so sure my children would have a good stepfather. When I went off on holidays I had time to think things over and when I came back I felt if he asked me to marry him I would. Now that I know this other information I wonder if I should even go out with him.

I would think that Bill would try to impress me and would win his respect instead of destroying it. If he had marriage on his mind. The other day he said the reason he didn't push marriage was because he felt there should be harmony in the home first.

Having Second Thoughts.

Dear Second Thoughts: When people work together day after day they are apt to get the full impact of each other's personality; the bad along with the good.

If I were you I would have not only second, but third and fourth thoughts. I don't like that temper business; and if you are prepared to embark on a life with Bill (if he should ask you) you will be the one who will get its full impact. ...ettle decide whether you care enough.

Confidential to no Shut-Eye: I don't think you're alone in this. There are heaps of insomniacs, and a distressing number of them are teen-agers. Many couples — men from going bald and women from growing mustaches.

Dr Lewis Stolman told the annual meeting of the Ontario branch of the College of Family Physicians of Canada Tuesday that it probably will be several years before the substance, which would be rubbed on the skin, is on the market.

He said the substance would be an anti-an drogen and drugs is a male hormone.

Dr. Stolman said acne is a disorder of the sebaceous glands in the skin, which produce a greasy, lubricating material. Androgen, which people begin producing at puberty, stimulates these glands to produce the greasy material.

Acne develops when the opening of the gland become plugged, and the greasy material cannot flow out onto the skin.

He said a cream or lotion which would prevent the androgen from stimulating the sebaceous glands for the duration of the acne period is under development.

Dr. Stolman said male pattern hair loss an inherited condition occurs because men have hair on the front of their heads "genetically doomed to die when exposed to androgen."

He said that an anti-androgen substance rubbed into hair follicles could one day be "an invisible shield" protecting men from the hair loss and preventing women from growing excess facial hair.

Guaranteed Income for One-Parent Families Proposed by Council

OTTAWA (CP) — The status of one-parent families appeared as a prime concern in a committee report to the Advisory Council on the Status of Women Tuesday.

Urging the government to issue a policy statement on one-parent families, the report said the current approach of "relying up the pieces when ruin has overcome the parent or children" no longer would do.

"Our present financially-rich stick approach to the problem of women alone with dependent children" must be changed," the report said.

The report recommended a guaranteed basic income for one-parent families, increased taxation concessions including a higher basic exemption, deductible home help and an allowance in the tax system to acknowledge the homemaking contribution of mothers.

The report added that 75 per cent of all one-parent families are headed by women and that one-parent families comprise nine per cent of the family groups in the country.

The council also heard Health Minister Marc Lalonde assure it that the government was not dragging its feet in getting women-oriented legislation into Parliament.

He said a bill to eliminate sexual inequalities from the Canada Pension Plan Act died with the last Parliament but he reintroduced a revised Citizenship Act will be introduced this week and a motion for establishment of a human rights and special interests commission will be introduced before Christmas.

Under the Citizenship Act revisions, he said, a woman would be allowed to stay in Canada even if the husband is deported, either parent could apply for naturalized citizenship for a born-here child and would eliminate residence requirements for an alien spouse of a Canadian citizen.

Mr. Lalonde said the special-interests commission still is under study by himself and the justice department, but would have full scope to deal with all women's issues.

He also said revision of the Criminal Code to liberalize abortion as a criminal offence would not be placed before the House this session.

Lower Cost, Less Style

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Children's Apparel Manufacturers' Association said Tuesday children's wear may become less fashionable in the future.

Norman Laisky told the Toronto Fashion Group that the only way to keep clothing costs down may be to reduce the number of styles "and bring the children's wear market into an area of predominantly staple items with minor trimming options."

He said that by the 1980s, fewer than 10 retail organizations may be responsible for 80 per cent of all children's wear sold in Canada.

"These retail giants, relying now on computerized buying, would inevitably result in larger purchases of fewer styles," Mr. Laisky said.

Doggie Bowl

This 9-year-old American Bull Terrier, "Butch," has been smoking a pipe of tobacco daily for the last five years, according to his owner, Jean Morel of Exmouth, England. Morel says the dog used to pinch his pipe so he decided to give "Butch" a pipe of his own. The dog also sports only one eye. He lost his right eye in a fight with a neighbor's dog. (AP Wirephoto)

Snake Venom Stops Clots

LONDON (CP) — Ten years after the idea was suggested in a scientific paper, an anti-blood clot agent based on snake venom has come on the market. It is produced in Britain, the first country in the world to have the preparation.

The idea that the venom of the Malayan pit viper might be valuable was put forward in a paper by Dr. H. A. Reid, who noticed that when people were bitten by the snake the blood was prevented from clotting, but they did not bleed.

This is exactly the effect needed to treat the blood circulation blocks called thrombosis and embolism. Blood clots often form after surgery and have to be dispersed because they may travel to the lung. The results are intense pain, shortness of breath and even death from heart failure. Clots in deep veins are the hardest to treat. A number of drugs are available to doctors, but none has the ability of the snake-venom agent, called Arvin.

It removes or reduces the amount of fibrinogen in the blood. Normally, fibrinogen forms fibrin, the basic material of a blood clot. Its removal means that there is no possibility of a clot forming.

Chinese Don't Advertise

OTTAWA (CP) — A lack of commercial advertising was among the most striking impressions reported by Carleton University President Michael Oliver after a recent trip to China.

"It is particularly striking when you have just come from Hong Kong, which is continually giving forth a loud and strident commercial message," he said.

"When you move into China there is none of this. The messages are again loud and strident, but they are political."

Dr. Oliver was part of a Canadian university delegation that spent two weeks in China observing that country's academic structure.

His over-all impression was "of an immense number of people and of a land which has been affected by the people much more than any other country I've visited."

"The countryside always showed the effects of people terraced land being cultivated right up to the tops of steep hills, for example."

Dr. Oliver said the effects of the cultural revolution were visible constantly. The active participation of Chinese women in leadership roles, the worker-society and the emphasis placed on physical fitness were prime examples.

"In Shanghai you wouldn't believe it. If you go out in the streets about six in the morning, there, in front of their doorways, are people doing exercises in the air one can make out."

He said his group found the Chinese hospitality "terrific."

60-storey Tower Calgary's Symbol

CALGARY (CP) — When people think of Calgary, they usually think either of oil wells, the Stampede or a 60-storey concrete tower.

Calgary Tower—the name was changed from Husky Tower in 1971—dominates virtually every view of the city's skyline and has become a community symbol.

Bert Olson, a spokesman for Canadian Pacific Railway, said the tower was built as a focal point for Palliser Square, a complex of offices, movies and a shopping mall.

Mr. Olson suspects the tower was the brainchild of Calgary's current mayor, Rod Sykes, a former president of Marathon Realty Ltd., CP Rail's real estate arm.

It was built to open in 1968 at a cost of $3.5 million and originally carried the name of Husky Tower because Husky Oil Co. was to occupy a major block of offices in Palliser Square. That part of the deal fell through, however, and Marathon bought out the Husky interest in 1971.

The current owners, Mr. Olson said, have declared the tower "as a landmark of the city. The original concept included some dominance of the skyline but no one realized it to be as pervasive as it has.

The 626-foot tower stands on the site of the old Grain Exchange and Palliser Square still acts as a station. The tower sports a revolving restaurant that seats 300, an observation terrace that costs $1.50 to visit and a couple of bars.

Stan Porter, who manages the tower for Marathon, says the structure is making money but the revenue is pooled with all of the operations of Palliser Square so he doesn't know what kind of return the company is getting on investment.

Mr. Porter said about a half a million persons a year go to the top of the tower, not all of them tourists.

About 9,000 passes have been given to business and organizations which take people to the top frequently. As well, the tower is advertised so Calgarians don't forget it's there—as if they ever could, Mr. Porter said.

That's on top of the city and the province promoting the structure in tourist advertising.

On a clear day visitors can see the Rocky Mountains 80 miles away and so far nothing has been built close to the tower to obstruct the view. Nothing high enough anyway, Mr. Porter said the tower has drawn development to it, as witnessed by a convention centre-hotel project which has just opened across the street.

Calgary Symbol

Although the builders didn't intend it to happen, the Calgary Tower has become a symbol of the city. The tower — originally known as the Husky Tower — is 60 storeys high and dominates almost every view of the city's skyline. (CP Photo)

No Limit to Task Facing United Nations Force on Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus (CP) — There is no limit to the task, Col. Guy Lessard of Montreal, commander of the Canadian Airborne Regiment, so described the humanitarian burden now crushing Cyprus, known to the ancients as the Isle of Aphrodite, goddess of fertility.

"I suppose it would be pretty hard to starve here but an awful lot of people are destitute," said Maj. Murray Smith of Saskatoon, economics and humanitarian officer with UNFICYP—the United Nations Force in Cyprus.

The peacekeeping work of the six national contingents in Sweden, Austrian, British and Canadian—has changed greatly since Turkey captured 40 per cent of the island territory in two military successions in July and August.

"I only hope nothing like this will happen again," was the weary comment of Maj. Smith, interviewed after a 36-hour stretch on duty striving to co-ordinate relief attempts amid chaotic refugee conditions in a devasted economy.

The Canadian contingent of 950 men is second-largest after the British in UNFICYP, which now not only maintains an uneasy ceasefire but also tries to ease the suffering of 225,000 refugees and restore electricity and water supplies.

"You find a dreadful amount of heartbreak per square mile," said a refugee official. "It is as if one-third the population had turned green-swelling eyeles."

The heartbreak reached out to far-off Quebec when parachutist J. J. Ge'Berger of Bismoski was killed while on a humanitarian patrol, the second Canadian soldier to die as a result of the Cyprus war, the other being J. L. Gilbert Perron of Montreal.

Geographically part of Asia, Cyprus is shaped like a frying pan measuring 150 miles east-west and 60 miles north south, with a population estimated at 680,000 living in an exotic setting of plains and mountains and serried hills.

The island's strategic position—Syria 60 miles away, Egypt 320 miles, the Soviet Union 600 miles—endows Cyprus with a place in history widely beyond its size.

Abounding in paradox, Cyprus attracted until this summer thousands of tourists to revel in a climate of "300 sunny days a year" and bathe in the shimmering waters of the eastern Mediterranean. But Cyprus, its once stately forests plundered by ship-building conquerors through the ages, suffers a chronic water shortage and depends on electricity pumps illustrated throughout the island.

How are Canadians helping with the manifold problems of this enchanting but unhappy land?

The humanitarian section was formed to see if we could do something with what we had on the ground, which was not too much—two troops of armed cars, eight in all, and trucks when we could get hold of them. That was a big difficulty—not enough trucks for all the blankets and supplies that refugees need."

"We had to put Canadian drivers on the trucks because the Turks would not let Greek drivers into the northern area. We had about 50 men on the job one way or another.

"The situation go more and more difficult as the peacekeeping force restricted movement. We managed to get through for a while, mostly by bluffing, but in the end all re-supply of Greeks in the northern area was cut off."

As Turkish armor and troops sealed off the northern area with a population in the order of 180,000, Greek-Cypriot troops and soldiers from the Greek mainland surrounded and sometimes laid siege to Turkish villages and enclaves in southern districts.

"It was at this time that we got the Red Cross—which began arriving—to take trucks to the north," said Maj. Smith. "On the other side, we sent Turkish trucks with UN drivers to supply Turkish villages in southern areas.

"At one time we averaged an accident a day because of poor brakes on the trucks and poor conditions on the roads. We had to send co-drivers to keep out and put rocks behind the wheels of trucks when they stalled on grades because the brakes would not hold them."

"When the second invasion came Aug. 14-15, we started to have more serious problems, massive power failures, starving animals—pigs, goats, cattle," said Maj. Smith.

Thousands of pigs fell into the hands of the Turkish Moslems, who do not eat pork but sometimes cared for the animals and occasionally sent them to Greek areas.

The relief trucks, in the later stages, carried supplies northward to Kyrenia, where white stone houses surround the harbor in the shadow of a medieval castle and the mountaint tower behind. Some 30,000 Greek refugees were held in the area, 400 of them in the Dome Hotel. That is only 30 miles from Nicosia through the Turkish lines.

The trucks also rolled southward more than 60 miles to isolated Turkish villages in the romantic area of Paphos, a region which included the Fontana Amorosa (Fountain of Love) where the Cypriot goddess Aphrodite once took her baths in a limestone cave.

The narrative of Maj. Smith came in quiet, almost taciturn fashion. He reported with satisfaction that a winery in south coast Limassol had agreed to purchase grapes—now being harvested—from Greeks and Turks alike. The picture was not all gloom.

"Now we have eight United Nations trucks of four tons and all eight are on the road today, four northward, four southward," the many-tasted soldier noted.

Change Needed

Author Attacks Education System

"The pressure point for change in education is in the personnel office," Alvin Toffler, author, lecturer and evaluator of the human condition (contemporary philosopher), told a large audience at Centennial Secondary School Wednesday night.

"If I wanted to change education, I would look to the way people are hired for jobs," said Dr. Toffler.

The author of Future Shock was brought to Belleville by District 19 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation and the Hastings County Board of Education.

An overflow crowd came to the gymnasium — listened intently to his philosophy of change.

Dr. Toffler said he deplored the "immorality of planning," the "doomsday syndrome" that leave people in a state of "passivity, paralysis and pessimism" and the lack of involvement of the community in the education of its children.

He said the world now is going through the "most wrenching change since the invention of agriculture 10,000 years ago". The transition from a society of food-gatherers to one of food-producers took thousands of years to accomplish, but the change from the industrial society" is going on now over a span of 30 to 50 years.

The school credit system and diplomas are not really useful anymore, he said, because those who hire workers insist upon a piece of paper, creative and innovative education is hampered. New ways of testing competency are on-the-job tryouts and work simulations, he said.

"The fundamental blow to the pressure against change in education would be struck if hiring procedures were changed," said Dr. Toffler.

Next in his priorities for change in education is parental involvement. He told Jim Forster, provincial president of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation that he could see no way out of the present system unless parents, and other pertinent segments of the community, become involved in schooling.

Dr. Toffler suggested that knowledgeable people in the community be drafted to teach their specialties.

His formula for "action learning" includes "practical work oriented education" credits for work and social service, all concepts now in active practice in Hastings county schools.

Dr. Toffler suggested that a feeling of futility may be behind student unrest.

The shock of change is so great, he said, that students can't believe that they have been told. Students mistakenly attack teachers and schools.

He suggested that education must "move into the community, where the kids can check their learning against reality".

"Our schools still simulate the factory world of punctuality and repetitive action," said Dr. Toffler. "Our schools foster the old-fashioned discipline of routine, obedience and punctuality.

"It is tragic that it is possible for a child to go to school from 5 to 30 years without ever encountering questions like: What are you living for? What are you willing to die for? And what are your priorities?"

Student a Teacher

Susan Green, 13-year-old Grade 7 student at Harry J. Clarke School, has been a teacher much of this week. Susan, with her brothers and family friend Deana Brandell, has made a comprehensive collection of Canadian Indian headdresses and artifacts and has described them to 16 classes of her schoolmates. Of Mohawk extraction, Susan describes the war bonnet of braves of her tribe. Decorated with beads, partridge and eagle feathers, the "tasiola" is on a leather-covered wooden frame.

Protester Dragged Out

Mohawk Council Signs New Lease for Industry

TYENDINAGA — Violence erupted at a surprise Tyendinaga Band Council meeting Wednesday when Mohawk dissidents protesting the formation of a corporation on the reserve refused to leave council chambers.

Wes Bardy, a father of three and son of an official spokesman for the protesters, attempted to continue his questioning of council on the industry proposal until Chief William Brant ordered him to be silent or be thrown out.

Mr. Bardy continued "harrassing" council and refused to sit down so three reserve police officers were instructed to remove Mr. Bardy, said Mr. Brant.

Mr. Brant said as the police grabbed Mr. Bardy he fell to the floor and wrapped his arms and legs around a coat rack. During the struggle to get Mr. Bardy out of the chambers, council left the chambers to go across the street to the band office.

In spite of the protest, band council Wednesday signed a three-year lease with the controversial Tyendinaga Mohawks Ltd., a company working on a contract basis producing shoe parts for Bata Footwear.

Councillors signed the lease after they returned to council chambers.

Chief Brant said he expects "the lease will meet with approval of the minister" of Indian and northern affairs.

Earlier the band council arranged for a five-year lease but on the request of the ministry, this was reduced to a three-year term.

"With a three-year lease, the next council has the opportunity to get rid of the corporation," said Chief Brant.

The contract also stipulates that if the firm abides with all lease arrangements, the lease can be extended for two additional three-year terms.

Chief Brant said the dissidents "is not binding ... it shows intent."

The protesters, during a meeting at Councillor Marcele's home, said they "do not intend sitting idly by," following the Bardy incident.

"We have met here tonight to get the feelings of our people concerning Wes Bardy," Councillor Cleil Maracle, who was in Ottawa last week, said he was given a letter from the Native Peoples Embassy supporting the Tyendinaga Mohawks.

The Native Peoples Embassy is the new name of the federal government building in Ottawa taken over in recent weeks by protesting Indians from across the country. Several Tyendinaga Mohawks travelled to the embassy in the last week taking food and supplies to Indians camped around the capital.

"If the decision is taken to sign the lease, the Native Peoples Embassy will take all appropriate action to see that justice is the order of the day for the Mohawks of Tyendinaga," the embassy letter states. This letter was read at council meeting but Chief Brant dismissed it saying the "Indians in Ottawa only know one side of the story."

cence for residents. During the deer season bear can be taken on a deer-bear licence. During moose season bear can be shot on a moose-bear licence.

When deer and moose seasons coincide, bear may be taken on either licence. If moose and deer seasons are closed and bear season open, deer-bear or moose-bear licences are valid.

But, during the second week of the moose season in the Tweed natural resources district (roughly the north halves of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington and the mid-part of Hastings counties), bear cannot be hunted on a deer-bear licence.

Only one bear can be taken per licence. The bear season runs Sept. 15 to Nov. 30 this fall and Apr. 15 to June 15 next spring.

Police Warn Merchants Of Bogus $50 Bills

City police are warning residents to be on the lookout for counterfeit $50 bills.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie issued the warning this week after a bogus bill was passed at the Dixie Lee Fried Chicken Take-Out store on Coleman St., and turned up at the company's bank deposit.

The number on the bill is A-11 965 6029. Chief Crosbie said this is the same serial number that was found on counterfeit bills circulated in the London area during the Labor Day weekend.

The chief said that the bogus bills are poor quality ones and asks that merchants and residents look closely at any $50 bill they receive.

Sign Bylaw Coming Soon

Soon — possibly by November — city council will have a draft bylaw proposal that will remove overhanging signs from Belleville's downtown streets. The seven-page document is still to be reviewed by the city manager but it has been given priority passage into council's fall business.

Decision Expected Soon

City's Proposed Sign Bylaw Remains 'Up in the Air'

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A sign bylaw that will ban overhanging signs from downtown Belleville will be considered by city council's hands by November.

City manager Wilbur Purcell, in an interview Wednesday, said the sign bylaw is one of three "priorities" set by council for fall consideration. The others are housing and minimum building standards.

The seven-page bylaw — still to be reviewed and given minor modifications by the city manager — represents a condensation of half-inch-thick sheaf of documentation presented to council more than a year ago by its solicitor.

This earlier document was considered "complicated."

Alderman Ben Corke described it Wednesday as being "full of inadequacies and contradictions", while Quinte Planning Board director Bert Kenny said "it had a few rough edges". It was then sent back to the solicitor for rewriting.

The condensed version has been circulating around city hall for several months now after being sent by council to the Quinte Planning Board and most recently to Belleville's subordinate planning advisory committee. This committee — approximately two weeks ago — urged that the bylaw, in its condensed state, be re-introduced to council, said Alderman Corke.

"It is mine and council's aim to deal with the bylaw by November," said Mr. Purcell.

The city manager says he sees "no impediments" associated with earlier discussions surrounding the bylaw and says there will be a few "modifications".

"I'm going to make some comments . . . some clauses may be amended," he said.

The face of Belleville's downtown hangs in the balance.

If the latest draft of the bylaw is acceptable to council, it will mean all overhanging signs — at least in the downtown area — will be forbidden after five years, the time allowed for retailers to convert their existing display pieces.

One of the modifications Mr. Purcell is considering is reducing the conversion time to a maximum of three years. He said when the draft was completed, five years was the standard. He said he intends researching the time limit and, if possible, will recommend shortening the time.

The benefit of this bylaw comes as an "unclothered" look to the downtown, he said.

As for the downtown merchants who will be faced with the expensive task of replacing hanging signs with flat or "facia" signs, there appears to be little opposition.

Bruce Lynch, president of the Downtown Association said in an interview, "We've never done a real survey of all the merchants but the directors will meet with several community professionals for advice and will concentrate on "brightening their sense of listening".

"There are things callers say and things callers mean to say," said the spokesman. "Volunteers must learn to understand both of these levels of communication."

"We don't give advice," the spokesman said. "We talk and ask questions hoping the caller will come to his own answers."

Telecare staff work in co-operation with all community agencies and may refer callers too specific help that the caller may not have been aware of.

"Our people are not experts . . . they're just ordinary people," said Ted Milliken, director of Telecare and the only member who does not retain anonymity.

Mr. Lynch said he had members of his association expect to meet with the mayor sometime prior to the November meeting of the draft bylaw.

He added: "The whole subject of signs is up in the air."

Telecare Begins Training Session

A friend is someone that is there all the time — ready to listen, ready to help.

Right now a new crop of volunteers met in the chapel of Bridge Street United Church to begin 30 weeks of telephone training, four-hour shift as a Telecare friend, or just to learn the art of talking and hearing.

A total of 150 hours of the organization said volunteers

A's Squeeze Into Showdown

BALTIMORE (AP) — Oak-land A's go after their third straight World Series baseball championship with ailing Reggie Jackson and the veteran pitching staff showing a change.

But the resourceful A's manage somehow to score, and they still have magnificent pitching to use against Los Angeles Dodgers. Both were apparent Wednesday in the 3-1 victory over Baltimore Orioles which gave Oakland the American League pennant, three games to one.

The A's scored their first run on four consecutive walks in the fifth inning and another in the seventh on their lone hit, a double by Jackson following another of the 11 walks off Mike Cuellar and Ross Grimsley.

Winning pitcher Jim (Catfish) Hunter and reliever Rollie Fingers held the Orioles to five hits, with Baltimore finally ending a 30-inning scoring drought on Boog Powell's ninth-inning hit.

The A's pitching is what impressed Earl Weaver, the Baltimore manager. He predicted they would enable Oakland to "do the 1936-39 and the 1949-53 New York Yankees as the only teams ever to win three World Series in a row.

"Pitching dominated the play-offs," Weaver said. "But that's the way we got into it, the way they got into it, and the way they're going to win the World Series."

After banging three home runs to beat Hunter 4-3 in the series opener, the Orioles scored only one more run. Through the fifth inning of the final game, they had gone 15 innings without advancing a runner beyond first base.

The A's weren't much better at the plate as they battled a Baltimore pitching staff which Oakland owner Charles O. Finley had feared would be tough to beat.

Jackson, playing the final three games as a designated hitter while hobbled with a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg, had two hits in the four games.

Oakland's other three top run-producers, all of whom knocked in 75 runs or more during the regular season, didn't fare much better.

Sal Bando did have two homers among his three hits, and his first homer was the third game 1-0. Joe Rudi was limited to two hits and Gene Tenace went 0-for-11.

DREW WALK

Ironically, it was the hitless Tenace who drew the fifth-inning walk off Cuellar which forced home the first run Wednesday.

Just before the game, manager Alvin Dark said: "The thing about our ball club, is that some way, some how, we're going to find a way to score."

Afterwards, he pointed out that although the A's were next-to-last in the league in hits, they were second in scoring runs.

For the Orioles, who won three consecutive American League pennants, 1969-71, it was a disappointing finish to a season that Don Baylor, whom Fingers fanned with two runners aboard in the seventh inning, Weaver said, "I don't know much about Oakland," he said.

"I don't predict the number of games the series will go, I'll root just as hard as any Dodger fan then in the Series. It was a battle for the pennant up to now, and this is now a league vendetta."

"They out-hit us, out-pitched us and just out-played us, all the way around," said Pirate center fielder Al Oliver. "They deserve to go to the World Series."

Buhlton said he felt the Dodg-

Sutton, Garvey Team Up

Dodgers Crush Pirates

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's an all-California World Series for the first time, and Steve Garvey says Los Angeles Dodgers wanted it that way.

"We said collectively that we want to play the best team," said Garvey, hitting star of the Dodgers' 13-1 victory Wednesday over Pittsburgh that gave Los Angeles its first National League baseball pennant in eight years.

"Oakland is the World Series champion and the American League champion again, so we have to beat them if we want to prove we are the best team in baseball."

The Dodgers—behind Garvey's two home runs and two singles, and Don Sutton's masterful pitching Wednesday—whipped the Pirates and won the best-of-five series three games to one. The two-time defending world Series champion A's eliminated Baltimore's Orioles by the same margin in games for the American League crown.

The A's are expected to pitch Ken Holtzman, who blanked Baltimore last Sunday, and Los Angeles will open the series with Andy Messersmith, who beat Pittsburgh's Jim Rooker Saturday afternoon's game at Dodger Stadium.

Dodger manager Walt Alston refused to draw a comparison between the Dodgers and A's because he hadn't studied scouting reports."I don't know much about Oakland," he said.

The Pirates, who won the NL East title for the fourth time in the last five years, had no qualms about picking the Dodgers to win the World Series.

Won't Play South Africa

India Standing Firm

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India challenged the Davis Cup in a tit-for-tat Wednesday to expel it if it refuses to bar South Africa in the Davis Cup final.

R.K. Khanna, secretary of the All-India Lawn Tennis Federation, told reporters India has already made it clear at the meeting of the Davis Cup nations committee at London in July it would not be able to play against South Africa "at any stage of the competition anywhere."

He was commenting on the statement at Durban, South Africa, by Basil Reay, secretary of the Davis Cup nations committee, that a telegram had been sent warning that India faced the risk of expulsion from the competition if it failed to send a team to play South Africa.

Khanna said there is a clause in the Davis Cup rules by which a nation could be simply expelled from the competition "on the pretext of some reason or the other."

The government's policy was reiterated again Wednesday night in the Delhi television program by Shahid Ali Khan, joint secretary in the education ministry in charge of sports.

He said India could not play against South Africa because of the latter's racial policies.

If India refuses to play, it will be the first time in the 74-year history of the Davis Cup competition that a country wins by default.

India qualified for the finals by defeating the Soviet Union in Poona last month. South Africa reached the final by defeating Italy 4-1 at Johannesburg.

Still No Sparring

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Champion George Foreman still hasn't been permitted to resume sparring, 23 days after a cut over his eye forced postponement of his world heavyweight boxing title fight against Muhammad Ali.

Manager Dick Sadler has hinted that Foreman may start boxing again in three to five days.

"George has over 200 rou-n's of boxing under his belt for this fight," Sadler said.

"He only needs a touch more to get his timing sharp. We've still got 20 days before post time. Plenty of-time."

Pete Mahovlich to the Rescue

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

It took three seasons for New York Islanders to gain their first point at the Montreal Forum but Islanders, who had Montreal goalie Ken Dryden playing for first NHL game since the close of the 1972-73 season, Dryden sat out last season because of a contract hassle.

The Rangers untouched a 19-shot barrage at Capitals goalie Ron Low in the third period, while Washington had a goal on its only shot at New York's Eddie Giacomin.

Greg Polis and Rick Middleton scored twice for New York with Polis' second goal at 3:34 of the final period snapping a 3-3 tie. Jean Ratelle had the distinction of scoring Washington's first goal at 8:36 of the opening period to give the Caps a brief 1-0 lead.

The Leafs fired 46 shots at goaltender Michel Plasse and one of the shots to beat him was Dave Keon's 30th goal which capped a four-goal outburst in the final period.

Simon Nolet got the Scouts first-ever goal in the second period after Toronto scored twice in the first period.

Syl Apps scored a short-handed goal early in the third period and added an insurance goal with 2:34 remaining in the game to give the Penguins their 4th win over Minnesota.

Guy Charron scored from a scramble in front of the net with 27 seconds remaining in the game to give the Red Wings the win. Danny Grant got the other Detroit goal with Ivan Boldirev scoring for Chicago.

Rookie Doug Palazzari's second goal of the game with 9:02 remaining in the third period gave the Blues their tie against the Seals. Stan Weir and Lee Fogg each had two goals for California.

A goal by Dennis Ververgaert at 17:19 of the second period gave the Canucks their tie against the Flames. Larry Sacobi and Bob Lowe scored the other Vancouver goals while Hilliard Graves, Bob Leiter and Jacques Richard replied for the Flames.

Next Canada-Soviet Series Question

Campbell Sets Things Straight

MONTREAL (CP) — Contrary to reports from Moscow earlier this week, there will be no meetings this December between teams from the National Hocky League and the Soviet Union.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said Wednesday that while preliminary discussions had taken place between the two sides, the talks were aimed toward the 1975-76 season rather than the current one.

Campbell was commenting on Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association. The Toronto lawyer was in Moscow for the recently-concluded eight-game series between the World Hockey Association's Team Canada '74 and the Soviet national team.

Eagleson had been quoted in published reports as telling officials of the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation that the NHL players would decide when another series between the two groups would take place and that the next meeting could be in North America as early as December.

Campbell said he did not believe some of the published statements attributed to Eagleson had been made by the NHLPA executive director.

"I don't believe a lot of the statements (attributed to Eagleson)," Campbell said. "The NHL and the NHLPA are joint partners in any international enterprise."

"I'm sure Eagleson had discussions with the Russians, the same as I did," Campbell said. "He may have said it's up to the players, but he knows perfectly well the players and the league have had a partnership agreement concerning all international play for the last four years."

The NHL president said he knew of no negotiations that would justify statements by Health Minister Marc Lalonde and Lou Lefaive, president of Sports Canada, that a joint NHL-WHA team would face the Soviet Union in the near future.

"Certainly nothing is going to happen this December," Campbell said. The only discussions I've had with the Russians relate to the 1975-76 season, not this season."

'Chairs' Said Gordie And There They Were

TORONTO (CP) — Was Big Brother really watching Team Canada during its stay in Moscow last week?

Nobody in the Canadian camp knows for sure and many of those in the Soviet Union aren't saying, but Gordie Howe, said Wednesday something made him study the possibility.

"We were sitting in the room," said the 46-year-old veteran "when I mentioned we could do with some chairs."

"We didn't tell anyone else, but the next day we had two more chairs in our room."

"At first I said I wouldn't go back ever," said Bruce MacGregor, the right winger who missed the last two games because of a sore knee and a virus. "But it was an emotional time."

No other players mentioned the possibility of their rooms being bugged. Several, including Mike Walton, complained the rooms were dirty and conditions unfair.

Howe put the thing in perspective:

"The only bugs I know about for sure were the ones I saw crawling in my bathroom."

Canada Impresses In Defeat

FRANKFURT-ON-THE-ODER, East Germany (Reuter) — Canada, one of soccer's developing nations, was beaten 2-0 by East Germany but emerged with much of the credit from a 0 a m p unmemorable International match Wednesday night.

The meagre crowd of 2,000 whistled its disapproval when Hans-Juergen Kreische, all alone in the Canadian penalty area, popped the ball past goalkeeper Tony Chursky to give his side their flattering 2-0 victory.

Many thought Doerner was offside and there was widespread confusion when the Russian referee picked up the ball as to whether it was a goal or merely the end of the game. It turned out to be both.

The East Germans took the lead after 17 minutes when Martin Hoffman just beat a Canadian defender for possession on the edge of the box to squeeze his shot into the far corner of the net.

It was a useful start to a which takes Canada to East and West Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland in search of experience for the 1976 Olympic tournament for which, as hosts, they are automatic qualifiers.

Elevator 10 for 10

BARRIE (CP) — Elevator won the 10th race at Barrie Raceway Thursday for a record of 10 wins in 10 lifetime starts.

The four-year-old pacer was the race favorite and paid $3.10, $2.20 and $2.10. The tractor of Elevator and Rich Pearle returned $6.60.

In the fourth race, Wil Lor Finigan and Little Banty combined to pay a $190 exactor. The daily double of Mighty Simcoe in the first and Mabels Ami paid $14.70.

Racing resumes Friday, with the featured Belvedere Pace on Saturday.

A crowd of 1,508 wagered $106,861 Thursday.

It's Strictly Share the Wealth for Senior A Teams

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action opens its 1974-75 season tonight when Barrie Flyers visit Whitby McDonald's with a series of official hoping a "share-the-wealth" plan will keep the financially-plagued league in business.

Salaries have been outlawed and players will have to wait until bills have been paid before receiving their shares of the expected profits.

All six clubs have agreed to the imposition of a $1,000 fine against any team found violating the rules by offering players secret payments.

Financial headaches forced two teams to drop out of the league in mid-season last year. Welland Merchants withdrew at the end of January and Belleville Screaming Eagles after a short stint in Napanee, decided to call it quits about three weeks later.

This season, two new clubs have been added—Whitby McDonald's and Napanee Comets.

For Whitby, it means a return to senior hockey after a 15-year absence when the Dunlops captured the world amateur championships in Oslo.

Napanee, for years a top town for intermediate hockey, will get its first taste of full-time senior hockey.

The Whitby franchise appears on sound financial footing with the McDonald's hamburger chain supplying sponsorship.

"It is very likewise to make senior hockey go not only in Whitby but across the province," says Tom Fitzsimmons, vice-president of the McDonalds.

The club has a budget of $80,000 this season, with about $30,000 of that for the purchase of uniforms and equipment.

"With a new club you have to spend a lot of money," says Fitzsimmons. "We have the calibre of hockey players that will draw the people. It's a matter of letting the people know who is playing for their town."

Jim Cherry left a scoring post with Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League to join

Whitby is strong up the middle with the acquisition of goalie Bruce Durno and centre Bob Munro, two former standouts with the University of Toronto Blues who played last season for Canada's entry which captured the world amateur championships in Oslo.

The Belleville SACO Peewees took some final instructions from their coaches during a practice at Alemite Park Wednesday night. Friday morning the local team travels to Sault Ste. Marie for a best of three all-Ontario Peewee A Championship series. Heeding the words of coaches Ken Brooks (foreground) and Herb Coltman are Paul Soule, (foreground); Clarence Brookema (centre) and Don Turner.

Kingston Blanks Loyalist

Stinson Looks to Playoffs

KINGSTON (Special) — "And in the playoffs, anything can happen," he added.

Loyalist Jet couldn't make the big, fast St. Lawrence team. The winners scored twice in each half to take the Ontario Colleges Athletic Association eastern division win.

Manuel Brandao scored two goals with singles for Pat Murano and Frank D'Angelo.

Loyalist is at home to Durham College of Oshawa next Tuesday in a game which had been originally scheduled for Saturday. Game time Tuesday is 4 p.m. at Sir James Whitney School.

October 19, St. Lawrence of Brockville is the visitor for a 12:30 match which winds up the regular schedule.

Constellation Whips Canadian Durabla 9-3

Ron Mitchell had himself a points feast Wednesday night in the Gas House Hockey League. Mitchell led his team, Constellation Carpets, to a 9-3 victory over Canadian Durabla with two goals and four assists.

In another Gas House game Wednesday night, Stanley Structures dumped Chuckwagon Foods 6-3.

Mitchell wasn't the only player to come up with a pair of goals for his team. Keith McConnell and Myles McDonnell each fired two and Wayne Andrews, Greg Bellis and Ken Vos all had one goal apiece. Vos also added three assists to his scoring effort.

Doug Stewart, Dave Woods and Dick Robinson replied for the losers.

Ted Rowland was the only double scorer for Stanley Structures. Wayne McCreachy had a goal and two assists and Bob Mulvihill, Bob Wheelan and Ron Gauvin all had singles.

John Smith and Dave Middleton were the only scorers for Chuckwagon Foods.

Only 74 Fans Show For Game in Moncton

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The World Hockey Association might think twice before scheduling another pre-season game at Moncton, N.B., where only 74 fans turned out Wednesday night to see the WHA Cougars take on their North American Hockey League farm club.

The Cougars, led by Dave Walter's three goals, beat Long Island Cougars 10-4 in the almost-empty 7,000-seat arena.

In Wednesday's only other exhibition match involving a WHA team, Rhode Island Reds of the American Hockey League beat the WHA New England Whalers 5-1.

Don Gordon scored twice for Chicago with single goals from Rick Morris, John Pupiel, Gary MacGregor, Bob Liddington and Joe Hardy.

Daryl Maggs, Rod Zaine, Brian Coates and Brian McFall replied for Long Island.

Left wing Bob MacMillan scored two goals in the third period to lead Rhode Island.

MacMillan, 22, who moved to the AHL this season after playing two seasons for Minnesota in the WHA, snapped a 1-1 tie at 4:19 of the third period when he fired a 10-foot backhander past goalie Al Smith.

Then at 9:45, MacMillan scored on a power play, firing home a 10-footer from the left side after taking Pierre Lacasse's pass and faking Smith to the ice.

The Reds opened the scoring at 12:20 of the first period when Norm Dennis deflected a slap shot by John Bednarski past Smith.

New England tied the count at 17:05 of the second period when Terry Caffery drilled in a rebound of Al Karlander's shot.

Wolves Come On In Third

SUDBURY (CP) — Three unanswered goals in the third period gave Sudbury Wolves a 7-4 win over Kitchener Rangers Wednesday night in the only Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game scheduled.

The Wolves now have four wins and three losses while Kitchener has two wins and five losses.

Mike Gandle and Paul Crowley scored for Wolves in the first period while Kitchener had goals from Dwight Foster, with two, and Dan Diakakeris to give the Rangers a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period.

In the second period, Bob Russell and Crowley put the Wolves ahead 4-3 only to have Joe Fortunato tie the score late in the second period.

Rod Schutt scored twice for the Wolves in the third period and Ron Mason completed the scoring.

Don Edwards was called on to make 45 saves in the Kitchener net. Jim Bedard made 17 saves for the Wolves.

Mike Jqkubo Leads Red Wings

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Mike Jakubo scored two goals and sparked Virginia Red Wings to a 5-3 victory over Baltimore Clippers in the American Hockey League season opener Wednesday night.

Jakubo scored the Wings' first goal with only 6:39 gone in the first period and then produced what proved to be the

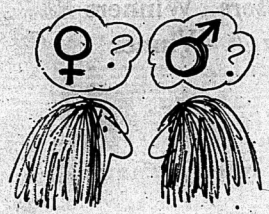
Firestone STORES



In this uncertain world...

it's nice to know

we guarantee everything.

Car care is one place you don't want any uncertainties. We know how you feel. That's why we guarantee everything. With written guarantees on tires, brake service, alignment and batteries. And with our Customer Satisfaction Guarantee on everything else.

In either case, you can be sure of one thing. We will bend over backwards to make sure you feel good about coming to Firestone Stores. The best way to do that is to earn your confidence. And that's really why we guarantee everything.

Our written guarantees mean just what they say. If our products don't measure up, we'll replace them. If our service work isn't right, we'll do it again. You'll agree that no fair-minded person could ask for anything more.

Here's how our 40,000 mile alignment guarantee works. Bring your car in for our special $19.95 alignment. (That surprisingly low price is for any North American car). We'll give you an Alignment Service Agreement good for 40,000 miles or four years. With that guarantee, you can have your alignment checked at any Firestone Store every 5,000 miles — or whenever you think necessary. If your car needs an alignment, it gets an alignment. With no extra charge for the life of the guarantee. There's no red tape or loopholes. Even if you hit a curb three minutes after an alignment, you can bring your car right back in and we'll do another alignment free.

Our written guarantees are one reason why Firestone looks after more brakes than anyone else in Canada. The guarantees run from 20,000 to 40,000 miles, depending on how much you want us to do.

With this 30,000 mile drum brake overhaul, we install new linings, repack front outer wheel bearings, arc linings to drums, resurface drums plus brake system.

By the way, we return worn parts in a plastic bag. So you can see for yourself how much they needed replacing. And, of course, we never do any additional work without your approval.

As you'd expect, the number one drum brake people are first for disc brakes too. There's a lot of care and skill behind this 30,000 mile guarantee. It covers installation of new front disc pads, repacking front outer wheel bearings, resurfacing front rotors, plus inspection of entire brake system.

In this uncertain world, there is nothing more annoying than a dead battery. There are so many starts built into the Lifetime Supreme that we guarantee starting for as long as you keep your car. Literally. If your battery lets you down a year from now... five years from now... or even ten years from now... bring it back. And we'll replace it. Free.

We even guarantee TRACTION

If you shop around for winter tires, you'll hear a lot of traction promises. But talk is cheap. We put traction in writing. If your Firestone snow tires let you down, we'll pay for your tow (up to $7.00)! How can we afford to make this offer?

Because we know what our tires can do. They can pull you through. So why settle for idle promises... when Firestone guarantees traction! When it's time for traction, head right for Firestone... where even the lowest priced winter tires are guaranteed to go. See actual guarantee form for full details, and get a copy of our guarantee explanatory folder "Here's what we mean when we say "We Guarantee Everything." Ask about our Riding System Safety Inspection Service. We offer this service free of charge to detect possible problems so that they can be corrected before they become dangerous.

Lovers: Losers, Winners But Mostly A Winner

By JIM SMELLIE
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Theatre Guild opened its new season Wednesday night at the Pinnacle Playhouse with a play called Lovers.

The play by Irish playwright Brian Friel, is divided in turn into two one-act plays, Winners and Losers.

And under director Jim Alexander, the Guild is clicking this vehicle to open the 1974-75 season has come up with a winner, judging by audience response.

Both stories are set in Ireland in the present and director Alexander had to work on the Irish accents of the actors.

The set design, also by Mr. Alexander, is austere and functional.

In the first play Winners, the roles of the two young lovers are played by Steve Bone and Sharon Poitras.

Mag Eswright is 17 and pregnant. She is to be married in three weeks to Joe, Brennan, who is 17½.

The two are studying for their final examinations on a warm June day on an hillside overlooking the Irish countryside. Well, at any rate Joe is studying.

Mag is happiest just thinking about planning. Mrs. Joseph Brennan. So while Joe sits about learning facts in his books, Mag is dreaming instead, hoping, wishful of what is ahead.

The two are full of youth, hope and expectation for the future together, and with the narrator's help, it comes.

Also in the play are two narrators played last night by Maurice and Joyce Sykes. Understatedly and matter-of-factly they slowly reveal to the audience in chronicle fashion that the pair are doomed lovers.

By adding little counterpoint of narration and action, Friel has been said it emphasizing the relative pallor of cold information when posed against the reality of unformed and silly but living individuals.

It has been said that by lifting the two young lovers as Winners he is clearly telling us that their lives had they continued, would have been doomed to failure.

Sharon Poitras manages to put across an idealistic, immature girl, intent, and indefinitive girl content to shout to the world from a hilltop that she loves Joe Brennan.

Steve Bone conveys to the audience an ambitious, realistic, diligent student. But their interaction towards each other could be strengthened or made more clear.

They are, after all, lovers yet during Wednesday's performance they seemed to be separate entities.

The narrators, Maurice and Joyce Sykes add just the right touch of detachment and remoteness in a role responsible for conveying suspense and pathos in the play.

Losers, on the other hand provided good interaction of all four characters with a special treat provided by Ted Bairstow and Diane Coyne as a pair of passionate lovely middle-aged lovers trying to reformat a conniving bed-fellow and—determined to cool their ardor.

That is, unlike the first one which could be set anywhere, it is distinctly Irish in tone complete with humor, religious overtones, family relationships and accent.

Diane Coyne and Ted Bairstow play Hanna and Andy who, in their early courting days, had the only place to display their love for each other is the couch in the living room of Hanna's home.

The only catch is her mother, played by Iris Sanderson. She is confined to bed upstairs and whenever a prolonged silence creps up the rings a bell to cost their passions. As long as there is conversation, the bell is silent.

Yet during Wednesday's repetee poetry in between their passionate lovemaking. This provided for some hilarious moments as does the exuberance Hanna throws herself in towards her suitor.

The relationship of the mother and daughter is just as crucial in this play as the relationship of the "doting" lovers.

A critic has said that the lovers in Losers are doomed because they have lived past their youth. For past passionate moments as living individuals and have become trapped by the very things the winners escaped from.

So while the two young lovers are freed by death, the old lovers are trapped by life. The play runs until Saturday and again next week from 8:30 to 10. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Festival Outlines Plans

TORONTO (CP) — The Guelph Spring Festival, begun in 1964 as a spin-off of Festival Canada, the successful Centennial project which brought together musicians throughout the country, released plans Wednesday for its 1975 season.

The festival will go into its eighth season next year with an artistic schedule designed to appeal to varied tastes.

The festival, scheduled to run from April 26 to May 11, will open with Raffi Armenian conducting the Stratford Festival Ensemble in an all-Bach program.

Among other performers will be tenor Jon Vickers; who will join forces with pianist Rudolf Firkusny in a program devoted to the works of Czechoslovakian composers.

Handels's opera Acis and Galatea, with tenor Jonathan Rigg and soprano Heather Thompson singing the title roles, will play for three days.

Symbony and th e Toronto Mendelssohn Choir will perform selections from Bach with the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra.

Canadian films and a special Canadian Music Day will also be part of the scheduled events.

a performance by Oscar Peterson, Canadian jazz artist, who will play and sing his interpretations of modern classics as well as his own compositions. Other events scheduled are performances by the Tokyo String Quartet, the Toronto

'Father Knows Best' Son Now Motorcycle Racer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — He looks pretty much the same as he played Robert Young's son in the television series Father Knows Best.

But there is little other resemblance between the fictional Bud Anderson and the real Billy Gray.

Billy is 26, now and he makes his living as a motorcycle racer in Southern California speed tracks two, or three nights a week.

It's an exciting sport; I love it," he says. "It also pays for itself and gives me a little pocket money, too."

He doesn't need much. He has been divorced twice and has no children. Fifteen years ago when he came of age and collected his earnings as a child actor, he bought a modest home atop a hill in Topanga Canyon.

He rents half of it for additional income.

Acting work? "I'm not too interested in television jobs," he said. "Features are pretty hard to get unless you're Jack Nicholson. The last work I did was a movie with the Jones boys of years ago."

Part of the reason for the lack of jobs in films and TV, he suspects, is a long-ago mishap with the law.

"I got busted for grass," he said. "So the police stopped me and found some stems and seeds in the car. That was 12 years ago but people still remember. When people see me on newsdays, they say, 'Gee, you look good!' I think they expect me to be some strung-out junkie."

He isn't. Billy Gray is smooth-shaven, with hair no longer than the normal style of today. His motorcycle rigors keep him lean and muscular. His outlook is realistic, his attitude friendly.

Billy started with the Hollywood legend that child actors become washed-up adults.

"Most of the kid actors that I knew have become relatively unhappy people. It might have something to do with not being able to make the transition from being the centre of attention to having to make it on their own.

"I don't think child actors suffer from being thrust into an adult world. If any thing, that's an advantage.

"In our society children are not given responsibility proportionate to what they can handle. They are kept children too long in the most important sexual and personality frustrations."

As for himself: "I've had my share of depression. But every life has ups and downs. On balance I've been very fortunate."

He began acting at 6 and played feature roles in such films as To Each His Own, Jim Thorpe, All-American and Moonlight Bay.

By the time he was picked for Father Knows Best, his salary had reached $500 a week.

"Later the producer said he was going to make two shows a week, and he would pay me $250 a show," Gray recalled. "The court agreed to the contract but after a year the filming went back to $ha a week. So my salary was cut in halves, I figure. I lost $100,000."

By the end of the television series, he was earning $1,000 a week but during much of the five years he was supporting his mother and younger brother.

Professional Gambler Makes Film Debut

NEW YORK (AP) — Amarillo Slim, who says he has "acted all my life but not in front of the camera," has finally made his film debut.

The well-known professional gambler makes a brief appearance as himself in California Split, a film about compulsive gamblers starring George Segal and Elliott Gould.

"I was hired as a technical adviser, they told me, but when I got up there in Reno Nev.), all of a sudden they wanted me to play cards," drawled Thomas Austin Preston Jr. better known as Amarillo Slim.

Did his acting experience at the poker table become handy in film acting?

"Yeah," he nodded in his manner. "I was relaxed. Unconcerned. I didn't give a damn about those cameras. I did what I've been doing all my life."

Slim added, however, he has no desire to go into the movies. He says "now hope to keep playin' poker for the rest of my life."

California spit is being promoted as a film that glamorizes gambling. Does he recommend gambling as everyone's pastime?

"No." The cornflower blue eyes in the lined, narrow face opened wide. "I'm not for legalized gambling even. I feel it would cause too much of a hardship on people who cannot afford it.

Slim said poker, a game known in the United States, is getting popular as a spectator sport.

"Poker as a spectator sport would be very, very dull. And yet, now that poker has advanced to a new game called Hold 'em, all of a sudden it's spectating because at these open cards the game calls for; you can relate to it even though you are not in it. You can get out when it's bluffing and who's on to something."

Hold 'em is a variation of seven-card stud in which each player is dealt two cards face-down. Five cards are then dealt face-up in the middle of the table as a community pile. The winner must combine his high hand he can out of his two hole cards and three from the community pile.

It is the game the world's top players play at the World Series, the annual tournament that started informally among friends and became a public event in 1969. Slim won it in 1998 and 1972.

"It's the most popular high-stakes poker game. If any card player ever says Hold 'em for three days he'll forget all other forms of poker," he said.

Your Horoscope

By RESNICK BEDEGROL

Friday, Oct. 11

Aries (March 21-April 19). Yes, must-be very careful today that you're not extra-nice to someone at the expense of another. If you do, you'll be in for it.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). You'd still be wise to rely more upon yourself for what you want done than to depend on another. His price for services rendered will be high.

Gemini (May 21-June 20). Something that you will commit yourself to casually will be taken seriously by another. Consideration. Explain to another.

Cancer (June 21-July 22). It would be good public relations on your part to keep your mate informed in advance of money you intend to spend for a family need.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Use your words very selectively today. Be sure they can't be twisted by one you have a problem with in reply as entirely different meaning.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). If you have a little extra money at this time, it might be a good idea to try to clear up at least part of an old obligation to a friend.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). You still feel selfless a certain pose unless you tackle the obvious problems head-on. Don't skirt the issues.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22). Your best opportunities today are of a fleeting nature. Act promptly. Your indecision in time situations are more complex.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21). A proposal you are suggesting is not being acted upon. The other parties have motives they're not revealing.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). If you make certain changes based upon your insight things will go smoothly. Progress will be hampered if another casts the dark.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be sure in a situation where you have a shared interest that the other party doesn't intend to lay all the burdens at your doorstep.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) The unusual or unexpected is things that will pop up you'll handle in stride. You'll still have difficulty with something that's been a problem before.

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is disclosed by a "blood profile" prescribed as part of a routine examination? Does it indicate cirrhosis, diabetes, [illegible] disease, high cholesterol etc.?—P.R.

Depends on what kind of a blood profile I assume you mean. "Profile" is a group of appropriate tests designed to reveal (or rule out) disease in one organ or organs, or to identify special chemical abnormalities.

These profiles are made possible by automated methods of chemical analysis of blood. This permits specified groups of tests to be done readily and at lower cost.

A "liver profile" would give a clue to cirrhosis. A lipid (fat) profile would show the situation as it concerns cholesterol and triglycerides in the blood—important to know.

For diabetes, a glucose tolerance test rather than a "profile" would be in order. And specific tests for syphilis and gonorrhea would be used in a search for venereal disease, but they would be specific tests, not broad profiles.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause a hissing sound in your ears? It sounds like steam hissing. My doctor checked my ears and blood pressure and said he didn't know what would cause it.

I am also under an allergist for weekly shots. He told me the shots would not cause this sound. Can you help me?—Mrs. E.S.

I'll have to admit that these odd ear noises (quite a common annoyance) sometimes can't be traced to any particular cause. Other times they can. High blood pressure is often implicated—but you've been checked for that.

Medications can cause it, and aspirin is one of the commonest offenders. Do you take regular aspirin? As to the allergy shots, your allergist would know whether other patients' have trouble from the shots—and he tells you they do not.

Sometimes some defect in the ears is involved, perhaps not an obvious defect, so you have the option of seeing an ear specialist.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would it be possible that in the future drinking could be added to the drinking water so that nobody would become alcoholic?

Then when they wanted to become pregnant they could take pills. This would eliminate all birth control devices and also get rid of the trouble attached to them.—Mrs. J.H.

Sorry, but that's a way-out idea that would hardly be practical or safe. And pretty soon the fat, too, if such a chemical could be found to put in water.

Be serious, and pretty soon you'd avoid the harmful effects which [illegible] in the water would have on some people (infants, children, old people, ill people, men, and others) who might be sensitive to the medication! As it is, some women are unable to take "the pill," as they can't. But your way would force the medication on everybody.

For another thing, you would have no way at all of regulating the amount given to people; it would depend on how much water they drank.

Just forget the idea.

Dear Doctor: Do you pronounce your name Thosteson or Tosteson?—E.B.

I pronounce the "Th"—THOSS-te-son.

Kenya Trains Corps

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The training program for Peace Corps volunteers in Kenya now is run by Kenyans rather than by Americans, Bruce Mazda, Peace Corps director, announcing this said the Peace Corps in Kenya is the first to turn the training responsibility over to the host country.

Opening lead—K ♦

By Oswald and James Jacoby

After his Stayman three club bid had produced a three-diamond rebid by South, North jumped in six notrump to deny a four-card major. This bid represented the full strength of his hand plus a trifle more. With 3 breaks in hearts and clubs, South could run off with all the tricks.

South was not a believer in Santa Claus and wanted to give himself the best possible play for 12 tricks. He could count 11 winners and decided to develop a squeeze in case either opponent had both red suits stopped.

He ducked the first trick. This maneuver is known as ventilating the count. South still had his 11 sure winners. He was trying for 12.

After that start he was all over for the defense. South won the second diamond cashed the ace-king-queen of spades, delivered dummy with a high club and cashed the jack of spades. That play squeezed East. He had to check a club or a heart and either discard gave South the slam.

You should note that if South won the first trick the squeeze could never develop, since East could never be forced to throw either a heart or a club.

CHARD Series 4

The bidding has been:

Pass	5 ♦	Pass	7 ♠
Pass

You, South, hold:
♠ A K Q 8 4 3 ♥ A 7 4 2 ♦ Q 4 ♣ K Q 8 7

What do you bid now?

A—If your partner will answer and find a four-card major suit in his blank-wood, bid it. Otherwise pass.

TODAY'S QUESTION
Tabbed at 5 holding three notrump your partner has bid four clubs and you have three hearts. What do you do now?

Got Name From Rock

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Arkansas's capital, Little Rock, derived its name from a moss-covered rock jutting out from the south bank of the Arkansas River. The rock was both an early Indian landmark for easy fording of the river and also indicated to travellers on the trail to the Ouachita Mountains.

IN MEMORIAM

BOYES — In loving memory of our dear dad, Norman (Judd) Boyes, who died October 16, 1972.

A sacred words of comfort,
In the days gone by,
One took him in a message,
"Come home, dad, I die."
He knew, by love, we could not part,
So he left us in sorrow of one's heart.

The years may wipe out many things,
But they wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days,
When we were all together.

Lovely flowers may fade,
But memories remain,
Of a loving husband, dad and grandpa,
Who lives with Jackie.

BOYES — In loving memory of our dear father, Albert (Ab) who passed away on Oct. 1, 1971.

Though your stone is now covered,
With autumn leaves so brown,
We know you are many miles away,
Of you Dad, we loved so much.

Sadly missed by Mom, Ruth, Bob, Ron and Sandra, Grandchildren and Great-grandchildren.

BOYES — In loving memory of our dear father, Albert (Ab) who passed away October 1971.

Softly the leaves of memory fall,
To keep the memory and treasure them so,
Dearest, unheard, yet always near,
Still loved, missed and very dear.

Forever remembered by son Wallace, daughter-in-law Ruth, grandsons Cindy and Ronnie.

BOGGS — In loving memory of Bessie, a our mother and grandmother, who died October 16, 1973 (Thanksgiving Day).

Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days,
Sadly missed by her heart and home,
Memories remember she left behind.

Sadly missed by her daughter Mary and son-in-law Ken Hall and Cathy.

BOYES — In loving memory of our dear father and granny John Arthur Boyes, who passed away October 16, 1960.

Those we loved give if we could
Them back again,
"Gentle Dad," in the same old way
To have you back for one more day,
To sit and talk with you awhile,
We were so close, so happy then.
Perhaps it was for wisdom's sake
We had to learn to say goodbye,
It's a day to think, to remember,
We mourn for you in silence,
We cry not for you to see,
But keep a part of you with me.

Sadly missed by daughter Evelyn, son-in-law Ken, grandchildren Sandra, Wendy, Glenda, Kenneth and Timothy.

to avail yourself of a 10% mortgage. This well kept home has seen numerous prudent improvements during our tenure with low interest rate mortgages. We have a long, low three bedroom split level on the west side. A three bedroom high ranch on the east side, a good family home in the west side and a mansard roofed home in the east end. Not only do these houses have a lower interest rate, but the asking price is far below the reproduction cost.

LARGER HOMES

We have a choice of three, four bedroom houses on the west side. Two have the added attraction of over 2,500 square feet and one has 3,000 square feet. Each one has a family room with fireplace. We have two and a half bathrooms in most settings. Each of them has a family room and fireplace.

Most of these houses are nearing completion but there is still time to select paint and flooring colors.

Yukon Commissioner Wants Apron Strings Snipped

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — The question of self-government for the Yukon Territory is just one of the "people problems" facing this northwestern sector of Canada.

James Smith, commissioner of the territory since 1966, says the day must come when apron strings to the federal government in Ottawa are severed but he doesn't care to guess when that will be.

"It's an indeterminate date in the future when Ottawa decides it is politically appropriate to make the Yukon a province. At the moment there is no formula by which this is decided. It will be a political decision."

The federal government provides the money for the Yukon budget and Mr. Smith said the executive committee, comprising two elected councillors and three territorial officials, has a lot to say about how spending is planned.

Commissioner Smith said the Nov. 18 territorial election will be a big step toward more self-government.

After the vote, the council's size will increase to 12 members from the current seven. The executive committee will increase to six members and a third elected councillor will be added.

The commissioner said he hopes elected members will each have a majority on the executive committee.

The test of political maturity for the Yukon will come when political parties decide to run candidates seeking to elect a majority and control the council.

"The New Democrats and Liberals plan to field candidates but Yukon Conservatives said they consider a 13-member council too small for partisan politics. They said they would run candidates in a 15-member council.

Councillor Ken McKinnon, who has spent 19 years in local politics, said there is not much local input and that he is tired of "being governed from 3,500 miles away by nameless, faceless bureaucrats who make all the decisions".

He said the idea of self-government will be an important part of his re-election campaign and predicted the territory will be a province within five years.

His priorities for the territory are self-government, settlement of Indian land claims and control of resource development and revenues.

Another great debate in the Yukon is on the issue of population growth.

Commissioner Smith said he doesn't believe that those living in the Yukon want to see the territory stagnate.

"And they don't want to see it populated with hibernats, either. They don't object to those who want to put their roots down."

He said that in order to encourage more people to come to the North every employer is providing an incentive—higher wages, subsidized housing and food from stores that get company aid.

A partial solution to the "people" problem and a stable labor force would come when Indian land claims were settled and the native population became accustomed to modern life.

Commissioner Smith expressed concern that the federal government is negotiating with the Indians without informing the remainder of the population who should be prepared for the settlements to come.

The land claims settlements would add to the growing list of conditions to which people living in the territory must adjust.

Change and contrast are constant factors in the Yukon.

Outside workers on special projects get big money. Miners at the Ashbish River power project, some 400 a week working in the underground tunnels and powerhouse.

Meantime the natives of Old Crow, an Indian village beside the Arctic circle, only recently gained transportation access when an airstrip was built. And Indian women use traditional skills to clean fish at Klukshu, near Haines Junction.

At Dawson City, the site of the famous gold rush at the turn of the century, there is a winter population of 700. In the summer, three times that number. The townspeople cater to thousands of tourists who pour in to view the decaying wreckage of that boom town and see how it is being restored.

Ice, Crew Strike Hampered Newfoundland Fishing Haul

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland's commercial fish landings, steadily declining in recent years, will likely hit an all-time low this year.

The federal fisheries service says landings for the first eight months of this year decreased 178.4 million pounds below the same period in 1973 to 284.1 million pounds.

Fishermen on the province's east coast were hampered by heavy ice all spring and early summer. Further north the ice was so heavy that fishing crews did not venture out until late July to set their cod traps, fearing that drifting Arctic icebergs would destroy them.

A six-week strike by crews this summer put vessels inactive resulting in the loss of several million dollars to fishermen, plant works, processing firms and others connected with the industry.

The strike stressed more clearly than any other action in recent years the province's dependence on the centuries old industry.

When fishermen and processors were deadlocked, the provincial government moved in and made suggestions that the fishermen back to sea.

However, not all fishermen taking part in the dispute were satisfied with the terms offered and a few crews even refused to sail.

What former premier Joey Smallwood used to call the "hanging expression" on the faces of fishermen has all but gone. The trawlermen, trappers, longliners and small liner men are unified as never before.

This year's biggest problem, the deep-sea strike, was mainly the result of a price disagreement between the fishermen and the fish merchants. But there were other factors.

The fishermen, the backbone of the industry, are demanding better compensation. They contend that thousands employed by government and industry earn much higher wages under much less arduous conditions than the fishermen who often work 18 to 20 hours a day when at sea.

The days of the dorymen, the leaden jigger and the longliners are over. Today's fisherman, whether he works on a modern trawler or in the inshore fishery, has to be better equipped than his simply outfitted forerunner.

He has to be more skilled and prepared to spend longer hours at sea for a dwindling catch and his only consolation is he might receive a better price.

Processors say they cannot pay last year's prices to fishermen because of slack conditions on the United States per cent of Newfoundland's fish products.

They say the U.S. market has been swamped with cheap Japanese and Korean fish and the movement of Newfoundland cod blocks was almost at a standstill during the strike.

Fish, like almost everything else the province produces, is almost exclusively an export product and the industry depends mainly on situations and trends in other countries and other governments.

However, despite the setback on the American market, there is encouragement for the industry, especially in the salt cod section where demand is good and prices have never been as high.

The fishermen are looking increasingly to both the provincial and federal governments for help in solving the problems.

The trawler crews returned to the fishing grounds after the six-week strike after Premier Frank Moores promised in a lengthy statement that with the backing of the fishing companies and the fishermen's unions, would set up a fishery advisory board, a conciliation board and an industrial inquiry board.

Premier Moores said, "The government of the day and the fish companies will form a team to speak as one voice to the federal government on long-term solutions for the industry and try to ensure that disputes such as the one among the trawlermen and the trade this summer will not occur in the future."

The federal and provincial governments paid compensation totalling $2 million this summer for ice-damaged gear. Millions more were paid out in extended unemployment insurance benefits and special work programs.

Smoking Dangerous To Bones

LONDON (CP) — Apart from what it does to your lungs, smoke pollution can break your bones, says a London scientist.

Dr. T. P. Eddy of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine reported his findings after a study of fatal accidents resulting from falls in Britain and the United States.

In both countries, he said, there was a correlation between levels of smoke pollution and the number of deaths of elderly patients who had suffered broken thighs.

His research showed the pattern of deaths from falls was almost identical with the pattern of smoke in the atmosphere in both countries since 1925. There had been a drop during the war years followed by a rise and a steady drop as smoke-pollution legislation took effect.

While the immediate cause of death of an elderly patient immobilized by a broken femur is usually a lung infection, Dr. Eddy said his analysis of data showed smoke pollution also makes the bones fragile by filtering out ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

The result, he said, is thought to be a deficiency of vitamin D, normally synthesized through the skin to produce healthy bones. Reduction of ultraviolet radiation cut down the natural synthesis and made the bones more brittle.

The study quoted figures from Leicester which showed that ultraviolet rays reached the centre of a city may be reduced as much as 50 per cent by smoke.

They Only Expected Twins

BALTIMORE (AP) — Names were given Wednesday to the four girls born as part of a pair of quintuplets to a Baltimore couple.

Charles Rohrer, the father, told reporters that he and his wife, Karen, 26, had named the girls Michelle Lynn, Sandra Elizabeth, Belinda Ann and Jennifer Louise.

The only boy, Russell Charles, was named shortly after the births.

The Rohrers had put two baby beds in one of the three bedrooms of their suburban home because they had expected twins.

But doctors at University Hospital here delivered quintuplets by caesarean section Tuesday.

About seven weeks premature, two of the infants had slight breathing problems but otherwise all were reported doing fine. The babies ranged in weight from two pounds eight ounces to three pounds nine ounces.

Amy Lieman, a student x-ray technician, described the maternity room conversation this way.

Mrs. Rohrer: "How many now?"

A doctor: "No."

"Three?"

"No."

"Four?"

"Let me just say it's under six."

"Oh, my God, how am I going to tell my husband?"

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Bread Wheat Stabilized

OTTAWA (CP) — The price of the basic ingredient in bread, wheat, would be stable in Canada until the middle of 1980 under terms of a bill introduced in the Commons Wednesday by Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board.

The bill is the proposed Two-Price Wheat Act, under which the government would subsidize the price of wheat used to make bread until Aug. 31, 1980. Millers would not have to pay more than $3.25 a bushel regardless of how high the international price climbs, this now is about $6 a bushel for the type of wheat used for bread in Canada, No. 1 western red.

The subsidy has been in effect for about a year and the bill, which would extend it for six years, would fulfil a commitment by the government last year.

A similar bill was introduced last year but died with the last Parliament.

The new bill also would apply to No. 1 western amber durum wheat as long as the wheat is sold for human consumption, basically in bread.

The subsidy, when the bill is passed by the House with an anticipated minimum of opposition, would be retroactive to July 1, 1974. Its Aug. 31 termination date coincides with the end of the 1979-1980 crop year.

Spicer Pushes School Exchanges

CASSELMAN, Ont. (CP) — Exchanges of high school classes between English and French communities would encourage better relationships between Canada's two main cultures, Keith Spicer said Tuesday.

Such a program would provide a "psychological as well as a linguistic payoff," the official languages commissioner said at the opening of a Eastern Ontario Liberal Federation meeting in Casselman.

Spicer said the tension in the Casselman-Cumberland district high school is less than in other communities 20 miles south and east of Ottawa.

He said Casselman, which is largely French-speaking could trade a class with a nearby English-speaking centre, such as Brockville. Education programs in both languages are similar and their academic progress could be assessed the same as in the students' own schools.

"I think a much more valuable payoff in language skills and, above all, inter-cultural understanding could be obtained by twinning and exchanging whole classes, with teachers, for a school term," Mr. Spicer said.

Under the program, parents would provide accommodation for the students, school boards would control academic credit and the Council of Ministers of Education would maintain their general supervision.

Although no money has been set aside for such a program, Mr. Spicer said the federal government might co-operate to pay students' travel expenses.

Dog Control Investigated

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — City council's general committee Wednesday proposed the appointment of an eight-member special committee to investigate dog-control measures after complaints that the Ontario Humane Society is not doing its job.

Councillor Cayo Killaby said the special committee would determine who could keep a dog, whether dogs could be kept in apartment buildings and how animals are to be kept in the city.

Councillor Bud Gregory, a member of the special committee, said the city must take more stringent measures for dog control and drastic changes would have to be made.

He said the municipality allowed the Humane Society to collect dog licence fees, hoping that the extra money would result in an improvement in dog control.

"It has not worked," he said.

Insp. Frank Brown, manager of the Humane Society shelter, declined comment.

Labor Wins Mandate To Stop British Skid

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson today attained majority control of the British Commons, strengthening his Labor party's ability to push through left-wing measures stalled by slight margins of minority government.

Second-day counting of ballots from Thursday's general election gradually edged Labor past the 319-seat mark that gives them an outright majority in the 635-seat house of the Conservatives failed to make up heavy losses they had suffered in early vote tabulation.

Conservative fortunes slumped disastrously as both Labor and the Scottish Nationalists picked away at the party's seats and there was speculation that Edward Heath's three-year leadership might be in jeopardy after a total of three election losses.

But Heath, who opened the way for Labor by putting his prime ministership on the line in a snap election last February, shrugged off any concern about the Tories' traditional propensity for dumping leaders.

His 36-year-old opponent as the first British prime minister since the 19th-century Disraeli to head four governments was expanding confidence from what the slow-moving statistics confirmed him as government head.

"I will soon be forming my fourth administration," he told reporters early today as he flew into London from his home constituency of Huyton in Lancashire, where he became the only one of the three party leaders to be returned with an improved personal plurality.

Heath, 58, last grinned in Sidcup in Kent county while the 43-year-old Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe lost a big slice of his Feb. 28 plurality of 11,000 in Devon North in the west of Engiand.

Thorpe, thwarted in his proclaimed bid to break the long-standing two-party tradition in the Commons, had lost ground and as the count reached its closing stages appeared to be going into the new Parliament with fewer than the 15 seats he had at dissolution.

Wilson had been 31 seats short of control when he obtained dissolution to try for majority rule and clear the way for a broad—if still somewhat vague—program aimed at pulling Britain out of her worst economic slough since the Depression.

But late indications were that his majority would be razor-thin and that Labor's more conservative left-wing policies—including a drastic tax-the-rich plan—would need delicate steering through Parliament.

Well into this afternoon, Wilson had not made a formal statement acknowledging his victory. Conceding defeat in opposition constituencies the loser before any victory speech.

With only a handful of seats left to be counted, Wilson's party had apparently retained all but one of the seats it held in the last Parliament. The single loss was to a Welsh Nationalist in Wales.

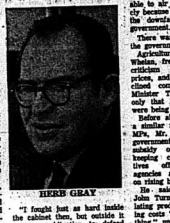
Gray Chastises Cabinet For Inaction on Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Herb Gray, free from the constraints of cabinet solidarity, turned on his former cabinet mates Thursday with a multi-faceted attack on the government's economic policy.

In his first Commons speech since being dumped from the cabinet in August, the former consumer and corporate affairs minister accused his colleagues of inaction in the face of rising food prices.

Increased production, the basis of the Liberal government's economic policy, is not sufficient to fight inflation, he said to resounding applause from opposition benches.

The MP for Windsor West, who formerly defended government policy as prices soared during the last Parliament, said in an interview his speech reflected the stand he took within cabinet, apparently with mixed success at times.



HERB GRAY

"I fought just as hard inside the cabinet then, but outside it was my obligation, to defend government policy," he said.

Gray, whose cabinet post was taken away by Prime Minister Trudeau in a shuffle of ministers after the October election, said he was able to air all my views publicly because it might lead to the downfall of our minority government."

There was little reaction from the government to his remarks.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, frequently a target of criticism over rising food prices, and other ministers declined comment while Prime Minister Trudeau's office said only that Mr. Gray's remarks were being studied.

Before about 15 Liberals and a similar number of opposition MPs, Mr. Gray chastized the government for withdrawing a subsidy on milk, effectively keeping consumer representatives off food marketing agencies and remaining mute on rising bread prices.

He said Finance Minister John Turner's policy of stimulating production to combat rising costs "will do little, if anything," unless increased supply is allowed by the government to push prices down.

Scots Scalp Tories

LONDON (CP) — The thrusting Scottish National Party (SNP), which had hoped to gain seats from both major parties in its bid to win eventual home rule for Scotland, found its attack blunted by solid Labor support in the cities but plucked several plums in fierce election counting closed for the night.

The SNP gains were all in rural districts—in Angus South, Perth and East Perthshire and Galloway. Nationalist George Thompson first stripped home in Galloway by 30 votes, the smallest majority in Britain so far, while in Perth and SNP's Margaret Bain had an impressive Tory majority of 6,600 to win by 797.

There was recounts in several other ridings with possibilities of other slim Nationalist victories.

The SNP failed, however, to oust Labor's hold on Glasgow and a particular blow was the defeat of Margo Macdonald, so-called "blonde bombshell" and vice-chairman of the party, in a recount after early byelection win at Glasgow Govan in 1973 but lost by 1,022 votes in only 200 votes in February. Her defeat Thursday was four times greater.

Meanwhile in Wales, the Welsh Nationalist party known as Plaid Cymru (PC), picked up a seat in Carmarthen and held on in Caernarvon and Merioneth. Gwynfor Evans, victory, cheered by an ecstatical, singing crowd, returns to Parliament himself, while Evans, the first-ever Welsh Nationalist MP in 1966. He won by 2,436 votes, by for by only three votes in February.

In Scotland, opinion polls had shown the SNP as the main force in Scottish politics after Labor and predictions by the firm counting officers were that it still might expect to double the seven gains made in February. But it needs 30 more than half the British phone to fulfil its plan to take a plea for independence to the United Nations.

The Nationalists held their February gains of Banff and Dundee east, but failed to dent traditional Labor bastions in Hamilton—scene of their first byelection win in 1967 — and other ridings in the central industrial belt.

The former Hamilton victor, Mrs. Winnie Ewing, now is defending the Scottish seat of Moray and Nairn which she captured in February from the Conservatives by a 30-year reign.

One Tory riding the Nationalists had hoped to capture with its slim 540 majority was Berwick and East Lothian, held the Earl of Ancram, the sitting Tory, went down to a Labor defeat.

SNP Chairman Billy Wolfe suffered a personal setback when he once again failed to oust Labor Lobbies from Labor.

News Briefs

FREDERICTON (CP) — Hard on the heels of two Progressive Conservative byelection victories, Premier Richard Hatfield today called a New Brunswick election for Monday, Nov. 18. The premier's announcement comes nearly four years after his Conservative government was office by defeating the former administration of Premier Louis J. Robichaud.

Servants Strike Dec. 31

TORONTO (CP) — The Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO) said a strike deadline Thursday of Dec. 31, should negotiations with the Ontario government currently in progress fail to produce an agreement by then. The union, representing 21,000 members of the province's operational services category — the largest unit in the 60,000-member association — is seeking a 61.5-percent wage increase in a one-year agreement.

Niagara Report In

OTTAWA (CP) — The American side of world-famous Niagara Falls should be protected to deteriorate naturally, the International Joint Commission (IJC) has been told by the board that looks after the United States part of the falls. The report culminated a seven-year study by an international team of experts called in after the shape of the falls began to change because the rock face was being worn away by the passage of millions of tons of water.

Milk To Hit 50¢

TORONTO (CP) — Dick Hutchison, production director of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, said Thursday the retail price of table milk will likely go up six cents a quart by Oct. 31.

Mr. Hutchison said the present average price of 44 cents for a quart of homogenized milk will rise to about 50 cents.

Mr. Hutchison said three cents of the increase is directly attributable to the federal government's decision to withdraw three cents of its five-cent-a-quart subsidy paid to milk producers.

He said a further increase of at least two cents is definite for February, when the government plans to cut off the rest of the subsidy.

He said the six-cent increase will mean that milk prices in Canada have risen 26 per cent since April 15 percentage rise identical to that in the United States during the same time.

Livestock Feed Hit

Poor Crops Will Send Prices Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A big loss in United States grain crops this year because of bad weather will send meat prices up again next year.

The U.S. agriculture department (USDA) said Thursday the corn crop will be down 16 per cent from the record 1973 harvest.

Soybeans, another livestock feed needed to produce meat, milk and poultry, will be down 19 per cent.

Earl Fearbery, USDA director of economics, said the reduced harvests will mean higher meat prices next year.

Food prices in the U.S. are expected to go up 15 to 17 per cent this year, one of th sharpest climbs since the Second World War.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns said the U.S. is in a recession, the assessment contradicting the one cited by President Ford at his Wednesday news conference.

—Wholesale prices in the U.S. levelled off in September as farm and food prices declined, the labor department said. The government's wholesale price index increased as adjusted one per cent last month after a two-month advance in 11 months. Without adjustment for seasonal influences, the index climbed one-tenth of one per cent.

—United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller said a nationwide coal strike is likely to begin Nov. 13 unless a negotiating impasse with the coal industry is broken.

Meat War in Wind

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States proposed a quota system Thursday to curb free trade and meat imports from Canada, in retaliation for the "highly restrictive" quota system the Canadian government has set up against an influx of American and other foreign cattle and beef.

U.S. officials said they expect to hear from American cattle producers in favor of quotas in view of the cattlemen's angry reaction to the Canadian quota system announced Aug. 2. The U.S. agriculture department has estimated it will cut American exports by $113 million.

Powell Gets Seat

BELFAST (Reuter) — Rebel English right-winger Enoch Powell was returned to the British parliament today—on the votes of a rural Northern Ireland constituency.

Campaigning as a United Ulster Unionist, the former holder of a Conservative party seat in the English Midlands defeated other candidates in the South Down constituency.

White Sees Higher Taxes

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer John White says taxes are likely to increase in many Ontario municipalities next year because the provincial government cannot come up with enough money to maintain the status quo.

In a speech prepared for a luncheon meeting of the Conference Board of Canada, Mr. White said 39 per cent of total government spending will be transferred this year to municipalities and local government boards and agencies.

Letter 'Misunderstood'

Don't Write MP, Servicemen Told

HALIFAX (CP) — A charge that Canadian servicemen have been ordered not to write to their members of Parliament is a "complete misunderstanding", Rear - Admiral Douglas Boyle, commander of Maritime Command, said Thursday.

He said there has been a misinterpretation of a letter sent to all armed forces personnel in September, which only "suggested" they direct their problems to their superiors before writing to MPs.

He said that in no way were servicemen being forbidden to write to their MPs.

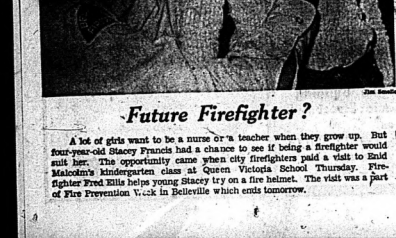
David MacDonald (PC-Egmont) said in the House of Commons Thursday that servicemen have been ordered not to write to their MPs about personal problems.

Mr. MacDonald said such an action constituted a serious violation of the rights and privileges of MPs.

Admiral Boyle said that until a directive was received from the defence minister's office, many members of the armed forces were bypassing their officers by writing to their MPs about problems.

The armed forces only wanted "first chance" at solving the problem. If a member of the forces is unhappy after discussing a problem with superiors, he has every right to write his MP.

Future Firefighter?



Jim Rankin

A lot of girls want to be a nurse or a teacher when they grow up. But four-year-old Stacey Francis had a chance to see if being a firefighter would suit her. The opportunity came when city firefighters paid a visit to Enid Malcolm's kindergarten class at Queen Victoria School Thursday. Firefighter Fred Ellis helps young Stacey try on a fire helmet. The visit was a part of Fire Prevention Week in Belleville which ends tomorrow.

Eskimos Can Now Buy Arctic Char, Seal Meat

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — Fresh cuts of Arctic char and harp seal are being sold for the first time in this northern community as Eskimos return to the nomadic diets their forefathers.

Previously, the sale of so-called country food was forbidden and widows or pensioners who received welfare cheques were often unable to obtain the meat they needed.

Likewise, children rarely enjoyed the treat of their native diet, which was often replaced with candy, pop and potato chips.

Now, however, the territorial game branch, with approval from the federal fisheries department, has begun a test fishery and hunting season in the half-Eskimo, half-white community of 1,600.

The prime purpose is to bolster the barely-subsistence economy of northern Canada and create jobs. But there are equally important emotional benefits, including the revival of the sale of seal and the salmon-like char, caught 220 miles north of here in Nettilling Lake.

Merely having the native food available in stores doesn't assure its sale, admits Jim Lewis, regional game branch chief. There must also be an education drive to lure the Eskimo that his old foods are better than the southern items his children prefer, he added.

Another encouraging sign in the government-sponsored program is not the country back on native food is a decided preference by Eskimos for traditional meals over school children's fish fingers and sealmeat fish lunches at government expense.

Currently, young Eskimos and Indian children receive a cup of cocoa and a vitamin-added biscuit from the government-sponsored breakfast.

"I've heard happy rumors that the money for the program has been approved," said Norm MacPherson, director of the education department. "But so far I have received no official confirmation."

In any case, he said, such a program "can't be far down the road."

A major factor in the retail of native foods is lower cost. Seal sells in Frobisher Bay for $2.99 a pound. Locally-baked white bread is 40 cents a loaf, apples go for 49 cents a pound and beef sells for $1.79 a dozen and reconstituted milk is 49 cents a litre.

Into this high-priced market place comes Arctic char, selling for just six cents more than the $1.99-a-pound wholesale.

No price has been set for seal meat, but it is expected to retail at 99 to 75 cents a pound, said Mr. Lewis. "No one's out to make a big profit on it."

Tony Gonda, manager of the Frobisher Bay Co-op that has been selling seal meat, said the Eskimo would rather eat seal meat than any other food.

Bryan Pearson, N.W.T. councillor for Frobisher Bay, suggested the territorial government also look at the retailing of caribou, but Mr. Land said caribou meat is not as popular as seal.

One of the reasons the government is interested in handling the pilot sealing project was an outcry from conservationists at the scene of piles of rotting seal carcasses on the ice and shores of the Arctic.

With seal skins bringing as much as $45 a pelt, and the Eskimo no longer relying on the animal for food, clothing and fuel, such scenes were inevitable.

Dam Gets Repairs

PICTON — Chairman of the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority, Henry Leavell this week announced Hillcrest Construction Co. of Consecon has received the contract for reconstruction of Consecon Mill dam.

Work includes rehabilitation of an existing concrete and pier adjacent to the mill and construction of a new overflow pier and retaining wall. A construction crew started work at the dam site Wednesday, Oct. 2.

Mr. Leavens also said Mr. Land and staff of the Bloomfield Mill Pond has begun. Most of this work will be completed by the John Leavitt Excavating and Grading Company, Bloomfield. Approximately 30,000 to 40,000 cubic yards of material will be removed from the pond site and stockpiled on property owned by the authority.

Tenders for the work will be offered for sale to the successful applicant in the Authority Office.

Two large culverts have been constructed for water storage in the event of a fire emergency.

Fall Tour Set For Sunday

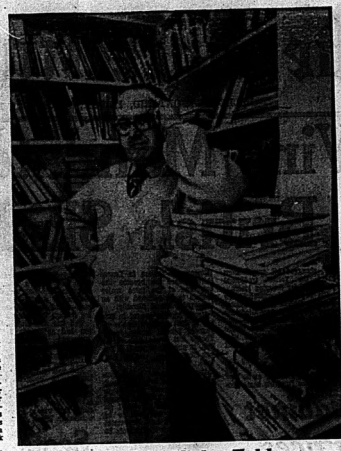
The Moira River Conservation Authority this Sunday afternoon will stage its second motor outing of the fall season — this time covering the southern end of the watershed.

Bus tours will leave the Information Advisory Board Chairman Bert Frisby Drive at Foxboro at 1 p.m. and proceed north by way of the Airport Road to Highway 62 and Highway 14 to Marmora.

A stop will be made at the Marmorvale Mine, John St. Pond, Roland Dam, Crowe River, Dam, O'Hara Mill, Black River, the Price Conservation Area at Actinolite, with the return to Belleville by way of the Thomasburg reforestation plot and the Thurlow wildlife project.

Two weeks ago a motor safari to the Deseck Dam and Lake of Flinders was staged and despite inclement weather about 12 cars took part.

This week Mr. Frisk is hoping for fine weather and more leaf coloring should be at its best.



Saturday Night Folds

After 57 years of publication, Saturday Night will cease, something of a national institution and an end of an era for some as the best of Canadian writing announced this week that it is suspending publication. Editor Robert Fulford indicated that readership and finances have dwindled and the magazine is cutting short a financial slide with its decision to fold. (CP Photo)

Lack of New Inspectors Hampers Unit Duties

A shortage of health inspectors across the province has prompted the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit to initiate action about the caribou of the region and couldn't find the risk of a commercial operation at present.

One of the reasons the government is interested in handling the pilot sealing project was an outcry from conservationists at the scene of piles of rotting seal carcasses on the ice and shores of the Arctic.

With seal skins bringing as much as $45 a pelt, and the Eskimo no longer relying on the animal for food, clothing and fuel, such scenes were inevitable.

The Health Unit will communicate with Loyalist College with the view of having a course set up for Eastern Ontario to train such inspectors.

Medical Health Officer C. R. Leslie said today about four years ago he had been contacted by Loyalist to see if such a course was needed. He had told college officials that there was such a need but the province had said there already was such a course at Ryerson in Toronto, and no action was taken.

But board members approved Mr. Dovitz's request with the suggestion that local MPP's be contacted to take the problem up at Queen's Park.

The discussion brought a comment from Prince Edward County board member Georgia Thompson who "said" he believes a layman with some training could do just as good a job with septic tank systems as could qualified health inspectors.

This brought a suggestion that provincial health authorities be contacted to see if the health act could be amended to allow for special certificates for septic tank inspectors.

Truck Loses Rear Wheel

TWEED (Special) — A loose truck wheel which came off a passing tractor-trailer caused $80 damage to parked cars earlier this week.

Police said that Allister Bartley of Mississauga was northbound on Victoria St. when one of the wheels on the back of his trailer came loose and rolled into two cars, by the Ernest Rogers driveway resulting in $80 damage.

The truck driver was unaware that he had lost his wheel until informed by provincial police several miles away. Mr. Bartley picked up the errant wheel on his return trip.

It was the second time that the Victoria St. address has been the target of passing

Accountants Meet

The Quinte District Chartered Accountants will hold a professional development meeting on Oct. 25 at Sun Luck Gardens. Speaking will be a representative from the Ontario Institute of Chartered Accountants. The Ontario Institute is at present considering making a certain number of hours of professional development courses mandatory each year for all chartered accountants.

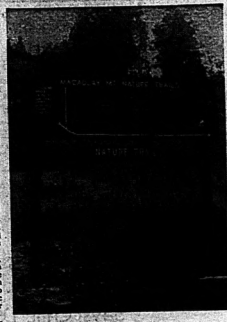
Authority Opens Trails

PICTON — Those "autumn leaves" are falling at the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority's Macaulay Mountain site and hikers are urged to walk its nature trails.

Secretary for the PERCA, Mrs. Helen Duggan, says a scenic route winds from the Macaulay Mountain recreation shelter through the woods to a quarry. Several rustic bridges have been built over the hiking trail.

Maps of the route are available throughout the week from the PERCA offices. On weekends and after 5 p.m. information can be obtained from a billboard sign at the foot of the trail.

The public is urged to use the nature trails and to enjoy the scenic stands of hemlock at Macaulay Mountain.



Trails Open

With Prince Edward County wood lots painted in fall wonder by the first frosty brush strokes of winter, nature trails through the Macaulay Mountain Conservation Area nature trails will provide an abundance of color for a family outing.

Firemen Use Cards To Battle Fires

TRENTON — A card system listing both aids and possible dangers to firefighters at 38 Trenton industrial plants will be completed shortly, says a fire department official.

In an interview this week Fire Chief Cecil Ellis said he believes Trenton is the only municipality of its size to start such a system. Departments in larger centres have the manpower to have completed one previously.

Basically, said Chief Ellis, the cards, to be carried by one of Trenton's five trucks, will categorize any aids or hindrances firemen will face fighting a fire at any one of 38 plants.

Besides a plant's location and name, each sheet will contain information on size of building, closeness to adjacent structures; number of floors, location of fire exits, sprinkler shut-off if any, and a description of any other unique situations.

Illustrating the system, Chief Ellis said one industry in Trenton stores drums emptied of their flamable liquids outside the plant. Should a fire break out, any remaining liquids in the drums would expand, and might explode, injuring firefighters.

The information sheets will make firemen aware of the potential danger not only to themselves, but will also forewarn them of possible fire-intensifying situations.

Firefighting strategy will also be that much easier to plan. The department will know where to feed water into the sprinkler system and where to find water for their use.

Preliminary information for the card system was gathered during last week's inspections by the fire department. It will be updated annually.

Chief Ellis said the idea for the card system was garnered while he attended the Canadian Association of Fire Chiefs convention recently.

To date, he said, reception by town industries has been good.

"We're going to ask them if they change the location of a hazard to notify us," he said. "The more they can tell us, the better off both of us will be."

Constable Joins Force

TWEED (Special) — With the addition of a probationary constable from Pembroke, the Madoc Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police now has a complement of 25 persons, on staff. The new constable is C. S. Robinson, who will report for duty Oct. 15.

The Madoc Detachment, headed by Sgt. Wilkinson, now has a staff of 18 constables, three corporals, one sergeant, two civilian office workers and a caretaker.

Blacksmith: Still Essential To Farm and County Life

PICTON — Minus a leather "village smithy" apron, Hugh Davies travels more than 30,000 miles annually, shoeing horses in the Quinte area.

With the advent of the automobile the blacksmith shops that once dotted Prince Edward slowly disappeared and, today horse owners rely on the travelling farrier.

A Picton resident, Mr. Davies has been interested in horses for a number of years and in 1973 attended the Western School of Horse Shoeing in Phoenix, Arizona.

There was no book work involved in his studies. Initial lessons focused on proper use of a forge. Students were taught how to shape shoes properly then taken to neighboring ranches where they practice-shod stock. Part of the eight-weeks course involved lessons in corrective shoeing.

Mr. Davies noted he and his classmates were instructed by a veterinarian who used X-rays to illustrate foot and leg conditions requiring special attention.

Although Prince Edward's early-day farriers chiefly shod work saddle animals used for show and pleasure riding, His regular customers are visited from every 4st to eight weeks for a trim or re-set. Peak season is from May to October when the show season is underway and pleasure riding at its most enjoyable.

Cold shoeing today has replaced the old hot shoeing method when blacksmith made their shoes and shaped them, standing, to the horses' hooves. Mr. Davies says this "hot foot" was, in fact, damaging to the hoof.

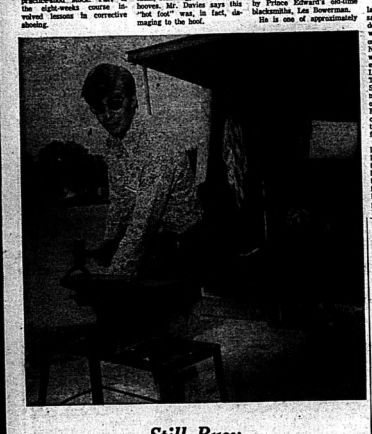
Today's blacksmith buys ready-made shoes and can shape them to fit the individual horse or pony.

Mr. Davies, who frequently shoes six horse or more on a busy day, feels riding clubs have increased the horseman's knowledge of foot care. Many youngsters belonging to these organizations learn through guest speakers and films the need for regular trimming and shoeing.

The farrier is the charter president of the Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club, organized about a year ago.

Mr. Davies travels west as far as Trenton, north to Stirling and east to Camden East, shoeing and trimming. He uses a portable forge that he built himself and an anvil and several tools once owned by one by Prince Edward's old-time blacksmiths, Les Bowerman.

He is one of approximately five travelling farriers serving the Quinte area.



Still Busy

The expression horse and buggy days, to many means a mention of the past. Prince Edward County resident Hugh Davies it remains the livelihood of his family. He is shown here working on a shoe at his portable anvil.

Hydro Outlines Plan For New Power Lines

PICTON — A 230,000 volt transmission line running from a point midway east of Napanee to a new transformer station near Picton will be recommended by Ontario Hydro to Minister of Energy D'Arcy McKeough for provision of additional electric power to Prince Edward County. Submarine cable will be suggested for the Long Reach crossing.

Norman Manning public relations officer, eastern region, said Thursday the proposed double circuit 230,000 volt line would run from a tap point on the Lennox agrees to the Napanee transformer station, westerly through North Fredericksburgh Township cross Long Reach near Green Point. The line would continue into Sophiasburgh township, running in a station site already owned by Ontario Hydro near Rednbrook. Total estimated cost is $4,134,600, not including the cost of the Rednbrook transformer station.

Mr. Manning said the total length of the recommended line would be 14.5 miles. Of this length, 10.1 miles would be conventional lattice steel towers 120 feet high and 800 feet apart. There would also be 2.3 miles of 80-foot steel poles with a 400-foot span and 1.1 miles or 5,800 feet of submarine cable crossing Long Reach.

For several months an Ontario Hydro study team has examined alternative routes and voltages for the transmission of additional electric power into the county.

An overhead line at Long Reach opposed by a group of Quinte area residents who formed the "Save the Bay" committee and earned support from the Sierra Club of Toronto.

Mr. Manning says use of submarine cable will cost approximately $700,000, more than an overhead line at the Long Reach crossing.

He noted the study team was formed in May, 1973, and has been working since that time on environmental assessment.

Ontario Hydro's recommendation for the 230,000 - volt transmission line will be be ready for submission to the minister of energy until December, 1974.

When the recommendation is forwarded, Mr. McKeough may or may not call public hearings. If Ontario Hydro next spring obtains an order in council from the lieutenant - governor to proceed, it would be three years before additional sources of electricity could be supplied to the county.

Nozzle Lesson

Trenton Fire Chief Cecil Ellis demonstrates the capabilities of the department's new fog nozzle. The innovative device allows firefighters to not only regulate the gallonage issuing from a fire hose but the type of water stream. A fine spray, shot into a fiery room, will tend to steam quickly and douse flames as effectively as a blanket.

Funds Pour In

A total of $11,375 has been pledged in the first two weeks of the United Way campaign Reports Gordon Mullen, executive director of the United Community Services. The annual fund drive is aiming for $140,000 by the end of the appeal.

Further Wage Demands Possible

Big Pay Boosts for Strikers Fuel The Inflation Cycle

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

This is the "restraint" that government has been calling for?

As promised in the recent Throne Speech, Ottawa is proposing to give striking civil servant grain handlers a wage-and-6-benefits increase that amounts to 40 per cent.

Granted, it is unjust to get the most back in week after six weeks of their strike. Grain is our most important export commodity.

But other important things — such as the future of the Canadian economy—are being ignored by government bent on ramming through this huge increase.

Will other unionized labor groups be guided by the government's generous "restraint" argument for restraint in demanding wage increases — or will they be guided by Labor Minister Marc Lalonde's argument that a 40-per-cent increase is justified for Vancouver grain handlers, and a 60-per-cent pay boost for strikers in the Great Lakes shipping trade?

Clearly, Mr. Lalonde's largesse with other people's money will serve to legitimize similar big demands by others.

Such "restraint" increases are justified, in Mr. Marc's view, by the report of conciliation officer J. Hall Pepper.

But a reading of that report, and of the Lalonde memo letter to the labor minister, will show that it was the government's mediation in the true sense, but rather a compendium of tasks the negotiators.

In the conciliation officer's words, they were "terms of settlement which, hopefully, might form a basis upon which the two parties could, ultimately, enter into a ten-year agreement."

The back-to-work legislation provides for a retroactive increase in the basic hourly wage (to $5.83 from $4.96 as of last Dec. 1 Starting next Dec. 1, the hourly wage goes to $6.65, supplemented by a cost-of-living allowance and a 6-month plan paid for by the employer.

Grain handling is hard work, and the cost of living increase will make it more tolerable.

As for the other companies, they will no doubt find a way to increase their charges so as to recoup the additional wage expense.

But that won't be the end of it.

The Pearson government's imposed settlement of the St. Lawrence Seaway workers' 1966 strike with a 30 per cent wage boost 1st-a time when inflation was in the neighborhood of three per cent a year) opened wide the door to similar inflationary increases for other powerful unions.

So, too, will the government's Vancouver and Great Lakes settlements of 1974. Bit other powerful unions demanded a higher pleasure, and make a mockery of the pious "restraint" Turner asked to be restrained by all Canadians in the interests of curbing inflation.

The government seems to be saying that it has settled the will nor the means to employ effective checks and balances that would, in the public interest, curb excessive economic power.

East German 'Fact' and Progress Now Is Fully Recognized Abroad

The German Democratic Republic, informally called in the press Communist East Germany, is 25 years old this month. It is a quarter century's nation which has gone from total isolation by all the non Communist world to diplomatic recognition by the United States Sept. 4.

The many Germans and others in the world who were afraid some kind of German unification after the Second World War would mean a resurgence of nationalistic Germany, might not have liked the tough Communist German state, but its existence inhibited a unified Germany.

But recently as Sept. 27, the East German "parliament" issued a document which states there is no such thing as "the German nation," which that nation now removed from the Communist nation's constitution.

As for West Germany or so-called by the Federal Republic of West Germany, the idea of a single German fatherland is still part of the political process.

West Germany recognized East Germany two years ago and the Basic Treaty of 1972 between the two Germanic states uses the term "the German nation" and still admits to its existence.

Most of this is beyond the concern of the average East German citizen who has at last caught up on the affluence of capitalistic and booming West Germany.

In fact the German Democratic Republic, like its counter its rightwing totalitarian regime, proves an identifiable middle class on the same aspirations for the good life as those in democratic Germany exist, can be nurtured in a political system where civil liberties as we understand them, are few and far between.

Long before East-West rapprochement became possible, mainly because of the continued obscenity of the Berlin Wall first built in the summer of 1961, East Germany could did a booming export trade between them, up to about half a billion dollars per annum by the mid-1980s.

East Germany now wants to expand that trade now that political relationships are more or less normalized.

Going back a few years, it now is hard to realize the extent to which the German Democratic Republic was the pariah of the West, moreso than other Communist-created state.

It was officially, a state which did not exist. Canadians travelling in the German Democratic Republic, also called the "DDR" initials for its German name, before Democratic Germany Republic, were told they were not in the DDR, but had happened to them while in that country.

Just how absurd this position became is best shown in the existence of the Russian embassy cat liner's operating between East Berlin, Copenhagen and Leningrad, Stockholm and Leningrad. This ship was built in the U.S.S.R., but in the Warnow West, East Germany's major shipyard.

Looking around the vessel, many of its fittings, including main engines and electrical equipment all have state company names pre-ambled with the initials "VEB." These mean "Volks Eigene Betriebe" or "The People's Own Industry" and are placed before the names of all of East Germany's large and growing state industries.

So, even if Ottawa once officially and stupidly said there was no such thing as the DDR, Canadian artists in the liner Alexander Pushkin were sailing across the Atlantic in a ship described as built in the non-existent state.

So much too for the inanities of diplomacy.

Municipal Needs

Ald. Cox, responding to The Intelligencer's memo on priorities, calls for progress on necessary amenities consistent with the taxpayers' means.

Among his recommendations — and there are of the kind any community must give thought to and are continuous of road rebuilding, preferably at an accelerated pace; an increase in the availability of serviced land for residential construction, and co-operation with the provincial government in defining realistic standards of servicing and development.

Mr. Cox also sees a need to remove restrictive regulations which run counter to the city's interests. He does not say what these are, but it is the rare municipality that does not need a periodic houseclean of this nature.

Adequate housing at prices people can afford — and this is a tall enough order in these inflationary days — and further industrial development are other needs in Ald. Cox' book. They merit the attention of citizens as Belleville moves once again into the municipal election orbit.

Water . . . Water

Some thoughts on Ald. Ben Corke's observations on the mutual interests of town and country, of Belleville and neighboring townships.

Take the matter of water supply, a necessity which in a country of such vast water resources would seem to be never in question.

In the city there is never any question as to supply. In the townships it can be a different matter.

Around Belleville, in Hastings and Prince Edward, and involving housing old and new, there is a rag-bag assortment of water supply and waste systems taking in wells, pressure pumps, cisterns, holding tanks and of course septic tanks which may or may not meet government and health standards.

Last week a man in the business of selling and servicing pressure pumps noted that he had had ten calls from homes without water — in Deseronto, Northbrook, Marmora, to name a few.

"It's big business," he remarked.

All this in the Canada of the seventies.

All this in the Canada where living in the country is concerned (and given in addition the rigors of the climate) a system of supply and waste disposal that can break down at any time. Broken pipes, a pressure pump's motor shot — that sort of thing.

To return to Ald. Corke's remarks about town and country. He says "our interests are so intertwined that we cannot forever go our separate ways," and he suggests mutual benefit through such facilities as libraries, recreation, parks, cultural and allied facilities.

He is right of course. Water for one thing should be the right of every householder, and this means the assumption of responsibility for it by the local authority.

All the time, homes are being built in the country without benefit of an assured supply at all times. There are only the kind of systems to which we have referred, and these are subject to breakdown or dislocation of one kind or another.

Some people in the townships even have to buy water.

It is not good enough.

And this, we repeat, in the Canada of the seventies.

Farm Talk

"Science and mechanics go beyond the feeding and cleaning of barns and odors should be as out of place in society as straw hats and bib overalls." That's the word from William E. Petrie of R.R. 4, Rockwood in a letter to Madoc Review columnist Bob Trotter. It was sparked by some observations by Trotter on farm odors and urban romanticism. Petrie noted further that farmers and city folk don't understand each other all that well. To which we might say, it's the way of the world, with nations and ide-

October 17 By-election

NDP Comes on Strong in Stormont

By DON O'LEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

CORNWALL — George Samis is a 31-year-old school teacher, originally out of Montreal but a resident here for seven years, bilingual, old when eldermarried, early established head of carrying the hopes of the NDP of taking the Oct. 17 provincial by-election.

Already Samis has one achievement to his credit. He has put the NDP into a position where for the first time in the history of the riding it is conceded by both of the other parties that not only does it have a chance but probable... is the party they have to beat.

Both the Conservative and Liberal candidates say that Samis is their main opposition.

They base this partly on the fact that Samis was the NDP candidate in the general election in 1971 and ran second, previously unheard of for the party in Stormont and collected over 8,000 votes, over 2,000 more than the NDP or CCF had ever won in the riding.

And they partly on the character of the candidate, genial, rather low-key for the NDP, hard-working and pleasant, and well-known for sports (he's a minor hockey referee) and other community activities.

Despite the high-ranking by political observers, however, one would say that Samis has a tough road ahead of him to take the seat.

First of all because even though he did get 6,379 votes in 1971 he was still 7,000 behind the Liberal, Stormont's labor minister Fern Guindon.

Then the Liberals had a very weak candidate who dropped 2,200 votes from the last prior election in 1967 and was nearly 9,000 behind the 12,000 votes the Conservatives had in 1968, their peak in the riding in modern times.

Granting that the Conservatives aren't going to come back this time with the over 12,000 votes that the tremendously popular Guindon took, Samis still will have to increase his support by about at least 4,000 votes to take the seat. And the question is how and where he can do it.

He himself expresses confidence that he can do it. But he can't be specific about where the gains will come from.

He mentions that some Conservative support is coming to him. And if his claim is right he also is much better off financially with a $19,000 budget, half of it raised locally through small contributions. Also he says the labor supports are stronger than before.

But in this blue collar and quite suddenly prosperous riding, the NDP can't look to the support from labor that it normally might expect.

The unions in Cornwall is exceptionally conservative politically.

Not a union in town is officially affiliated with the NDP and the local labor council is not considered friendly.

The candidate says that the president and executive of the Paper Makers at Domtar, the largest Cornwall industry with 2,500 employees, will appear at the plant gates with him.

But they also are not officially endorsing him and he can't look to the powerful backing that labor can give the NDP in other ridings.

Tennis Registration

Recreation Department's Action

Editor
The Intelligencer:

We strongly concur with your criticism of tennis registration by the recreation department.

One month ago, we made inquiries about the program this year, and were told that registration would likely not be filled for a couple of days". This was reassuring since the 24th was opening of registration seemed suitable only for those with professional people. By 12:00 noon however, our first opportunity to inquire, we were told at the office, registration had been closed and there was already a substantial waiting list.

The "mass registration" situation by which only those who young lady was able to register might possibly be the most unsatisfactory hour of registration, demand more than the recreation department.

We suggest that the money that has already registered, be returned and a draw of the names of all those interested in tennis instruction be held sometime at club members. Each of the 48 persons selected will be entitled to two member slips, to provide compatible playing partners. There are already all tennis buffs in Belleville be given an impartial manner.

We hope that the Recreation Department is able to correct the lack of forethought in this matter.

Delinquency Prevalent in City

Editor:
The Intelligencer:

Under the caption "11-year-old Burned As Gas Can Ignites" appearing in The Intelligencer's issue, you recount how a boy named Jeffrey Ross, 11, and four some stupid juvenile threw lighted matches on the grass and a can of gas exploded.

That boy might have been burned to death had his chum not shown presence of mind to smother out the flames on his trousers, by beating them with his hands. What should come up for honorable mention when handing out awards for bravery, but boys might have panicked and run away.

You state "no charges have been laid". I hope that if the police did not give them a lecture, their parents did. Was the second time, a month ago, two windows in the sun room were broken and the contents damaged in the room, the other looked like a B.B gun shot. Windows could have been injured.

It is expensive to replace the frames of glass and not easy to get a man to do the work.

If our boys realized the seriousness of it all, perhaps it would never throw stones or the like. Please parents, instruct that wars does not pay, it's a sad and dangerous habit and you will have my grateful thanks.

Farmers Require Security

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could increase its food production by 50 per cent in five years if only if farmers have protection against financial losses, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Thursday.

Mr. Whelan said the Canadian government is prepared to support measures to bolster the food supply for developing countries at the United Nations sponsored World Food Conference in Rome next month.

But any such measures will have to protect the interests of Canada's 230,000 farmers, he said. This means lovely high prices and stable markets for Canadian-produced food, including wheat, in order to encourage farmers to increase production.

Mr. Whelan was commenting on a series of recommendations to ease the worsening world food crisis at a two-day conference of 60 top government experts, which ended here Wednesday.

The conference, sponsored by the Canadian Hunger Foundation, the United Nations Association and the Canadian Council for International Co-operation, urged the government to request a broad range of measures at the Rome meeting to increase food production.

Banks Balking on Small Loans

OTTAWA (CP) — The chartered banks are holding back on special loans to homeowners, farmers and fishermen provided under legislation to help small enterprises, John Wise (PC—Elgin) complained in the Commons Thursday night.

He said one major chartered bank granted only 134 loans under the Small Business Loans Act last year.

Mr. Wise, a dairy farmer, said that when farmers are faced with demand for loans under legislation covering farmer and fishermen, they have three stock answers: The bank manager says he has never heard of the legislation, or that it is against bank policy to provide loans under the acts, or that all funds allocated for loans under the acts have been used.

Finance Minister John Turner should persuade the banks to grant such loans or should propose requirements to compel them, Mr. Wise said.

Domestic Oil Debated

OTTAWA (CP) — Further federal-provincial talks are expected this winter to decide what the price of oil to Canadian should be, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday.

The minister said during throne speech debate that the freezing of domestic oil prices last winter gave Canadians the lowest average crude oil price in the western industrialized world.

The price will continue at $6.50 per barrel, compared with international prices of about $11.70, until next June under an agreement reached at a federal-provincial meeting last March.

"There is also the prospect in the coming months of further federal - provincial consultations to determine where the single oil price for Canadians should go," he said.

Funds from an export tax, which covers the difference between the domestic and international prices, are being used to subsidize the cost of crude bought on the international market for Eastern Canada.

U.S. Justice Department Offers to Defend Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States justice department has offered to defend former president Richard Nixon and three of his top advisers in civil suits charging them if ordered illegal wiretapping for political harassment, department officials say.

Assistant Attorney-General Henry Petersen made the offer about two weeks ago in letters to lawyers for Nixon, former attorney-general John Mitchell and former presidential advisers H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, officials said Thursday night.

Mitchell, Haldeman and Ehrlichman currently are being tried on charges of trying to cover up the Watergate scandal which forced Nixon's resignation.

All five pending civil suits involved in the department offer resulted from aspects of the Watergate scandal.

Petersen's deputy, Kevin Maroney, said in a telephone interview that some of the five men have accepted the offer but declined to say which ones.

"It's normal to represent a former official who is sued for acts when he was an official of government," Maroney said.

Maroney said the offer was not discussed with President Ford or other White House officials.

These are the five cases, in various stages in courts in several cities:

—Actress Jane Fonda's suit against Nixon and other officials, alleging that her constitutional rights were violated by government harassment for her anti-war activities.

—A suit filed by William Anthony Lake, former aide to State Secretary Henry Kissinger and one of the 13 administration officials whose telephones were wiretapped when the White House plumbers were attempting to plug leaks of foreign-policy information.

—A suit filed by John Sinclair, a White Panther Party member accused with two others of conspiracy in the 1969 bombing of a CIA building in Ann Arbor, Mich. That case is pending in the Supreme Court ruling outlawing domestic wiretaps without warrant.

—A suit filed by the Socialists Workers party, accusing Nixon and other officials of violating the constitutional right to exercise political activity by authorizing wiretaps, mail tampering and other harassing tactics.

The fifth suit was filed by Elmer Davis, who was arrested and charged with breaking into the Beverly Hills, Calif., office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, the psychiatrist for Pentagon papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg.

Davis pleaded guilty to the charge, but a Pentagon papers lawyer said later that Davis could not have committed the burglary because Davis was in jail on a count that charge at the time of the break-in.

Maroney said Davis is arguing that he should have been paid before breaking into the that the break-in actually was committed by the White House plumbers. They have since been convicted of it.

Indians Want Oaths Taken on Sacred Articles

OTTAWA (CP) — A full-time minister of Indian affairs and allowing Indians to swear in court on a ceremonial mask or other sacred relics rather than the Bible are among proposed changes in the Indian Act being considered this week by a special meeting of the National Indian Brotherhood.

The proposals are contained in an interim report of an Indian Act study team financed by the federal government and administered by the Alberta Indian Association.

Harold Cardinal, president of the Alberta group, earlier this week listed amendments to the Indian Act as one of the three main issues to be dealt with by meetings of the brotherhood, voice of Canada's 300,000 registered Indians, and a committee of the federal cabinet.

The wide-ranging changes proposed by the study team still need approval from Indian organizations across Canada before being submitted to the cabinet.

Among the 471 proposed changes is one that would set off the new Indian Act from court attacks based on the Canadian Bill of Rights.

If that clause were to stand, it would mean the bill passed by Parliament that would be immune from the bill of rights.

The proposals also would give band councils jurisdiction over welfare and would empower them to have a healthy welfare recipient work for his pay payments.

The changes also would continue to make income earned by Indians on reserves non-taxable and would double for Indians the income tax exemption of other taxpayers.

The larger deductions are needed to avoid double payment for services now subsidized and other rights which are prepaid by the lands surrendered," said the study team.

Free health care and education would be permanently established by other proposals.

Another proposed change is the present practice of white women marrying Indians and attaining Indian status. Indian men and women would retain their status unchanged on a non-Indian, thereby putting Indian women on an equal basis with men.

Chargex Ups Rate

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has decided to follow the lead of three other chartered banks and will charge an annual interest rate of 18 per cent on all extended balances under the Chargex credit card system.

The bank said the rate will be effective with billings this December. The change was effective Sept. 1 for Toronto Dominion Bank and Oct. 1 for Bank of Nova Scotia Chargex customers. Royal Bank of Canada will introduce the rate in February, 1975.

Reader's Digest Staying 'Under any Conditions'

TORONTO (CP) — Reader's Digest Association Canada Ltd. has no intention of vacating "Canada under any foreseeable conditions," its president said Thursday.

Paul Zimmerman said his publication has nothing to fear from the federal government which has asked both Reader's Digest and Time Canada to demonstrate they "serve the Canadian purpose" and should continue to receive tax concessions for their advertisers.

The Canadian edition "is published in both of Canada's official languages," he said, and "every word of its contents is edited by Canadian editorial staff for its relevance to Canadian readers."

Mr. Zimmerman, via long distance telephone from Montreal, was reacting to remarks by Gerard LaRue, president of Time Canada, in a live talk show on CBC radio to public statement made last Oct. 4 by Hugh Faulkner, secretary of state.

In his statement, Mr. Faulkner called on the two magazines to show they are a source of strength to the national life of Canada and its identity, as well as to the magazine trade in this country.

If they could not show their value to the Canadian way of life, Mr. Faulkner said he saw no reason why the government should continue to permit tax exemption of costs incurred by those advertising in the magazines.

Time Canada would be forced to cease publication if the government removed tax concessions for its advertisers, a spokesman for Time, said which would double the cost of advertising in Time, and "severely reduce our advertising income, if not entirely eliminating it."

Mr. Zimmerman said the Canadian edition of Reader's Digest operated much as any Canadian-owned publishing enterprise would.

Reader's Digest Canada has no alternative but to stay and try to survive, it has too much at stake with over 350 shareholders who could lose their life savings, he said.

Bureau Runs Own Program

It's common knowledge that Belleville's Central Volunteer Bureau marries volunteers and community agencies trying to meet the city's needs.

What most people don't know is that the Bureau itself runs programs to fill the gaps left by other agencies.

Its meals on Wheels program, for example, recruits women's church groups to cook for elderly persons needing a hot meal at lunch. As recent extensions of its nutrition programs, the volunteer Bureau also supplies extra soup and sandwich luncheons and is beginning its Friday dinner for the elderly again.

Day nurseries for children who need enrichment and for handicapped children are also part of the volunteer bureau's own services.

Families in need of furniture and appliances can be helped through the bureau's furniture exchange.

Reading Aid helps adults who wish to learn basic reading skills and English classes for new Canadians are also offered.

A Christmas Sharing program of the Volunteer Bureau pools Christmas giving for all in need to avoid duplication.

Two relatively new programs are also run by the bureau: a student volunteer co-ordinator is setting up a registry of young volunteers and a tutoring program has begun this year.

The volunteer bureau, which is run by Ruth Burrows, receives 50 per cent of its funding or about $3,000 from the United Way which is conducting a campaign this month to collect $140,000 in the city for its 14 member agencies.

St. Michael's Catholic Women's League members preparing 50 lunches for Meals on Wheels recipients.

The program utilizes volunteers from the city's church groups to plan and cook the meals for month-long stints.

FLOWERS FOR THANKSGIVING

From the Chinese saying "Flowers Leave Their Fragrance On The Hand That Bestows Them". Helen Steiner Rice continues:

This Old Chinese proverb, if practiced
each day,
Would change the whole world in a wonderful way —
Its truth is so simple, it's easy to do
And it works every time and successfully, too - - -
For you can't do a kindness without a reward,
Not in silver nor gold but in joy from the Lord —
You can't light a candle to show others
the way
Without feeling the warmth of that bright little ray - - -
And you can't pluck a rose, all fragrant with dew,
Without part of its fragrance remaining with you.

These lines came to memory this morning when (at time of writing) I hadn't seen the beautiful bouquet of flowers from her garden. The beauty and indigenous of each bloom radiated a certain gladness, a brightness to the room which was absent before their arrival. The kindness of the giver was a presence that lingered with the glow of color.

Though the basic purpose of a flower is simply to bloom in order to lure pollinating insects and produce seeds that will grow into flowers — what power, what influence they have over mankind: poets, lovers heroes, gardeners, painters; writers, musicians weavers, designers are all affected by them.

Are you aware that the Egyptians were among the first race to develop ornamental gardening? That during the tulip craze in 1636 one extra choice bulb is said to have sold for 400 guilders? That the Hippomaster of Athens stole seeds of a French merchant by dropping his fur coat on a bed of seeding plants? That Shasta - Brush-Tree flowers are as lifelike as to tempt you to use them?

If not — do read "Flowers of the World" by Robert S. Lemmon, Charles G. Sherman, in our Carby Library. You'll be enthralled by the 614 flowers in full color.

And what about using flowers — not merely for the table centerpiece — but for cooking and eating. Put them in your Thanksgiving dinner —

This suggestion isn't ours but would never think of such a thing! — but comes from Leona Smith, an authority on the use of flowers in cooking. She observes that flowers were once grown for medicine as well as for the gourmet's palate. That flower cookery was most popular in Europe in the later 16th century then gave way to commercial spices and finally became a lost skill.

"Why not put flower into food preparation? she asks. "You eat flowers every time you serve broccoli, artichokes or cauliflower."

In her cookbook of over 300 recipes there are 28 edible, common garden flowers: marigolds, roses, chrysanthemums, violets, nasturtiums, etc. Use flowers, she says, in salads, soufflés, sandwiches, jellies, vinegars — even for meat, fish and puddings — as well as decoration for cakes and desserts.

For a thanksgiving menu, what about serving Marigold Rice with the turkey, and a Chrysanthemum shrimp salad?" she says enthusiastically. These recipes follow:

MARIGOLD RICE

2 tablespoons pulverized marigold petals
¼ cup chicken broth
2 cups of water
½ teaspoon of salt
1 cup of rice

Place dried marigold petals in a mortar and mince finely. (Just gently wash and dry the petals on a cookie) sheet in the lowest possible oven heat). Heat the chicken broth and water until dissolved. Add 2 cups of water and heat to boiling point. Add salt and rice. Cook, covered, over low heat until water is absorbed (about 25 minutes).

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHRIMP SALAD

1 lb. cooked shrimp
1 8-oz. jar artichoke hearts
1 cup chrysanthemum petals
½ cup capers

Toss with French dressing and serve on watercress. Garnish with additional petals.

But whether you eat them or not flowers for Thanksgiving is a delightful idea anyway isn't it?

The happiest of Thanksgiving to one and all!

Weekend Special

We have a holiday this weekend (what 'ere I talking you, you didn't know?) And Ed's Esso, 115 Station Street can help you celebrate by renting you one of the five cars from their Avis Rent-A-Car fleet of full size, intermediate and economy-size cars. And at a special holiday rate too. You can rent any Avis car for the three-day weekend at just a two-day rate. And that's a deal any way you slice it. The Avis number at Ed's Esso is a special one, 968-6461. Call it. You won't be sorry. And a happy, safe, Thanksgiving driving from Ed's Esso.

More On The Same Theme

Last week, I gave you some Christmas gift suggestions for the man of the house, from Richard Ellis, Pridaay, 18 Foley St. And here are some more. How about his own personalized playing cards, with his initials on them, or his name or the insignia of his favorite club? Or, how about personalized coasters and matches for his next parties or entertaining? The great thing about Richard Ellis printing is that they never run out of ideas — good ideas. If it can be printed, they can print it. Inquire at 968-6461.

Thanksgiving Dinner

The Drill-Inn on Hwy. 33 near Consecon will be serving a special Thanksgiving dinner on Sunday and Monday from 4:30 'till 9 p.m. The menu centres around the traditional Thanksgiving fare of turkey and ham, plus a good assortment of sa-voring fare of turkey and ham, plus a good assortment of savpeliters, prepared in the special Drill-Inn way of co-owner Pat Harris. To Pat, her cooking is an important extension of her family self which she will be glad to share with you and your family this Thanksgiving. It's best to make reservations by calling 393-2143.

Heading Off Troubles

Both Vitamin C and E are controversial subjects these days in terms of their claimed benefits. But if you are an advocate of Vitamin C as a cold treatment or preventative in tablet or effervescent form, then McCoy Pharmacy, 213 Front Street sell this vitamin and Vitamin E under their own label. This means you save money by buying locally as compared to a well-known brand of the same product. McCoy's sell Vitamin E in four different strengths too. And don't forget their free delivery if you call 968-7028.

A Complete Store

Booth's, on the Market Square, is one of those firms who do a thorough job in their particular business area. They sell furniture, appliances, carpet, musical instruments — and music, itself, everything which really makes a home a home. If They sell everything which really makes a home a home. If they you're starting from scratch, you can plan your total look with furnishings, including carpets, from Booths. And if you're looking for a special present to your home, then can supply that too, whether in the form of a hanging lamp or a chair. And televisions and radios for the living room or bedroom. Booth's have also and radios for the living room or bedroom. Booth's have also a big sign out front. Drop in and see and you'll agree. Booth's don't sell just appliances or furniture, they sell life-style.

A Lovely Weekend Excursion

You know, you don't have to drive to Toronto or Montreal in order to have a really exciting shopping excursion. That's exactly what you'll have at Jean Yves Wind Sactions in actly what you'll have at Jean Yves Wind Sactions in Actly what you'll have at Jean Yves every day of the week, including Actlesstes and she's open every day of the week, including Thanksgiving Monday. Jean is particularly excited about her fur-trimmed walking suits — handsomely tailored and trimmed in beaver, fox, muskrat, ocelot or mink. Her piece de resistance is a four-piece walking suit trimmed in blue fox which includes skirt, jacket, slacks, and matching hat in a rich brown. Also Jean has a great selection of leather and suede-trimmed pant suits. You don't have to drive a hundred miles for quality and fashion. Just get it right on Hwy. 7.

Giving It All You've Got

Bob Bland, owner of Bob's Sports, 48 Front St. realizes that his commitment to the public is one very seriously. Last week, we talked about his excellent skate sharpening facilities. Well, now you can get custom-creating sewing done on your T-shirts, hockey pants, or jackets. Or if just like the name of your company or team name imprinted on jerseys, Bob's now has the equipment to do this, and it's all predictably within you wait. And Bob's Sports is open five nights a week, and seven days a week. That's what I call being a real sport!

A Timely Reminder

"Harvey's Food Market on Front St. suggests that you come in and collect those magical ingredients for that scrumptious meal. Your Christmas Fruit cake, Owner Murray Atkinson testifies that he's seen many a disappointed face who've left shopping for their ingredients far too late. So you know your cupboards are getting bare for your Christmas cake, the better it's going to taste. And making it now proves two things: you get all the ingredients, and you get the job done. Now won't you be proud of yourself? So wit Murray.

The Ideal Compliment

That's what you — and your slacks will get when you wear one of the fine selection of pant coats from Woodley Fanvers, 472 Front St. Top your slacks with black cross country, tailored or casual coat. Or if you like to mix three different shades and see what happens — to yourself and your complete slacks look. Another show-stopper is this year's fashion look, the Sweater Coat. Another show-stopper is this year's fashion look, the Sweater Coat. Flared coat from Ireland fine English manufacturers, Aquascutum. This coat really caught my eye with its gentle flaring and tailoring. Now I'm sure it will catch your eye too. Drop in to Woodleys soon.

A Good Opportunity

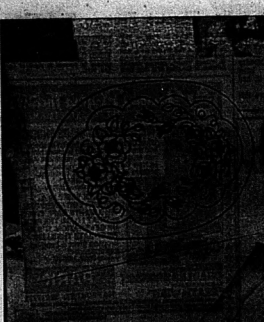
The W. Frank Office at 343 North Front St. will be closed on Monday. But that doesn't mean that the W. Frank salesmen won't be on the job. Monday is a great day to show your wife every or your husband on the market so that others can view it. But they can't see it, and you can't see others, if you don't do something about it. So call W. Frank Real Estate Ltd. at 962-2068 and organize those weekend plans. This is Thanksgiving weekend and you just may be very thankful you did. Happy property matters into the competent hands of W. Frank Real Estate Ltd.

In Case You Missed It

And in case you missed last week's column and its great news about ServiceMaster, it'll you again. ServiceMaster — the people who can clean anything — are now in new premises on 179 Pinnacle St. at the rear of Bonnie's Beauty Bar of the say old hunk an shaving hunch on the Terraces Bar of the Four Seasons. It's nice to say something is good because Four Seasons. It's nice to say something is good because you've experienced it yourself and believe it. That's how I you've experienced it yourself and believe it. That's how I feel about talking about a Four Seasons buffet. That's what I call 'lunch'. And you will too!

Experiencing Lunch

There's a great deal of difference between just doing something and experiencing it. And that's the difference between having any old lunch an shaving lunch on the Terraces Bar of the Four Seasons. It's nice to say something is good because you've experienced it yourself and believe it. That's how I feel about talking about a Four Seasons buffet. There's nothing like it around delicious consomme, hot beef, assigned to corned beef sandwiches between delicious bread and the beverages of your choice, all served in the most relaxed surroundings around. That's what I call 'lunch'. And you will too!



Printing Rug Design

John Penner turns out a print pattern at the Bittermore Craft Studio in Vineland, Ont. The pattern is one of 400 in the studio's catalogue, all designed by Marg and Ted Rowan, owners of the studio. The patterns are sold for hooked rugs along with materials made for and by the Rowans, who also teach the art of hooking rugs. (CP Photo)

Rug Hooking

Preserving Pioneer Flavor

VINELAND, Ont. (CP) — In a pioneer cabin, the hooked rug was the first gesture in gracious living. The materials—a burlap sack, worn clothing cut into strips, perhaps the tine of a fork for a hook—were handy and designs were simple, often inspired by nature.

While modern materials and tools have become more sophisticated and efficient, Marg Rowan, proprietor of Bittermore Craft Studio at Vineland, just east of St. Catharines in the Niagara Peninsula, is determined to maintain as much of the pioneer flavor as possible in the crafts she produces.

Mrs. Rowan said winter visits to Mexico in 1967 and 1968 convinced her that Canadian domestic crafts should be preserved.

She set herself to learn the old crafts of rug hooking, pillow lace, and needlework. She began to sell the work of local people and eventually to teach and supply the materials for rug-hooking.

Handicrafts now have completely taken over the old brick home her family has owned since 1798 and the farm buildings house 11 Classes of craft teachers meet in the basement studio to learn from Mrs. Rowan the refinements of rug-hooking.

In the studio annex up a stairs, assistant Betty Webb gathers glowing wool fabrics dyed especially at the Quebec factory or in Bittermore's own dye house, fine burlap and Bittermore-designed patterns, for mailing all over Canada and the United States.

Ted Rowan, who retired as an industrial engineer to join his wife in the enterprise 20 years ago, designs patterns.

Two high school students are employed to hand print a stock of rug designs which Bittermore offers for sale and Edna Bittenbenc, Mrs. Rowan's mother who is an accomplished craftswoman, supervises the dyeing of the special wool fabric. Later to be cut in strips for rug-hooking.

"It's a low-profit enterprise," said Mr. Rowan, "so we all have to work hard at it."

Cast-off clothing is no longer the staple material in hooked rugs. To get the right weight, Bittermore's supplies wool fabric especially woven in Quebec. The fabric colors are dyed at the mill, but most are hand-printed with a mixture of printers' ink and paraffin wax so they will stay firmly in the backing.

"So if it takes three years to finish a rug, the pattern will still be clear," said Mr. Rowan.

In pioneer days, the crafts were passed from mother to daughter and neighbor to neighbor. Today, Bittermore's tries to keep the personal touch.

"Find a parcel goes out of here without a note from my wife, from Betty, or from me," said Mr. Rowan.

All of the 400 designs in the Bittermore catalogues are by Marg and Ted Rowan.

"There's a tremendous explosion in craft activity in Canada," said Mr. Rowan, whose enterprise now gets requests from crafts people across the country.

"Unless people can find a creative activity like this, today's life-style is going to drive them up the wall."

Ann Landers

May-December Marriage Can Be Great Success

Dear Ann Landers: "Soon It Happen" has seen only part of the picture. Just because she wasn't in love with a May-December marriage that didn't work out (probably soon, dizzy gold-digger married to a rich old man) doesn't mean none are successful.

I am a 36-year-old woman who is deeply in love with a man twice my age. We have a beautiful marriage. The age difference complements and enriches both our lives. We were classes my youth and I am grateful for his wisdom. I've never been happier or more contented.

I have had relationships with "boys" my own age and they were full of deceit, self-centred ness and very little personal growth. From my point of view, that was profitless. I was treating a lot of boredom and nonsense for what I could get out of it, mainly, a chance to go out and see and be seen, rather than stay home.

I suggest Sean B Happen be more open her eyes or keep her jealous mouth shut because she isn't seen a lot of exceptions

Dear Exception: I received an unexpected avalanche of letters from women who expressed the same point of view. Yours was the best. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 34 years of age, attractive (according to my friends) and although I had my lip amputated two years ago (not normal and not happy) I am most two-legged girls I know. I view my disfigurement as a challenge and have never let it get me down. Since my lip is off at the hip I've found it much easier to use cigarettes than an artificial limb.

The problem is my mother.

I love and quiet, short skirts and the current styles for women say not. My mother loves my style. She likes to wear longer skirts, she hates pants, and instead should dress as people will look at the upper part of me.

When I told her I was buying a bathing suit she said: "I don't see how you have the nerve."

Please, Ann, I need some advice—Terry Who Is Hoping You're With Me.

Dear Terry: I am. All the way. A 36-year-old woman is old enough to select her own clothes without "help" from her mother. I hope you will tell her so.

Your attitude is super. You've done a remarkable job of adjusting to a handicap that would throw most young women for a loop. I am filled with admiration.

Dear Ann Landers: About 18 years ago my mother and her brother had a bitter argument and stopped speaking. I don't know my mother missed him a great deal. I suggested she write her, too, because once they were very close.

Recently my mother became seriously ill. The doctors say she can't live much longer. When her brother found how sick she was, he and his wife came to see her immediately. They brought flowers and gifts. Now they are friendly again.

How sad when relatives have fights and stop speaking to each other. The years go by—years when they could be having good time together sharing happy experiences. When tragedy strikes everybody wishes they had behaved differently.

Please tell your readers not to wait until death is at the door before they forgive and forget, because—Life is too Short

Dear Life: I wonder how many people who read your letter saw themselves. If they did, I hope they will take your advice. Thank you for telling it.

Female Flight Surgeon First in Canadian Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — Maj. Wendy Clay of Terrace, B.C., is about to realize an ambition of combining a challenge of medicine with flying when she becomes the first woman to be awarded pilot's wings by the Canadian Forces.

The 31-year-old flight surgeon will graduate Friday with five male students from advanced training at CFB Moose Jaw, Sask.

Brig.-Gen. C. V. Johnson, chief of staff for Canadian Forces Training Command, will pin the wings on Maj. Clay at a ceremony marking the end of training that involved 230 hours in a Tutor jet aircraft.

The forces announced here Tuesday that Maj. Clay has taken training identical with that of her male counterparts, including formation flying, instrument flying, night flying and aerobatics.

A statement quoted Col. Ralph Annis, base commander at Moose Jaw, as saying Maj. Clay will not be an operational flighter pilot. But her training would permit her to talk with pilots on an equal footing.

"Flight surgeons should be able to discuss all aspects of aerospace medicine and flying that might affect a pilot's abilities and capabilities in the air," he said.

Maj. Clay said she became a pilot because she wanted to "combine the flying challenge with medicine." She said she hopes to continue flying jets as much as her medical duties will permit.

She now will return to her position as flight surgeon at the Moose Jaw base, which is the University of British Columbia. She will move to Trenton, Ont., after serving a year's internship at Toronto General Hospital.

She became interested in flying and obtained a private pilot's licence in 1970. In 1971 she was named base surgeon at Moose Jaw and also teached basic training.

Successful Living

Poetry Gains Recognition

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I was pleased beyond measure when I read my poetry and your very fine remark about me in a copy of our local newspaper.

Now the Carling Community Arts Foundation has granted me $1,500, to write a book of Haiku and Tanka, and I am able to have poems published in magazines.

This month I am to conduct a workshop at the University of Saskatchewan on miniature poetry for the Canada Council of Teachers of English. I am pretty nervous about it but certainly want to do it.

Catherine M. Buckaway.

Dear Catherine: I'm thrilled. You have recognition in high places.

At this time of year it will be fitting for me to quote from your piece about "Frost", So here it is (in part):

First touch of frost — stitching the sky,
a flight of geese.
Ancient tree cracks with age — or only the frost?
Freezing day of winter:
bowing in the wind
a frost-ripened acorn.

Your miniature poetry carries big beautiful ideas in modicum of well-chosen words. A lovely talent!

Dear Doris: My daughter-in-law has been ailing longer and our home is never at peace any more. We took her to a doctor who was in when our son left her for another woman.

She screams and beats her little son and I feel sure she is doing this to be spiteful. She is very upset to him. I never interfere and my husband never says anything either. But my heart's nerves are so bad that he just trembles when she gets in these spells.

What we can calls me she screams at him. He said he would take her to a doctor but she makes his life so miserable with all her screaming.

—On Edge.

Dear Edge: This is one time that you must interfere. Child protection laws expect the cooperation of citizens to help to light any situations in which children are being battered.

Contact your child care agency and discuss her in the this with the trained counsellor there. Do it now.

Women's Equality

Attitudes Changing Fast

OTTAWA (CP) — Changing public attitudes are speeding progress toward equal rights for women, members of the federal advisory council on the status of women told a news conference Wednesday at the end of a three-day meeting here.

At recently as four years ago, many women were antagonistic to the movement, council vice-Joan Wallace, the council's Vancouver representative.

Today these same women were beginning to realize the importance of equal footing with men in all sectors of society, she added. But many still shied away from the label "women's liberation."

This perhaps resulted from the fact that the present women's movement created by the news media was headed by those with an militant factions and ignore the moderate groups such as the status of women council.

The change of women's issues had improved but much material still was required to daytime women's programs on television or the women's pages of newspapers. It should be treated as general news, members of the council said.

Silicon Implants Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced Wednesday the recall of 6,000 pairs of silicon breast implants and 2,000 pairs of silicon testicle implants because of defective packaging that could result in infections.

The products were distributed during the last year by the Dow Corning Corp. in the U.S. and in Tokyo, Brussels, Canada and Australia.

The FDA said routine testing by the company last month disclosed that defective packaging had caused some of the products to be non-sterile.

A second breast or testicular implant might cause infection, the agency said, the FDA said. The infection would be readily apparent after surgery and there is no cause for alarm among those who received the implants and experienced no complications, the agency said.

One case of infection has been reported but investigators have not determined whether the infection was caused by the implanted prosthetic device or faulty surgical procedure, as the agency suggested.

Both products were put up by Heyer-Schulte Corp. of Santa Ana, Calif., and Surgitek, Inc., Bristol, Pa., under the trade name of Dow Corning Medical Products, Midland, Mich.

The FDA said Dow suspected that a new package sealer was causing the problem.

The firm notified plastic surgeons and distributors of the product and identified problem on Aug. 26. They were advised to hold the products until they had been relabelled as non-sterile, with instructions on how to sterilize them before implantation.

Silicon breast implants normally are used to enlarge small breasts or replace breasts removed because of cancer. Prosthetic testes replace those removed for health reasons or as a result of accidents.

Andy Williams Ponders Return To Same Old Series Grind

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Williams has the world licked. He'd like to return to the grind of a weekly variety show or two, probably do it in New York, do it live and not sing as much as he did during his old series on NBC.

The singer, lean and tanned at 43, discussed all this breezy while in town to do an NBC special which, he said, work said was a plot for a possible mid-season series.

Williams, who got into the singing business at an early age with brother Bob, Dick and Don, had his own weekly music show on NBC from 1962 to 1967, but since then has stuck to specials.

Why go back to the old grind?

"Well," he grinned, "I think it'd be interesting to try it. I don't think it'd be as hard as doing the old series where I had to rehearse all week."

Williams said the series he has in mind wouldn't resemble his old show. For one thing, it wouldn't have a staff of singers and dancers—"we'd hire 'em as we need 'em."

It should be as up-to-the minute as possible—which is why he said he'd prefer do it live instead of taping it several weeks in advance—in order to bring celebrity guest artists and comedy.

"I'd like to have the No. 1 recording act of the week on and the comedy should be about what's happening in the newspapers that week, or the day before or even the day of the show.

"I think that if it works out the way I'd like it to, and if we had the money to do it, I'd like to cut away during the show to different places.

"If, say, the Rolling Stones were on tour in Cleveland and if we got permission to shoot a little of their concert, I'd like to get the NBC affiliate in there with a hand-held camera for the show.

"The whole idea of it is to catch the things people are talking about, and all of it should be new."

Doing the show live would be more of a hassle, he conceded, "but the immediacy of the thing would be more important than the fact it might not be as slick or smooth as it would be on tape."

Williams said the new show "would be a combination of shows.

"It should have the quality of That Was the Week That Was, talking about things that are in the news, what's happening today, and maybe a little bit like the old Jackie Gleason show, in that you do it in a big theatre with a live audience."

Williams lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., but said he'd probably do the show here even though he used to think, "Why come to New York when you can do it in Los Angeles?"

"But since I've been here, I've found there's an alive scene in New York—the theatres, the music tours that start here. I'd rather be back in LA because my kids and Claudine (his wife) are there, but I think LA's a bit too laid-back."

The singer said he didn't know when or if he'd get word from NBC to crank up a mid-season series.

The network has no music-variety shows in its current lineup, although NBC officials say they'd like one.

Williams said whether he commences the series partly depends on whether the new or returning series in NBC's fall lineup get into ratings trouble.

"And then you have to decide whether you want to go in that trouble spot," he said. "If it's up against All in the Family . . .

His words trailed off and he laughed.

"When I was just starting out, I was offered a couple of shows. The first show I was offered was against Gunsmoke. I just said, 'I have a destruction complex. Do it, go, go, go, but I don't want to just go in and get wiped out.'

"Same thing now. I think this show would be much better on a weekend, and if they gave me, like, a Monday night spot, I don't know whether I'd want to do it. And I don't care either.

"If I don't have to have this show, but it'd be fun."

Group Remains Popular

TORONTO (CP) — It's a long way from California to Holland, but the Beach Boys have made the distance in their 13 years in the music business.

The Beach Boys, who have sold more records than any other United States group, now are in the midst of a successful comeback after most five years of relative obscurity—a fact few other entertainers have managed in the past.

The group has expanded in number but the original five still are the main thrust—brothers Carl, Dennis and Brian Wilson, their cousin Mike Love and Alan Jardine.

One of their most recent albums, Holland, featured two new members—Ricky Fataar and Blondie Chaplin. Blondie has since left the group because, as Carl puts it: "He's into a different type of music."

"Even though he helped compose a lot of the music on the Holland album, his style was much different than the rest of the group."

The absence of the guitar-playing composer was noticed, however, particularly during their recent visit to Toronto.

But Carl is confident the group will get along, saying that changes are "inevitable."

At first, the Beach Boys' music centred around the "surfing era" in California. Surfer Girl, Get Around, California Girls and Good Vibrations were just a few of their early hits.

But the advent of such groups as the Beatles took the public's attention away from the Beach Boys—at least temporarily.

In an interview, Carl said the American public may be reaching back to the uncomplicated sounds of the early 60s.

"Our music is sort of an influence to an easier existence," he said. "It represents a lot of people enjoyment."

Although he still writes for the group, Brian no longer accompanies the rest on tours.

Married now, he lives in California and records occasionally with the group in their recording studio in Santa Monica, Calif.

Mike Love, the lead singer in the group, still clowns on stage but seems to be taking his music much more seriously than the days of the Monster Mash.

Mayor Takes Moscow Tumble

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

It isn't everyone who can say they spent a night sleeping in a hospital incognito after breaking a bone on a Moscow sidewalk — but Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey can.

Mayor Jeffrey, accompanied by her husband Roy, travelled to Moscow to view the recent Canada-Russia hockey series.

"The second night we were there, we had just finished dinner and were walking around the hotel with Dr. and Mrs. Dom Hunt from Mel's Rank when I tripped on a sewer grate," said the mayor.

An ambulance was called and the Jeffreys and Hunts raced to the hospital where the mayor underwent surgery for a fractured nose and a cut in her forehead.

"I had to wear sunglasses to cover the black eyes, but we didn't slow me down," said Mayor Jeffrey during an interview Thursday, the day of her return to office.

Mrs. Jeffrey said the hospital — a maze of 47 buildings — was so crowded she slept the night on a stretcher strung from wall to wall.

During her stay in the hospital the mayor said she went without food because Russian patients supply their own food.

"A cleaning lady gave me some mineral water," said the mayor.

"The hospital insisted I stay 48 hours but I signed myself out after one day," she said.

"Russian hospitals have a long way to come," said the mayor.

Mayor Jeffrey said the highlight of her trip was meeting the mayor of Moscow — a meeting arranged through the Canadian embassy.

She and her Soviet counterpart discussed mutual problems including housing and pollution. "They're death against lights," said Mayor Jeffrey.

As a personal gesture, Mayor Jeffrey presented Moscow municipal officials with a dozen of cedarwood by Audrey Devlin.

The entire trip was a great experience," said the mayor. "Gordie Howe and Bobby Hull both suggested getting caught by a high stick as an alibi for my nose."

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey will hold a prize contest once next Tuesday to declare whether or not she will run in the upcoming municipal election.

Family Narrowly Avoids Friendly Rabid Fox

A Toronto family with small children had a narrow escape from contacting rabies recently as a result of an incident involving a fox which approached their cottage in the Picton area.

Medical Health Officer Dr. G. R. Lenk, at the monthly meeting of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit Thursday said the incident pointed up the dangers of children playing with wild animals.

But later the father wondered if the fox possibly had been rabid and notified the health unit office of the incident.

Health units officials exhumed the body of the fox and sent samples away for laboratory tests. The word came back that the fox had been rabid.

Dr. Lenk immediately called Toronto to advise anyone having had contact with the fox to take the precaution of seeing their family physician.

Dr. Lenk said the Toronto father understood that if an animal was rabid it would be frothing at the mouth. In the absence of any frothing he felt it had been safe to allow his children to play with the fox's tail.

But Dr. Lenk says absence of froth is no indication of whether an animal is rabid. However, if wild animals have rabies they lose all fear of humans and as in the case of the fox, appear to be friendly.

"It all points up the dangers of children playing with wild animals," Dr. Lenk said.

Organist Honored

PICTON — Organist and choir director at Picton United Church for 36 years, the late Andrew J. Bidwin will be honored Sunday, Oct. 20, during morning services.

A memorial plaque, placed in the church by the choir members, will be dedicated in tribute to Mr. Bidwin's work.

All former choir members have been invited to attend the dedication and a reception will follow in Centennial Hall. Special music is being prepared by the choir under the direction of Robert Kocsis, organist and choir director.

Chief Completes Course

TRENTON — It was far from a picnic that Capt. Dennis Smith of the Tweed fire department attended in Gravenhurst this summer.

It wasn't even a fair ballgame Otto strike and you were out, hardly the usual three that the umpire calls.

The umpires in this case were Ontario Fire Marshalls office instructors at the Ontario Fire College in the Muskoka town of 6,00 people.

Capt. Smith was the first of Trenton's 35 firefighters to attend the college's eight-week summer course, Capt. William DeMille followed, completing course later in the summer.

It was long and gruelling work said Capt. Smith. Every two weeks, the 45 firefighters from across the province were given examination.

One failure on any of the four exams was enough to send a man back to his home fire department, he said. There was no second chance, and no second strike.

Capt. Smith's course, the first of three eight-week ones, was broken down into four sections.

The first two dealt primarily with technical information on both existing and firefighting techniques.

In part the third session delved into arson detection rescue procedures, and fighting chemical fires. Firemen also chalked up hours of instruction in radiation monitoring.

They took a brief session on nuclear physics, said the captain. He added that even though radiation is not a factor firemen would have to deal with among Trenton industries, radioactive material does travel through town on trucks using Highway 401.

The final two weeks were occupied with learning methods by which knowledge picked up at the college could be transferred to men at home departments.

Dissident Mohawk Says Industry Lease Invalid

TYENDINAGA — Cleli Maracle, spokesman for dissident Mohawks here, charged Thursday that construction of the work and subsequent signing of a lease with the controversial Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd. was illegal.

In recent weeks tempers on the reserve have flared as council continues to invite a corporation on the reserve and protesters continue barricading council meetings and demanding a new council election.

"Tempers on the reserve have reached the boiling point," said Mr. Maracle.

Mohawks met at Mr. Maracle's home Wednesday night in a closed-door session to plan action following the violence which erupted at Wednesday's council meeting when reserve police attempted to drag a Mohawk dissident from the council chambers.

Mr. Maracle told The Intelligencer Thursday, "I received a letter in Wednesday night's mail calling for compiled ordering reserve police to refrain from manhandling Mohawks".

He also said the vote of council on the lease for a three-year lease with the firm was "illegal" because a quorum of council was not present to vote on the issue.

Mr. Maracle's band councillor, said he believed the meeting was adjourned when councillors walked out of the chambers Wednesday during the struggle between the police and dissidents.

Twenty minutes later, council returned to the meeting — this time with Mr. Maracle absent.

Of the four councillors, only two would vote on the lease issue. Mr. Maracle said he refused to vote as council "the people have dissolved" and Carl Brant — a method in the corporation — declared a conflict of interest and voluntarily refrained from voting.

While Mr. Maracle said he believes the two remaining members cannot constitute a quorum, band council chief William Brant said there was a quorum and the vote was legal.

Because Councillor Maracle did not vote, he is listed in the minutes as having registered a negative vote," said Chief Brant. "Councillor (Carl) Brant — because he did not vote — is also listed as a negative vote. Because of this, I as chief, cast the tie breaking vote."

The protesting faction will return to blockade future council meetings, said Cleli Maracle.

Mr. Maracle said he has a list of all the men the protesters have chosen for security duty and intends calling them whenever they are needed.

"We are safeguarding against any surprise meeting by council," said Mr. Maracle. "When I call them, they are going to leave their jobs immediately to come to council."

Protesters, this week, called the mid-afternoon council meeting a "surprise meeting" and said it had been called at a time when council knew it would be difficult for protesters to rally support.

"We'll stand as firm as any tree to block councillors from beginning a council meeting," said Mr. Maracle.

Toffler Suggests Students Key to Problem-solving

"You should have available to different plans for the education system in Belleville," Alvin Toffler told county educators Thursday in a workshop session at the education centre.

The author of Future Shock, here Wednesday night, to deliver a lecture at Centennial Secondary School, met with about 50 area educators for a "conversation". His visit here was sponsored jointly by District 19 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation and Hastings County Board of Education.

"The institution in society should have a repertoire of models, so that when crises occur, we can choose a plan of action that has been considered before," Dr. Toffler said. "The institution with the fewest models of future planning is the political structure."

He cited what key skills schools should teach their students. Dr. Toffler bypassed reading, writing and arithmetic in favor of the skills of "choosing and making decisions and relating to other people".

"I question the need for reading and writing and arithmetic," he said. "I question if we need a society dependent on verbal skills. As for arithmetic, kids are bringing calculators in the class now."

The skills Dr. Toffler advocates would be transmitted by "action learning" — work-oriented study in the community.

He suggested a plan like the Community Involvement Program now operating in Belleville high schools, in which the students spend part of their school time working in the community and return to school once a week to evaluate their work experience under the direction of their teachers.

"I would like to see schools come up with an agenda of community problems and let students and teachers organize themselves into teams, with input from the community, to study them. The nature of the problem would determine what would have to be studied in school. This would take a lot of motivation. It would no longer be a question of 'why do I have to study algebra'?

"People say we haven't the resources to tackle a given problem, forgetting that the student population is a tremendous resource."

Dr. Toffler suggested "two separate economics", the existing one and an economy of students operating for minimal wages after the Peace Corps pattern.

"We can't keep 55 million people in the student population of the United States" locked up in classrooms forever. We can't afford it."

Dr. Toffler suggested that Teachers' professional organizations are impeding some of the changes he advocates.

"Teachers in their own self-interest, have often fought against what is good for students.

Finally, he said "the enormous wave of dropouts has been beneficial for the schools," because it has forced them to examine themselves.

Bank 'Cased'

PICTON — The Picton branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was "cased" Thursday by an undercover agent wearing a fur coat.

Treasurer-by on Ross St. were surprised to discover a manikin trapped under a grating outside a basement window of the bank. With bars in the slot of him and bars above, the intruder agreed unconcerned by the spectators. Firefighters inspecting a nearby store volunteered to rescue the manikin, who peered with great interest into the bank's basement window.

Ellis Named

From the Ottawa Bureau of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — Hastings MP Jack Ellis has been appointed a member of the standing House of Commons committee on natural resources and public works. Mr. Ellis is Progressive Conservative Party spokesman on public works.

The secondterm MP will also serve on the labor, manpower and immigration committee, an appointment that ties in with his interest in the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

A third assignment for Mr. Ellis is membership on the joint House-Senate committee for parliamentary printing.

Approval of his appointment came with the House endorsement of a report by all-party committee set up committee membership for the start of the 30th parliament.

Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees was named a member of the finance, trade and economic affairs committee, in line with his role as Tory spokesman on industry, trade and commerce. Mr. Hees was minister of trade and commerce in the Diefenbaker government.

Meeting of Minds

Alvin Toffler — a philosopher-diagnostician of the human condition — met with Hastings County educators Thursday to discuss modes of education and the teaching technique. In the background is Eric Rumsey, director of the Hastings County Board of Education.

Honor guard of Scouts stands by as Scouter Cosmo DeClerq swears seven new members into the Second Belleville Scout Troop. Graduating Cubs are Jim Hardy, Howard LaGuff and Stephen Smith, all 11. New Scouts are Jim Cann, Mike Laing, Steven Potts, all 11, and Peter Stoliker, 9. The Parents' Night ceremony was attended by a large group of much-needed volunteers.

Lions Here Tonight

Goegan Scores Three In Bobcats' 6-5 Win

KINGSTON (Special)—Belleville Bobcats climbed into sole possession of first place in the eastern section of the Metro Junior B Hockey League here Thursday night, connecting for three unanswered goals in the third period to smack the home town Voyageurs 6-5.

Bobcats have two wins and a tie in three starts for five points. Markham Royales, Pickering Panthers and the Voyageurs are notched, in second and place with four points each.

The Belleville team places its undefeated record on the line tonight at home when Peterborough Lions, sporting a 1-1-1 record, will be the visitors for a 9 o'clock game at Memorial Arena.

Voyageurs owned a 5-3 lead after two periods, Thursday, but Bobcats, paced by Grant Goegan, came on with a rush in the final 20 minutes to earn the two points.

Goegan potted a pair in that third period surge. His second of the period and third of the night came with three and one-half minutes remaining and gave the visitors the victory.

Team captain Robbie Oliver, Jim Richardson and Mike Watt supplied the other Bellville goals. Richardson also checked in with a pair of assists.

Watt and Goegan clicked for goals 17 seconds apart early in the third to wipe out a two-goal deficit at set the stage for Grant's game winner.

Voyageurs got a goal each from Tim Torrance, Brian Langille, Kip Acton, Cam MacGregor and Mike Dawson.

After the teams played to a 1-1 draw in the opening period, Kingston took command in the second and built a 4-2 edge. But Voyageurs couldn't hold off a determined Bobcat squad in the third.

Belleville's Bob Moore put the stop on 23 Kingston shots. Joel Myles turned aside 36 Bobcat drives.

The losers drew nine of the 17 minor penalties handed out by referee Keith MacDonald.

Rookie winger Scott Salmis may be missing from the Bobcat lineup tonight. The 17-year-old Bancroft product picked up a 16-stitch cut at the chin in Kingston.

Huskies Lose 7-5

COBOURG (Special)—Frankford Huskies rebounded from a 4-1 deficit in the third period to climb in front 5-4 but ran out of gas in the late going and were downed 7-5 here in Ontario Hockey Association Junior C play, Thursday.

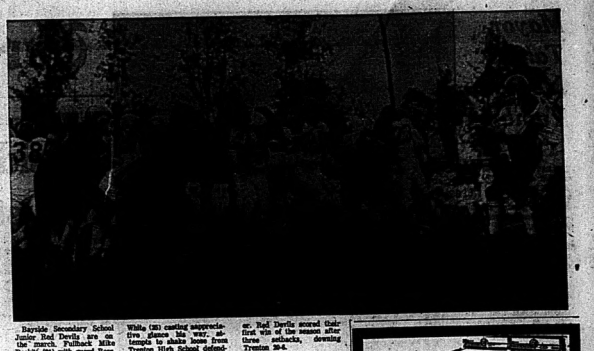
The home town Cobourg Cougars were in front 3-1 heading for the final 20 minutes and rapped in their fourth goal early in the third. Huskies came on with a rush but couldn't hold the lead once they moved in front.

Dave Flesch was a two-goal shooter for Cougars. Ian Williams, Terry Lawis, Pat Kernaghan, Randy Fils and Terry Irwin fired one each.

Centre Mike Crawford paced the visitors with two goals and an assist. His brother Pete, a left winger, counted one goal as did Robbie Arbuckle and Gene Doucette. Gary Payne picked up two Frankford assists with one each for Jeff Sherwood, Ken Jacket, Mike Hunter and Joey Edwards.

Cougars held a 44-38 edge in shots on goal.

The teams concentrated on hockey. Cobourg drew six minor penalties and Frankford five.



Bayside Secondary School Junior Red Devils are on the march. Fullback Mike Perchal (11) with guard Ron Wilks (35) casting supportive glances his way, attempts to check home forward Trenton High School defend-er Rod Devlin scored their first win of the season after three setbacks, downing Trenton 20-6.

Junior Red Devils Post 20-6 Football Victory

Bayside Secondary School mapped an early streak that saw another extended in Bay of Quinte high school football action Thursday.

Playing at home, Bayside Junior Red Devils scored their first win of the season after three losses handing Trenton High School Tigers their second setback in three starts, 20-6.

At Trenton, it was a different story as the Senior Devils went down to their third defeat in three outings. A high powered Tiger machine put on an assault that bombed the visiting the visitors scoreless.

The Senior Tigers brought their season record to 2-1 with the convincing win.

The Trenton Junior squad lost more than the football game.

On the final play of the first half, running back Steve Peterson was knocked out of action. A consistent producer for Tigers, he was taken to hospital, apparently suffering from a rib injury.

First string quarterback Tim Scott was forced out later. He has a knee injury. Fullback Darrell Haw who counted the loss Trenton touchdown in the third quarter, took over for Scott. Haw left the game with an ankle injury. Alan Mack handled the quarterback duties after that.

Bayside earned its first win of the season with a solid display.

Halfback Doug Schesnuk, a two-way man for the winners, scored all his team's touchdowns.

He took a handoff from quarterback Rob Kidd to find paydirt from in close, early in the game.

Then, in the second quarter, Mike Trenton punt was blocked by Mark Turgeon and Schesnuk fell on the ball in the end zone.

On both scoring plays, all-terrorized two-point conversions on pass plays failed. It was 1296 at the half.

A Tiger fumble on the 39-yard line early in the third quarter paved the way for Devils' final major. Schesnuk barrelled in from 19 yards out. This time, the conversion was good. Kidd hit Chuck Baker in the end zone for the two points.

A 35-yard kickoff return by halfback Greg O'Malley sparked the Tigers. O'Malley picked up another 19 yards and Scott connected with Kirk Fleming on a 25-yard pass play to put the visitors in close.

Haw carried the ball for Tigers, balling his way across the line for the only points his team managed against an inspired Bayside defence.

Both defences held in the final quarter as the teams' total turns attempting to generate sustained drives.

It was 19-5 at the half by Trenton. Tigers added 17 more to their total after the interval.

Speedy Nick Alexander accounted for three Tiger majors, opening the scoring on a 39-yard romp in the early going; rambling 19 yards on a sweep in the second quarter, and plunging from five yards out in the third quarter.

Greg Mansfield picked off a Chuck Dash pass and ran it in for six points and the other Trenton touchdown was supplied by Alexander's running mate Steve Beecroft who made a dazzling 30-yard run to paydirt.

Rob Oliver added a 23-yard field goal and a pair of converts to the score.

With Mike Sleicher taking over at quarterback for the visitors in the dying minutes, the two put together a promising drive, powered by the running of Mitch Auger and Rick Hodgson. But the drive stalled at the five-yard line.

Sleicher was sacked for a 15-yard loss and an attempted field goal failed.

Bayside Blanks Picton

PECI seniors have had a rather discouraging Bay of Quinte High School Soccer season in comparison to last year. Wednesday night they lost to Bayside by a score of 9-0. The loss left the Picton crew in the west division cellar. During the 73 season the PECI seniors were Bay of Quinte finalists.

Picton Juniors appear to be taking up where the seniors left off, last season. Wednesday they tied Bayside 1-1 to earn a share of first place in the league's west division with Trenton and Brighton.

Jack Porter recorded the shutout for Bayside and got all the help he needed on the scoreboard from John Woodward and Fred Clarke.

In the Junior contest, Steve Allen booted the Picton markers and Mike Dalkowski scored for Bayside.

Perreault – Three Goals In Opener

Bruins, Flyers Upset By Sabres and Kings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gil Perreault and Rick Martin seem to have resolved their differences and the result is that Buffalo Sabres' French Connection line is as potent as ever.

The two National Hockey League stars, who appeared to be heading when they had a heated verbal exchange during a pre-season game, combined for five goals Thursday night, leading the Sabres to a 9-3 upset over Boston Bruins in the season opener for both clubs at Buffalo.

Thursday's other game also featured an upset with Los Angeles Kings dumping the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers 5-3.

Perreault's first goal of the night gave the Sabres a 3-2 tie at the end of the first period. Buffalo's star centre then helped set up Martin's two goals which, combined with scores by Craig Ramsay and Don Luce, gave the Sabres a 4-3 lead going into the final period.

Luce's goal came on a breakaway while the Sabres were killing off a penalty to Gerry Meehan.

In the third period, Perreault got two goals, one of which was assisted by Martin, and Brian Spencer added the other Buffalo goal.

Rookie Dan Gare, a 1974 draft pick from Calgary of the Western Canada Hockey League, got Buffalo's first goal in the first period and added an assist on Meehan's goal.

The Sabres bombarded goalie Gilles Gilbert with 40 shots, but Buffalo's Gary Bromley made only 13 saves.

Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge, Dave Forbes, Carol Vadnais and Andre Savard scored for the Bruins.

Tom Williams scored two goals to lead the Kings' win at Philadelphia.

The Kings took a 2-0 first-period lead on goals by Mike Corrigan and Bob Murdoch who knocked his own rebound past goalie Bernie Parent.

Dan Maloney scored the other Los Angeles goal at 5:08 of the second period. Tom Bladon, Joe Watson and Bob Kelly replied for the Flyers.

Bladon's goal came at the two-minute mark of the second period when he fired a 50-foot shot past goalie Gary Edwards.

Maloney made it 3-1 when he beat Parent at 5:08 after taking a pass from Frank St. Marseille.

WHA Teams Boast Top Junior Grads

By JOHN KOROBANIK
The Canadian Press

The World Hockey Association begins its third season Tuesday night and for the first time will introduce a talented group of graduating juniors.

WHA owners signed most of the top 15 youngsters in what amounted to a bidding war with the National Hockey League.

Consequently, veterans such as Bobby Hull, Gordie Howe, Pat Stapleton and Gerry Cheevers, who have carried the league thus far, will get help from rookies such as Dennis Sobchuk, Pat Price, Ron Chipperfield, Gary MacGregor and Real Cloutier.

The juniors, a handful of Europe's top performers and a few NHLers who made the switch this summer should help make the fight for divisional championships the highest since the league's inception.

With the question of credibility still unsolved after the Russia-Canada series, won 6-1-2 by the Soviets, the WHA now is hoping to attract new fans with a three-division alignment that features the first all-Canadian section in major league hockey since Boston Bruins joined the NHL in 1924.

The Canadian division will consist of Quebec Nordiques, Toronto Toros, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers and Vancouver Blazers.

Phoenix Roadrunners, an expansion team, will play in the U.S. East with defending champion Houston Aeros, Minnesota Fighting Saints, Michigan Stags (Los Angeles Sharks last year) and San Diego Mariners, the newest identity for the New Jersey Knights.

Indianapolis Racers, another new team, joins New England Whalers, Cleveland Crusaders and Chicago Cougars in the West.

Come next March, it should look like this:

Canadian

1. Toronto
2. Vancouver
3. Winnipeg
4. Edmonton
5. Quebec

West

1. Houston
2. Minnesota
3. Chicago
4. Phoenix
5. San Diego

East

1. Cleveland
2. New England
3. Chicago
4. Indianapolis

The top two teams in each division will be joined in the playoffs by two wild-card teams, those with the best records among the remaining eight clubs.

Toronto missed the playoff final last year by virtue of Chicago's sensational rush. Coach Billy Harris will have the nucleus of the 1973-74 Toros strengthened by the addition of Willers Frank Mahovlich, Paul Henderson and Tony Featherstone and Czech star Vaclav Nedomansky.

The Toros sent Wayne Carleton, their leading forward last year, to New England for future consideration.

Vancouver missed the playoffs, but coach Joe Crozier will have among his newcomers two of the most sought-after juniors in Canada—defenceman Price from Peterborough, Ontario Hockey Association and centre Chipperfield, Flin Flon, Manitoba Bombers.

The Blazers' weakness is goal tending as the solvent Dan McLeod, the top goalie in the WHA last season who left Houston after a salary dispute.

Winnipeg, with four Swedes and two Finns signed this summer; Edmonton, with junior Mike Rogers, former Miller Bruce MacGregor and ancient goalie Eddie Johnston; Quebec, basically unchanged except for the signing of Gerry Cheevers, will have to hope for enough wins to grab a wild-card playoff berth.

The success of Houston's title defence will depend on Ron Grahame and Wayne Rutledge as they try to fill McLeod's vacated goal.

The oldest team in the WHA last year, the Aeros added journeymen Don Larway, Terry Ruskowski and collegian Rick Preston, whom coach Bill Dineen plans to play at D.

The Aeros, led by Gordie Howe and centre Mark Howe, surely will be able to hold off Minnesota again.

The free-wheeling Saints, led by Mike Walton and George Morrison, added more speed and scoring with the signing of Fran Huck, a Jet-last year, and Don Tannahill from Vancouver Canucks.

A moody and unhappy Marc Tardif won't help Michigan get settled in its new Detroit home, and even the signing of goalie Gerry Desjardins and forward Danny Green won't make them contenders.

Phoenix could surprise their first season with a group of Western League veterans and Sobchuk, the best junior graduate in the last 10 years.

San Diego? Former California Seals Mike Laughton, Brian Perry and Norm Ferguson won't find things any better in that state with the WHA than they were in the NHL.

New England's decision is basically stand pat will cost the division title they won the first two years. They did get Carleton, but centre-ice strength remains a question mark until Terry Caffery's knee has some solid tests.

The defence has been strengthened with Thomas Abrahamsson of Sweden, Abrahamsson's twin brother, Chester, his wife's back-up goalie Jo Jo Behind Al Smith.

But the Crusaders, with the brilliant Cheevers, defencemen Paul Shmyr and a solid offence, will take the title. Their defence will be bolstered by junior Paul Baxter.

An already-strong offensive group got even stronger with the addition of Rich Leduc from Boston Bruins and Al McDonough from Atlanta Flames.

The Cougars will need another miracle season to reach the finals although it could happen if newcomers Dags Dryden and Ron Grahame, 100-goal scorer MacGregor, and the excellent team discipline all come together.

Indianapolis' main chore will be to attract enough fans to survive the season. With neither a solid nucleus Phoenix vultes his team by keeping practices down to 90 minutes.

Richard - Wants to Play

Team Captain Ends Walkout

MONTREAL (CP) — Henri Richard has told Montreal Canadiens he will be the National Hockey League club's practice today after failing to show up for a workout Thursday.

Richard, 38, was reported ready to quit hockey after he was excluded from Montreal's Thanksgiving Monday night in a season opener here against New York Islanders.

He told general manager Sam Pollock Thursday night of his decision to return.

Richard walked into the Montreal dressing room Wednesday morning just before the team's light skate and found his number (18) on the blackboard along with five other players who sat out the game.

The fiery Montreal team captain stomped out of the Forum and did not see his teammates and the Islanders tie 5-5. And he missed a friendly presentation to his brother Maurice who was honored along with 13 other former Canadiens who are members of the Hockey Hall of Fame.

The decision not to dress Richard was made by Canadiens coach Scotty Bowman.

The coach said he may have made a mistake about the way he handled the situation. But when he learned Richard later the player had "nothing to say."

Richard missed the Canadiens last three pre-season games because of an elbow injury, but indicated after a practice Tuesday that he was ready to play.

Richard said he wanted to play the first game.

"It's my 20th year and opening night is a big night as far as I'm concerned," he said.

Richard said last spring that Richard would retire after Montreal was eliminated from the Stanley Cup playoffs by New York Rangers in the quarter finals. After a meeting with Pollock, Richard decided to return and finish his two year contract.

Sport Briefs

JOHNNY LIVES BIG

MONTREAL (CP) — Johnny Rogers, Montreal Alouette star who recently signed a reported seven-year contract with the team, decided to splurge on a Rolls Royce car. He told reporters here he might decide to change the RR on the front of the car to JR.

KNEE NEEDS REPAIR

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Larry Bowa, Philadelphia Phillies all-star shortstop, will enter Methodist Hospital on Sunday for surgery on his left knee, the team announced Thursday. The surgery, scheduled for Monday, is to remove a "loose body" in Bowa's left knee.

ANDY STAYS PUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Andy Brathaite, former National Hockey League all-star winger, has decided against returning as player or as advice of his doctors. Brathaite was traded to Baltimore.

Metro Chairman Seeks Big League Franchise

TORONTO (CP) — A delegation led by Metropolitan Toronto chairman Godfrey Hands for Los Angeles today seeking a baseball franchise.

Major league baseball owners and officials are congregating in Los Angeles for baseball's World Series, which opens Saturday.

"Metro executive gave me blanket authority to pursue getting a team some time," Godfrey said.

"I was advised by several baseball owners that we should be at the weekend meetings in Los Angeles and that's why we're going this weekend."

The delegation will be seeking to assure baseball executives that Toronto's planned expansion of the CNE Stadium to accommodate baseball will be carried out within two years.

"We don't expect to come home with a team," said Godfrey.

"But we will be meeting with the owners of existing teams and they will help determine whether Toronto gets a franchise."

The System Produces Stars

Farm Products Dot Lineups

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The minor leagues, say many, are all but dead, a relic of baseball's past. The system by which a player worked his way through a series of minor league teams is certainly not what it was.

But that is not to say that today's system can't work.

Evidence that it can will be available here Saturday when World Series rivals Oakland A's and Los Angeles Dodgers seek their sport's pennants with lineups that show a harvest from down on the farm.

Although starting pitchers Ken Holtzman or the A's and Andy Messersmith for the Dodgers came to the teams via the college ranks, the fellows backing them up are products of the minor league system.

This all started for us in the minor leagues," said catcher-outfielder Ferguson of the Dodgers. "We've played together a long time, and so has Ron Cey, the third baseman, put it this way: "Sure, we're young, but we've been playing together a long time."

The entire Dodger infield came up through the system, and Cey was long the exception. He was manager Walter Alston would play the youngsters.

It wound up this year with Cey at third, Bill Russell at shortstop, Davey Lopes at second and Steve Garvey at first.

In the outfield, Bill Buckner is left and Willie Crawford is right, have been Dodgers since the day they signed a professional contract.

Outfielder Jimmy Wynn is the lone exception among the starters. He came from Houston last winter in a trade.

Gene Tenace, the hero of Oakland's first World Series victory in two years came up through the ranks. So from first to third, the A's are home grown. Dick Green is second, Bert Campaneris at shortstop and Sal Bando at third.

Arizona State University can be in the A's pride, matching Bando, the team captain, and Reggie Jackson, the Baseball League's most Valuable Player, last year among his products.

Sixteen of the 25 A's were originally signed by the team although Ken Holtzman, Joe Lindblad and Ted Kubiak, have been acquired after serving service with other clubs.

Those with the A's system throughout their careers are Tenace, Green, Campaneris, Bando, Jackson, Darold Knowles, Blue, Catfish Hunter, Blue Moon Odom, Dave Hamilton, Glenn Abbott, Rollie Fingers, Horb Washington and Stewart Cladwell Washington.

The Dodgers have reaped such major league harvests as Garvey, the first baseman who was the most valuable in the All-star game, Yeager, Cey, Lopes, Ferguson, Lopes, Tom Paciorek, Russell, Jim Barr, Buckner, Crawford, Doug Rau, Lee Lacey and Geoff Zahn.

Of the 25 up from the farm, where the crops have been watered best these championship teams.

Only the last to the field here Saturday in the first game of the World Series starting at 4 p.m. EDT. The game will be televised on the CBC national network.

Sunday's second game also starts at 4 p.m., and the next three games at Oakland on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, are set for 8:30 p.m. starts.

Gordie Is Back

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gordie Howe doesn't appear to have suffered any letdown following the Team Canada exhibition hockey series against the Soviet Union.

Howe, 46, one of the stars of the Team Canada series which wound up with the team returning from Europe Wednesday, was back with Houston Aeros a day later to score two goals in a 7-4 exhibition victory over Michigan Stags.

In other pre-season World Hockey Association games Thursday, San Diego Mariners beat Phoenix Roadrunners 4-3 and Chicago Cougars dropped a 5-3 decision to Long Island Cougars of the North American Hockey League.

Howe also fought with J.P. LeBlanc and gary Veneruzzo behind the Houston goal in the third period. They were sent to the penalty box, a move that ended the Stags' chances of upsetting the defending WHA champions.

Howe's goals kept the Aeros in the game at 2-2 before they the score 1-1 and 3-2. With slightly more than 10 minutes gone in the third period, Gordon Labossiere scored the winning goal when teammate Andre Desjardins accidentally knocked the puck in his own net while trying to get it in front of his goal.

Also scoring for Houston were Andre Hinse and Don Larway.

Bellhaire, Veneruzzo, Jacques Lecas and Fred Speck scored for Michigan, formerly Los Angeles Sharks.

The Mariners posted their second shutout in four exhibition games in the match at San Diego.

Goalies Joe Junkin and Russ Gillow stopped 44 Phoenix shots.

The Mariners took a 2-0 lead in the second period on goals by Lee Inglis and Ray Powers and Tom Trevelyan's goal in the third period provided the scoring.

Rick Clotti and Don MacKenzie of Long Island scored on Chicago goalie Dave Dryden in the third period to decide the game played at Sussex, N.B. Dryden played the last half of the game in the Chicago net, with Cam Newton handling the netminding chores for the first half.

Duke Harris gave Chicago a 1-0 lead on a powerplay goal midway in the second period.

Goaltender Rich Coota turned in a strong game in the Long Island net.

Gordie Howe 6 for 6

TORONTO (CP) — Jockey Sandy Hawley, who won a record 223 races last year, moved to the threshold of another record mark Thursday when he was aboard the first six winners at Woodbine racetrack.

The Mississauga, Ont., rider came back to win the sixth and bring his season's total to 381 winners in 1974 to move ahead of other tracks. He is about 30 victories behind the record of Chris McCarron, who is riding in Maryland, for the North American title.

Only seven jockeys have ridden seven winners on a single card at a major thoroughbred track and Richard Grubb, who rides on Ajax, Ont., circuit, was the first in North America to win seven successive races. He accomplished the feat at Woodbine May 31, 1972.

Hawley rode both ends of the daily double of Merry Maggie and First and Wooden Dancer in the second which paid $12.10.

The Cricket Night SOLUNAR TABLES Where To Fish, When To Hunt

By Mrs. Richard Alden Knight

The schedule of Solunar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from Mrs. Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times. If you wish to find the best spot that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Use Eastern Daylight Saving Time.

Pitcher Wants Out

JIM HUNTER

CHICAGO (AP) — Pitcher Jim Hunter of Oakland A's will be the highest paid baseball player in the World Series if a free agent, the Chicago Sun-Times said today.

The newspaper said Hunter made the decision because he claims Oakland owner Charles Finley has not paid half of his $100,000 salary for 1974.

Hunter, with 25 wins and 12 losses, is a regular-season starter for Finley and a 20-game winner in each of the last four seasons. He is scheduled to start the first game of the World Series Oct. 21, the day after the completion of the World Series should it last seven games, the Sun-Times said.

A candidate for the league's Cy Young award as the best pitcher, Hunter said he received $50,000 of his salary in regular bi-weekly installments, the Sun Times reported.

But Finley refused to pay the remaining $50,000, which according to Hunter's contract, would have been in deferred payments to his account, the newspaper said.

The Sun-Times said Hunter asked Finley for payment two months ago and the Oakland owner has not done so, the story added.

Hunter, in his 10th season, has compiled a 161-113 lifetime record with Oakland and Kansas City. He won 21 games or more in the last four years and pitched a perfect game in 1968.

Oakland meets Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series which begins Saturday.

Sandy Hawley Connects For Whitby

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Wayne Weller's overtime goal made Whitby's debut in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series a winning one Thursday as the Dunlops edged Owen Sound Flyers, defending Allan Cup champions, 3-2 before 1,500 fans.

It was the only game scheduled.

Bill Little put the McDonald's Dunlops ahead midway through the second period and Phil Braidon gave the Flyers with less than three minutes remaining in the third period.

Whitby took advantage of a rebound to slap the puck high into the goal past astonished Ron Patterson.

Bruce Dame recorded the Whitby shutout, blocking 41 shots. Patterson stopped 46.

Whitby took eight of 14 minor penalties called.

The remaining four clubs play their first regular-season game tonight. McDonald's are in Orillia to play the Terriers, Nepean are in Barrie against the Stratford Firesters play host to Cambridge Hornets.

Series Takes Priority Over CFL Coverage

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC television network announced Thursday it will delay broadcast of Saturday's Canadian Football League game in Ottawa in favor of showing the first game of baseball's World Series.

The Ottawa CFL game, with Winnipeg Blue Bombers visiting the Rough riders, is scheduled for 3 p.m. EDT and would be over about 4:30 p.m.

The baseball game begins at 4 p.m. EDT.

The CBC had considered cancelling the football telecast but decided Thursday that it will be broadcast on a delayed basis beginning at 11:40 p.m., EDT, Saturday.

Jake Gaudaur, CFL commissioner, said the decision to give American baseball priority over Canadian football was inevitable and added that the baseball game would be shown on one American NBC channels available in most major Canadian cities.

"If they were pre-empting football for something like a Canada-Russia hockey series, which comes only once a year, it would be different," said Gaudaur.

"But what they're doing is sacrificing an entire CFL national telecast so they can carry half an hour of American baseball, and it's only one baseball game in a seven-game series."

Gaudaur said he suggested the CBC allow the CTV network to televise the football game but spokesmen for both networks said it would be difficult for CTV to prepare itself for the game on such short notice.

Transmission Line Study for Prince Edward County

An Ontario Hydro study team has for some months been examining alternative routes and voltages for the transmission of additional electric power into the County.

Since February, when public meetings were held in your area, the team has gathered and evaluated precise information concerning alternative rights-of-way from the mainland into the County. As a result, Ontario Hydro will recommend to the Minister of Energy for his consideration that a 230,000 volt transmission line be constructed from a point on the mainland to a new transformer station near Picton. Ontario Hydro will further recommend that submarine cable be used to cross the Long Reach.

You are invited to examine the material which has been compiled and to discuss the recommendation and the alternatives with Hydro's representatives at either of the following information centres:

October 17, 18 and 19
Armoury Mall—Picton

October 24, 25 and 26
Ministry of Agriculture and Food Building—Napanee. (Please enter from Robert Street)

Open to the public...
9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Thursdays and Fridays
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Saturdays

Maps and aerial photographs illustrating the alternative rights-of-way, together with background data, will be on display. We hope that you will visit one of the information centres; however, if that is not convenient and if you have a specific question about the study, please write to:

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12

Aries (March 21-April 19) — If you're better wort at service done for you now, receipts will be big. Don't let a few short-comings get to it at once.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — An opportunity will present itself today through one of your social contacts. You're not apt to spot it until the last minute.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) — Someone you've been counting on may let you down, but it's not your fault. Don't take it personally. Just regroup and try again. Take him up on it. This time he'll probably be there.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) — The values of an idea you're trying to sell to someone influential. That doesn't mean the ideas should be discarded completely.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — If making a major purchase today, don't pay the first price that's asked even though you feel it's worth it. There'll be savings if you bargain.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Be the first to call attention to mistakes you make today. If you do, others will help clear things up rather than embarrass you about it.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Be cagey today when calling the server return for anything you perform of value. Others do not expect that everything be perfect.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — If you are the spokesman for a group, be certain that howling group of friends, you'd better tighten up the plans a bit or it will get out of hand.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Yet another serve on your present for something you've wanted, but you're not sure if it sounds better coming from the donors.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You'll get another to go along with your ideas today, but you don't lay everything on him at once. Feed him information bit-by-bit.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — This is the time to try to get more out of your head than you do out of your purse. Don't buy what you can get on other terms.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) — Look conditions over more carefully. You'll see you won't have to make as many concessions as you first thought.

Opening lead—A♥

By Oswald and James Jacoby

We are indebted to Dr. Bertrand Romanet of Paris for today's hand. It illustrates a most unusual defence against a squeeze.

West opens the ace of diamonds and continues with the queen. South is careful to ruff with dummy's ace of spades and at this point East is nearly squeezed. Suppose he chucks a club.

South leads dummy's jack of clubs and eventually picks up all East's trumps while discarding the nine of hearts from dummy. Then he is able to ruff out a club with his last trump and make his contract.

Suppose East chucks a heart. Once more South picks up East's trumps but now he has three good tricks.

Then why is East almost squeezed? Because East can discard a low trump, South can still pick up the trumps and run off the last two, but East is discarding in lack of discard and there is no squeeze against him.

This particular hand was probably made up by the good doctor, but the play of underruffing to avoid a squeeze comes up on occasion and is well worth knowing.

Blood Profiles Rule out Problems

By G.C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any kind of surgery for thick ankles? Mine are nine inches around. It's all bone but the rest of my legs are pretty good.

I am an embarrassed and have had a terrible complex all my life. My sister-in-law keeps urging me to go to a very good plastic surgeon but I am too harrassed by it to. So I'd think I was crazy.

I knew when I look around I should be ashamed, and just be thankful I can walk — Mrs. J.L.

Some thick ankles are due to fluid accumulation, usually the result of varicose veins or other circulatory problems with circulation. Some are just fat.

But you say your ankles are "all bone and have always been that way." And I am not aware of any surgery that can change that. If your sister-in-law keeps bugging you, and if you can afford the fee, let her pick the "very good plastic surgeon" and ask his approval. At least it will settle the arguments.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother, who is 75, had a stroke eight months ago resulting in paralysis of the right arm and leg. She can walk with partial use of the leg but none in the arm. I have heard that a blood thinner has produced good results. Could it be helpful in her case? Could it be harmful?— R.W.

Used at the right time, anti-coagulants (blood thinners) can minimize the risk of the condition becoming worse or of a subsequent stroke, but I would question whether there would be any improvement in the patient's life long after the stroke.

And depending on the type of stroke, such drugs might be harmful. I wouldn't consider using them unless her physician sees some specific need for that type of medication.

BIRTHS

PAYNE — Barbara Anne and Glenn Edward Payne are pleased to announce the birth of Kimberley Lynn on Tuesday, Oct. 8, 1974 at Belleville General Hospital, a sister for Jeffrey and Jason. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Payne, Trenton, and Mrs. Roy Payne.

IN MEMORIAM

DUNDASS — In loving memory of our dear father, Charles John, who passed away Oct. 11, 1973.

I do not need a special day, dear,
To think of you and pray,
For each day I do remember
You are very near to God.
God knows I miss you,
Never shall your memory fade,
Sweet memories will always linger
Of the days we spent together.
—Sadly missed by the family.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Ethel Boyd wishes to express her appreciation to friends, neighbors and staff of Ward 4, Belleville General and visits while I was in hospital. Thank you.

The family of the late Gertrude (Jerry) Walsh wish to express their sincere thanks to friends, relatives, neighbors, doctors, nurses, pallbearers, cards, floral tributes, donations, and for the many kindnesses shown during her illness at Belleville General Hospital staff, Dr. Gerstenkorn and Dr. Bennett. Your kindness will always be remembered.
Jack, Wakie and girls.

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to Dr. Tye for seeing me so promptly and for his kindness and care. Dr. Vrooman and Dr. Hennessey, Dr. Gerstenkorn, Dr. Jim Vella and everything was so wonderful at the time of my accident. Thanks also to Dr. Bennett, Dr. Bruce Kay, Board of Directors, Staff and Nurses at Belleville Children's Services for their kindness and concern. Also to the ambulance attendants, radiology, Quinte Rehabilitation staff, Dr. Bennett and Dr. Dean Hall. Everyone has been so nice. Also to Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Rose of Kindness, and also the nurses at Ward 4, Belleville General. I just don't know how I can ever repay you all for your kindness, but I will try and all will be well.
Sincerely Ruth Easton.

I would like to express my thanks to my relatives, friends and neighbors for flowers, gifts and cards received while I was in hospital. Also to Dr. Tye, Dr. Vrooman and Dr. Hennessey and staff of Variety 3 for their kindness and care while on the ward.
Mrs. Clark Sprung.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard F. Reid wish to express their sincere thanks to all those who in any way helped to make their Golden wedding Anniversary such a memorable occasion. Special thanks to our family.

STILL WAITING?

Are you one of those waiting for prime to drop, or are you waiting for interest rates to go down? You may have a very long wait, according to all those who should know. Several indexes raised their rates this week to 10%.

We can offer a choice of a good number of new houses with far larger interest rates. Many of these are just started, you have the opportunity to incorporate your own ideas. Possession in early spring.

SUBURBAN SECLUSION

a larger three bedroom split level situated away from traffic noises. His small orchard and sub-division is only five minutes from town. The house has a separate formal dining room, family room with fireplace. The kitchen has many cupboards. Basement has great potential for future rec room.

THE EXPROPRIATIONS ACT
NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR APPROVAL TO EXPROPRIATE LAND

IN THE MATTER OF an application for approval to expropriate land pursuant to section 7 of the Expropriations Act, 1970, by the Ministry of the Environment for the Province of Ontario.

TAKE NOTICE that the Ministry of the Environment for the Province of Ontario intends to apply for approval to expropriate the lands described in Schedule hereto.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that the Ministry of the Environment for the Province of Ontario has caused to be made a plan and description of the lands which it intends to expropriate and has deposited the plan and description in the Registry Office for the Registry Division of Hastings (No. 21).

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that the Ministry of the Environment for the Province of Ontario has caused to be served on every person appearing by the records of the Registry Office to be entitled to an interest in the lands which it intends to expropriate a notice in the form prescribed by the Regulations made under the Expropriations Act, 1970, of the deposit of the plan and description in the Registry Office.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that the Ministry of the Environment for the Province of Ontario has caused to be published a notice in the form prescribed by the Regulations made under the Expropriations Act, 1970, of the deposit of the plan and description in the Registry Office.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that the Ministry of the Environment for the Province of Ontario has caused to be served on every person who has registered an objection to the proposed expropriation a notice of the date, time and place of the hearing of the application for approval to expropriate the lands

Land Tax Realizes $600,000

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Revenue Minister Arthur Meen said Thursday the 20 per-cent tax on land sales to foreigners has realized between $500,000 and $600,000 during the first six months of 1974.

The minister said there is little doubt revenues from the tax, imposed to encourage more Canadians to buy Ontario land and curb foreign speculation, will be far below than the $60 million Treasurer John White predicted in his budget speech April 8.

"Thankfully, our over-all revenue sources are about $185 million above expectations," said Mr. Meen.

Stephen Lewis, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, said the relatively small amount raised by the tax is "failing on every front."

"Clearly, the land-transfer tax is failing first on its face, both as a revenue producer and as a deterrent to foreign control," Mr. Lewis said.

He said the government is granting exemptions in foreign firms "left and right."

Mr. Meen confirmed that a West German firm headed by Dr. Ing Meyer may escape paying $434,000 if it exercises an option it now holds to buy an Ottawa apartment project for $9,176,000.

U.S Corn Crop Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1974 United States corn crop, once counted on as a powerful brake against rising food prices, will be 18 per cent less than last year because of drought last summer and killer frosts this fall, the agriculture department said Thursday.

Based on Oct. 1 survey, the corn harvest is expected to total 4,717,600,000 bushels, down 207 million or six per cent from the September estimate. The 1973 crop was a record of more than 5.64 billion bushels.

The soybean harvest was estimated at 1,383,288,000 bushels, down four per cent from Sept. 1 indications and 19 per cent below the record 1973 crop of nearly 1.57 billion bushels.

As livestock feed ingredients, corn and soybeans are key raw materials needed for producing meat, poultry and dairy products. A smaller supply has driven up feed prices and has led to farmers scuttling plans for expanding inventories of feedlot cattle, hogs, poultry and dairy cows.

The 1974 wheat crop was estimated at 1,780,150,000 bushels, down one per cent from Sept. 1 indications. However, total output was up four per cent from last year's record harvest.

November Budget Speech May Launch Commons TV Schedule

OTTAWA (CP) — Television cameras might be in the Commons on an experimental basis as early as the budget speech next month.

The idea of starting television experimentally was raised again Friday by Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp, the main government proponent of televised proceedings. He did not go into details, but a government source indicated previously that television coverage of the budget speech may be proposed.

"We are not justified in further delay. It should be tested soon," Mr. Sharp said during the throne speech debate.

"In my view, and the view of the government, it should be possible to bring to Canadians not only the opening of Parliament, now on the way to becoming a tradition in the nation's screens, but perhaps one or two important episodes of parliamentary business on an experimental basis."

A budget is a top parliamentary episode and one is scheduled by Nov. 15.

For balance, any televising of a budget would probably include Commons comment and comment from major opposition spokesmen.

Television coverage now is limited to the formal opening of Parliament, when the throne speech outlining government legislative plans is read by the Governor-General or his representative in the Senate.

Support for coverage of daily Commons proceedings came Friday from at least one opposition member. J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley).

"Television . . . would unmask the clown. It would undress the fool," he said.

The presence of cameras would also shorten debates, sharpen speeches, reduce tuppers and restrain catcalls, he argued.

Mr. Sharp, who followed advance he would focus on reform during his speech, dealt with a series of proposed changes, including suggestions to improve the 45-minute daily question period, when members question government ministers. But he emphasized the need for television.

Spokesmen indicate there is a strong view that the government should establish, by one television and recording system, retaining either videotape or a live feed for use by reporters and networks now on file.

Brits Duck More Bombs

LONDON (Reuter) — Two London military clubs were blasted by bombs Friday night and there was immediate speculation that Irish republican guerrillas were responsible.

Only one persons was injured in the explosions—by the basement of the Victory Club for former servicemen and in a ground-floor lounge of the exclusive Army and Navy Club in Pall Mall.

The Pall Mall blast rocked London's fashionable West End at noon and women in evening dress fled into the glass-strewn street.

The lounge, empty at the time, was completely wrecked and set ablaze by the blast.

Police were uncertain today whether the bomb was thrown in from the street or planted in the room.

The explosions follow bombs in the southern town of Guildford last Saturday which killed five persons and injured 65 in bars frequented by off-duty servicemen.

Nobody has claimed responsibility for either the Guildford killings or Friday night's attack, but they follow the pattern of other attacks on servicemen in Britain attributed to the Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

South African Bertram Cook, 54, said of the Victory Club blast: "The ceiling of the entrance hall came crashing down and one of the lights was blown on top of us."

And 78 members of the Royal West African Frontier Force had a lucky escape from injury in the Army and Navy explosion. They were holding their annual reunion on the first floor when the bomb went off immediately underneath. One woman was taken to hospital suffering from shock.

Wilson Tackles Economy, Heath May Step Down

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson, confident of his party's parliamentary future despite its narrow majority in Parliament, is working this weekend on a Labor program for tackling the crucial economic problems facing Britain.

But there are predictions that Edward Heath, Wilson's main opponent in the British election expected, may resign as Conservative leader after losing three of his four contests against Labor.

Backbench Tory Nicholas Winterton has demanded that the Conservatives choose "a more sensitive grassroots politician" as their leader.

Wilson is due to unveil some of his plans for curing economic ills in a television and radio broadcast Monday. And he is expected to announce his budget next month.

Meat Supplier Sought By Bombing Inquiry

MONTREAL (CP) — A bench warrant was issued for the arrest of businessman William Obront following testimony Friday at a fire commissioner's inquiry into a bomb explosion at the home of Melvyn Dobrin, president of Steinberg's Ltd.

Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delage issued the warrant at the request of Crown prosecutor Jacques Dagenais who said police had been unable to locate Mr. Obront to serve him with a subpoena forcing him to testify.

"In that case," Commissioner Delage said, "I order that Obront be arrested on sight and brought before me Tuesday," when the inquiry resumes.

The warrant was issued following testimony from Guy Chartrand, Steinberg's Quebec security chief, who said Mr. Obront's company was one of five companies which was one of five dropped from the supermarket's purchasing lists in 1969.

Mr. Chartrand said it was dropped from the list after an investigation showed Mr. Obront's company was one of five charging a quarter of a cent more for their meat than their competitors.

"Our investigation showed there was collusion between our buyers and these five meat packers," Mr. Chartrand said, "and there was a difference in the quality of the meat."

Mr. Chartrand said his job calls for screening suppliers "to keep organized crime out of legitimate business."

Mr. Obront has been described in testimony at the Quebec Police Commission inquiry as an organized crime as an underworld figure.

In other testimony Friday, former boxer Gabriel Ferland said he was hired by Steinberg's Ltd. to recruit 25 strong-armed men to protect the company's property during a strike by its employees in December, 1972.

Let Them Use Powder

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde has some advice for families fighting the rising cost of milk—try powdered milk.

That's what the Lalonde family has done, he told reporters outside the Commons Friday.

"We are trying a lot of powdered milk and it is cheaper by the pint," the father of four said when asked about reports that fluid milk prices in Ontario will rise six cents a quart about Oct. 21.

"Some people may feel that the taste isn't exactly the same but you find you can save a fair amount of money."

Answering suggestions that powdered milk is not as good as liquid milk, the minister replied:

"I would remind you that powdered milk is liquid milk. You only have to add water to it and mix it and put it in the fridge for the night and you find the next morning it is quite good."

The federal approach is not to treat milk prices separately from other problems facing low-income Canadians, he said. Family allowance payments were rising.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada ruled Friday that police officers have the right to break into a home without search warrants as long as they identify themselves and have reasonable grounds to believe a wanted man is inside.

New Bug on Way

OTTAWA (CP) — A new influenza virus will make an appearance in Canada this winter but it is expected to produce milder symptoms than previous flu bugs, Dr. A. B. Morrison of the federal health protection branch said Friday. The new virus is called Port Chalmers after the New Zealand city where it was isolated last winter.

IGA Taking Action Against Price Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The company controlling IGA food stores is considering anything from a public relations campaign to legal action against the Food Prices Review Board, a company spokesman said Friday.

Norman Lesh, vice-president for merchandising of M. Loeb Ltd., which controls IGA Canada Ltd. and supplies IGA-franchised food stores in the Ottawa area, said in an interview the action is a result of the board's survey of retail food prices in the Ottawa-Hull area which recently listed four IGA stores as the most expensive.

The type of action to be taken will be announced next week, he said.

Mr. Lesh said the review board has refused to provide information to back up its statements about price comparisons between food retailers.

He said without more information, it is impossible to judge the accuracy of the comparisons or take corrective action.

Mr. Lesh also said some groups of stores in Ottawa are cutting prices to look better in the board's survey, while IGA retailers are independents and cannot underwrite price cuts here with profits from a larger operation.

He said additional information "might give us the privilege of submitting" the board investigators turned up genuine anomalies.

Mr. Lesh said IGA would also like to know what specific products are in the board's survey. He said prices of potatoes can differ up to two cents a pound, depending on whether they are Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec or Ontario produce.

He said the board recognizes only Canada No. 1 potatoes and does not take quality differences into account.

Fewer Seeking Amnesty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States defence department announced Friday it is shifting its amnesty operations from Camp Atterbury, ind., to smaller facilities at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, ind., because fewer military deserters are coming in.

The latest figures released by the Pentagon show that 1,103 deserters have been processed so far in nearly four weeks since President Ford proclaimed his conditional amnesty program.

But only 671 of them came in voluntarily. The rest either were brought to Camp Atterbury after being arrested prior to Ford's proclamation.

At the outset of the program, the Pentagon said there were 12,556 Vietnam-era deserters still at large.

There have been a total of 8,-000 inquiries from deserters concerning the program as it affects them. Army officials have said they calculate that one man will come in and take part out of very 100 inquiries.

Rocky Gave $1.7 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice-president - designate Nelson Rockefeller says he made gifts totalling $1,778,400 to 18 persons or former public officials or staff members while he was governor of New York.

The former governor also said he has outstanding loans totalling $155,000 to three of the 18.

Rockefeller had previously disclosed gifts and loans to five persons totalling a gift of $50,000 in 1969 to Henry Kissinger, now U.S. state secretary.

Rockefeller said he made the gifts public because "confidential information . . . be submitted to Congress and the executive branch . . . could be leaked piecemeal to the press, causing the compromising of the privacy of many individuals and misleading interpretations of the facts."

Rockefeller said all the gifts were reported as required by the International Revenue Service and that he had paid a total of $840,000 in federal and state taxes on the gifts.

Details of the gift-giving were revealed Friday night in response to a request from Chair-(Dem.Nev.) of the Senate rules committee investigating Rockefeller's qualifications for the vice-presidency.

Congressional sources in Washington said reports of the gifts prompted a House of Representatives judiciary subcommittee to request renewal of an FBI inquiry into Rockefeller's activities to answer questions not covered in initial FBI investigation reports.

Munro on Unemployment:

Academic Emphasis Costly

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Labor Minister John Munro says this summer's average unemployment rate of five per cent was still too high and selective measures are needed to lower it.

In an Ottawa interview with The Globe and Mail, Mr. Munro said some of the unemployment reflects the inadequacy of the government's past efforts in training programs.

Statistics Canada announced Tuesday that the unemployment rate for September was 5.8 per cent.

"There is a tremendous demand for people, particularly skilled people, and yet we have these high unemployment statistics," Mr. Munro said.

He said there is a need for changes in training and retraining programs such as those offered by Canada Manpower rather than relying on fiscal and monetary policies to stimulate economic growth and jobs.

Mr. Munro also said too much emphasis has been placed on academic training rather than training for skilled trades.

"Our performance over the next couple of years will be judged by whether we can lower the unemployment rate," Mr. Munro said in the interview.

Watergate Cover-up Trial Opening in Court Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecution and defence lawyers in the Watergate cover-up trial are spending the weekend refining their opening arguments and planning strategy for the long-awaited start of proceedings in the jury.

A jury of nine women and three men was sworn in Friday. Another six women were seated as alternate jurors.

After the jurors were sealed and shielded from publicity about the case, Sirica made public pre-trial motions which he had reserved during jury selection.

In one, former president Richard Nixon's doctor said he must undergo treatment for phlebitis for a period of between three and five months and that he travel to Washington to appear as a witness during that period might create "a potentially very serious risk to his health."

John Ehrlichman, former White House aide, and the prosecution have subpoenaed Nixon to appear as a witness. Citing Nixon's health, lawyers for the former president asked that the subpoenas be dismissed.

Lawyers for Ehrlichman and former attorney-general John Mitchell said they plan to delay their opening statements until after the prosecution completes presentation of its entire case.

Cottagers Advised

PICTON — Cottage breakins during the winter months often can be prevented by practical security measures, says Constable Donald Watt, Community Services Officer for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.
He urges cottage owners who will be closing their summer homes this weekend to follow these recommendations:
As many portable valuables as possible should be removed from the cottage when it is closed for the season and property remaining marked for identification should it be stolen.
Windows and doors should be secured and,preferably, covered with shutters or boarded. Locking devices should be checked for quality, state of repair and proper installation.
If a cottage check in the wintry months shows there has been a break-in, the occupant should not touch the scene or wander about as this destroys evidence needed by police to catch the culprit.
Neighboring cottagers may form a cottage association, checking each other's property periodically, when in the area.
"No cottage can be completely burglar-proof. You can, however, improve security to a point where a burglar will consider the risk of detection outweighs his potential gain," says Constable Watt.

Juveniles Arrested

Two Belleville juveniles have been released in their parents' custody following their arrest Friday night.
City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said two juveniles were apprehended by a homeowner who returned to his home to find the two just leaving.
John Rose and his companion Judy Hulsman, an Ontario Provincial Policewoman, arrested the two on foot.
"When one was caught, the other came out of hiding," said Chief Crosbie.
A small amount of cash, foreign coins, a watch and some rings were recovered.

Nicholson Grads Hear Chairman

Wilf Wilkinson, Quinte area accountant and chairman of the Loyalist College Board of Governors, cautioned Nicholson Catholic College students Friday night of the "enormous world problems" they would have to face in the future, during his address to the graduating class.
During the graduation program, 46 honor graduation diplomas, 48 secondary school graduation diplomas (grade 12) and six Ontario Scholarships were conferred.
The Ontario Scholars are Hartono Bingei, Marie Bissette, Djalkifli Gunawan, Louise Elmy, Donna Kenny, Anthony Wall and Pat Walsh.
Mr. Wilkinson — in a brief speech — urged the graduating class to "learn from those who differ — beware of communication breakdowns.
"We don't understand sometimes because we don't stop to listen," he said.
Valedictorian Elise McKenna, chosen by her classmates, told her peers, "Nicholson now is a memory to hold dear — its teachers taught us more than facts, they taught us courage and integrity.
"Believing we know little, we have learned much," said Miss McKenna.
Some awards, bursaries and scholarships conferred included Catholic Doctors and Lawyers Scholarship to Marie Bissette. Miss Bissette also won a Trent University admission bursary.

Hastings To Be Host For Week

Hastings County will play host this year to the provincial opening ceremonies for Education Week. The event will take place April 20 in Belleville, with dignitaries present from across the province.
The result is two Education Week committees this year — one for the provincial events, called the Ontario Hastings Committee, and the other, for local event, called the Hastings County Education Week Committee. Both committees have held inaugural meetings and will meet again Oct. 18.
Heading up the committees are Walter Cochran, chairman, representing the public school board and Del O'Sullivan, co-chairman, representing the separate school board. Lloyd Sercor is advisory chairman.
For the first time, the county committee will have a subcommittee of students to advise on their participation in Education Week. Dudley Hiller, vice-principal of Centennial Secondary School is heading the sub-committee, comprised of students from each high school in the county.
Keith Martin of Loyalist College heads the sub-committee arranging the opening ceremonies.

Indian Summer

Indian Summer is nature's most dramatic hour, she wears her radiant ribbons of awards for distinguished service . . . she has produced . . . she has yielded . . . she has merited her winter of rest.
So it is in our lives . . . our finest hour is the last of life for which the first was made.
Through death we return to our maker and rewards unfathomable for a life well lived. It is to the loved ones left behind that death is a SORROW.
It is to the bereaved that our sympathetic understanding is sincerely expressed by directing a funeral priced within their means and complying with individual needs and personal requirements.

Cheese Factory Closings Seem Reasonable to Owner

Picton Bureau

BRIGHT, Ont. (CP) — When Sid Bright's Cheese and Butter Manufacturing Co. was built in this village northwest of Ottawa, some 50-odd years ago, it was one of the largest cheddar cheese factories in Ontario.

Today it is one of only 37.

At the turn of the century Ontario's rural cheddar cheese industry was the province's third largest in dollar terms.

Now, due to milk shortages, provincial milk quotas and rising dairy cheese factories to cream and skims in the public's cheese-buying tastes, the industry is on the skids.

"The future of single-purpose cheddar is doubtful," Ontario is in jeopardy," the Eastern Ontario Cheese Manufacturers' Association told a provincial cabinet committee last year.

Max Smith, who runs the Bright factory, said he would like to see the now-empty shed off the whole length of fallen cheddar cheese production in Ontario.

"The newspapers have made many of them into the cow-palaces," he said. "I think the whole thing has been blown out of proportion."

Mr. Smith, said many of the cheese plants that closed "just weren't fit to be manufacturing a food product in."

On the latter point, many other considered him. Ontario has brought a tremendous change in the kind of cheese being sold.

"You've got pretty well every brand of cheese that could be being made in any other country," Mr. Smith said, he said.

Mr. Smith estimated that about 90 per cent of his production is brick and Colby cheese. Colby tastes like a mild cheddar, compared with months or even years for a sharp cheddar cheese.

"It's a mild, short-age type of cheese. The young people certainly seem to have gone for it."

Pool Proposal Needs Thought

BY MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Picton Kinsmen this week tossed a life ring to a floundering project, with plans for a community pool in Prince Edward County.

The pool project stubbornly refuses to go down for the third time and remains unnecessarily as an embarrassment to public indifference and apathy. The Kinsmen, capable organizers of service clubs and committees revive the ailing dream but usually not for long.

The Kinsmen Club has volunteered to spearhead a campaign for a pool, if backed by county residents. Other service clubs have pledged input and county councillors.

Ring on was the reaction of people in Picton town council this week.

Councillors were given fact sheets outlining how funds for the pool could be raised and a sheet with a diagram of the proposed project.

Representatives of the Kinsmen Club stated that other clubs asked council for an indication of its feeling toward the pool before it was referred to the Community Centres Board for discussion.

Mayor James Bird suggested since the proposed site of the pool is at the fairgrounds, which is council-owned property, the Agricultural Society council should be approached.

The mayor termed the idea as one of the best presentations he had heard since the idea of a pool but observed others have failed.

Picton reeve Ross Crankwright also praised the proposal adding it is the first he had seen in three years that offered clear, written details. Picton reeve seemed to enjoy his take two blossom.

The proposed pool, a community swimming pool has been discussed but the project has fallen flat.

The Quinte's July Swimming Pool Committee conducted a rescue in 1973 when a meeting of service club representatives, Prince Edward school trustees and other municipal officials met to try to revive the idea of education offices.

The board had given approval for construction of a pool at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute provided certain conditions. This location seemed preferable to committees had funds for the project were needed.

It was decided at the meeting application for a LIP grant could be made, a request was submitted by Quinte's July pool committee's chairman Ronald Reinhart but the grant was not obtained.

To encourage public donations to the pool fund bank accounts were opened in Prince Edward to receive contributions. Picton's late mayor Harvey J. Redmond, at one point, offered to match donations dollar for dollar, the moment to gauge public response to funding the project was placed on the hook of the Armory Mall but the mercury failed to rise above zero.

Before yet another pool building campaign is launched organizers should consider a pool mortem on other long-dead efforts.

It is difficult to imagine all of Prince Edward's service clubs, organizations and committees in a heated argument on location, cost and maintenance of a pool. Only certainly be needed's a community project "for" too many voices and not enough "hands."

A pool committee also should be sure it is not labelled like the Boy Scout leading the little old lady across the street when she really wanted to stay on the other side.

Does Prince Edward County want a community pool? Certainly service clubs and organizations have indicated support for the idea. Picton's next recent meeting of county council, Wellington reeve Robert Royce described a pool as a much-needed facility.

On the other hand, many community residents responds dry contributing to the pool bank accounts? According to the thermometer overall the last community the answer is "no."

The pool proposal is a new one. Council may decide this only after the July 17 public Centre in Picton needs a new roof and there is a county museum and tourist development and expansion. Is it wise to put still another hole in the fire?

Hopefully, the latest pool proposal marks a real beginning instead of another false start. Although there may be a need to change plans, re-examine funding methods and cost construction, surely the venture can be pushed to completion if the community wants a pool.

Farmers Take Offensive Combat Crop Hijackers

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP) — Fraser Valley farmers are patrolling their fields as an effort to stop crop thefts which a spokesman says will total thousands of dollars.

Nick DeWaal, president of the Fraser Valley Food and Vegetable Growers Association, said Wednesday that there has been little co-operation from police although crop stealing and vandalism has increased.

"This is the worst year we've ever had," he said. "It's so bad that people with campers have been driving into fields and taking away truckloads."

Brian Sparkes, who operates 600 acres of cash crops near Agassiz, across the river, said farmers from Richmond to the east end of the Fraser Valley have similar problems.

He said one farmer Agassiz, after losing $400 worth of gas to thieves, attached a nine-foot blade to the front of his tractor. When a car approached and its occupant raised his pistol and began to fill it's tank, the hired man switched on the lights and the motor and headed for the car.

The surprised occupant fled, the blade sliced off the top of the car at door level, and the remains of the car were pushed down a bank.

Mr. DeWaal said that from one field he lost more than a ton of corn, and in another a minimum of $200 worth of corn—everything in the first 10 rows next to the road was stripped.

A farmer in Delta had bootytrapped his field with a chain harrow partially buried in the road leading to a field.

He sharp six-inch pegs fastened all four tires of a thief's car, but when the farmer went to retrieve the tool he couldn't find it—until his own tractor hit it, buried in another part of the field.

A Langley strawberry farmer who returned after a weekend trip discovered someone had charged persons 25 cents a pound to pick their own fruit from his field.

"Now that's a pretty smart operator in my mind," said Mr. DeWaal.

Cold War Hits Soybean Crop

CHICAGO (AP) — A September cold wave has caused hundreds of millions of dollars in damage to crops across the United States Midwest and East, officials reported Friday. Harvey J. Hellickson, of one point, offered to match donations dollar for dollar. A temmoment to gauge public response to funding the project was placed on the hook of the Armory Mall but the mercury failed to rise above zero.

Weeds Possible Food Source

GUELPH (CP) — Five University of Guelph scientists are testing lake weeds to see if they can be used as feed for cattle, sheep animals and as fertilizer, the university says.

Engineering staff in a news release Friday that the provincial environment ministry wants to find a use for weeds being removed from lakes to improve their recreational quality.

It said the scientists are testing weeds removed recently from Lake Chemong near Peterborough.

Two of the professors plan to feed the dried weeds as well as silage made from the plants to animals in an attempt to determine their nutritional value.

The other three men will attempt to convert the weeds into a human-like material by composting it, both alike and in combination with other materials.

The results of both experiments likely will be completed in about 18 years.

Preliminary studies by the university indicate an eight-to-one pulper-cent protein content, as well as significant quantities of ash and phosphorus, in the plants.

Tractor Still Runs

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — Some residents of this Ottawa Valley town still enjoy their work-a-day tractor when Fred Wormins drives by on his tractor.

That's because Fred's tractor is no ordinary machine. It's 60 years old and he keeps it running with a pail of water and an odd bit of baling wire.

Fred, who admits to being 70 odd years old himself, says he's not much for machinery, has no intention of buying a new one.

"It's got four wheels, a horn, a seat and it runs," he said, "and it gets me where I want to go."

He still uses the old tractor to till his garden and work at pasturing. He starts work at 4 a.m. every day.

"I can't go any about five miles an hour," said Fred, "but then I'm usually going anywhere in a hurry."

Transit System May Be Costly

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Town people may be picking their own pockets if what now appears as a cautious move towards instituting a dial-a-bus service in Trenton gathers any momentum and bears fruit.

As if failings were warped sense of tradition, public transit systems can't make a slime, authorities indicate. Besides that public purse are generally needed to meet the deficits chalked up by transit services.

The same sight occur in Trenton if the bus system were now only a suggestion and a hesitant possibility in council's eye, becomes a fact here.

Council has does need a limited bus system. But before a strong demand for one is raised, it must be recognized that even a small service using 15-passenger buses can cost taxpayers money.

The question then is simple: Does the apparent need for the service outweigh the desire of taxpayer to keep their personal dollars tucked neatly in their wallets?

Transportation engineers use the following rule of thumb: A system costs a municipality 85 per capita annually after a provincial operating subsidy and a capital outlay grant have been deducted.

That's $36,000. Can Trenton residents support any service to such an extent through bus fares and provincial subsidizing? The sum represents an approximate 2.5 increase in the existing mill rate. If the privately-owned bus service chalks up a deficit, the town would be forced to make good under a contract agreement with its operator.

One must also take into consideration the death of Trenton's only other in-town bus service. Has a precident been set?

In the early 1950's, four large buses were run on the town's streets, but not as well paved as now. The resulting punishment increased maintenance costs and a lack of passenger power around the 10,000-odd population killed the service.

However, the amount of any deficit the inovative dial-a-bus system would run up in Trenton today is unknown. It may be higher than the $2 per capita per year thumb guide.

In Belleville the transit commission had managed to keep its deficit under $90,000 for about 13 years. Last year however, after the provincial subsidy was deducted, Belleville's coffers were forced to hand over an estimated $62,000.

Soaring Canada inflation has hit the commission hard, drastically pushing costs forward. Officials forecast the 1974 deficit at $85,000, an approximate $25,000 more that Rx council paid in 1973. The cost to each taxpayer then is $2.32.

Granted, Belleville is running a first rate service. At least at the moment, such a criticism has not been suggested here.

It appears, at present, the only solution to the dollars over desirability quandry is a feasibility study. However, council seems hesitant to be tempted into loosening the string of the public purse with an election fees than two months away. Might not a bus service in Trenton become an election issue?

What now may become an issue could easily be deflated council's request for such a study. It would carry out the years many — an estimated $15,000 maximum costs would be shared 75 per cent by the province.

Art And Theatre

With the Theatre Guild off to another start with its presentation of Lovers, for three days this week and then again later in the month, Belleville audiences have something with which to whet their appetite.

For art devotees, too, there is an exhibition in the Corby library of the work of A. A. Elliott. If the scenes and characters that fill these canvases appear familiar, they are just that. Mr. Elliott has taken as his subjects scenes from travel and other publications; if he has been criticised for this, it might be said, why shouldn't he? There is an element of plagiarism in most forms of creative endeavor, and Mr. Elliott's eye is so true, and his brush so faithful to the original scene that the results have merit and strength of their own.

Another performance in the offing locally will be presented by the Kingston Symphony Orchestra. And it might not be out of place to pass on some advice expressed in a letter to The Globe and Mail recently. In it Bernice Hines lamented the "trained seal behavior of Toronto opera-goers, always jumping the gun with their applause, or applauding at the wrong time. We are not sophisticated that something of the kind might not happen here too, spoiling some subtle musical phrasing or conclusion for those striving to savor it ALL, and inviting inward curses from the musicians themselves.

It is a polite and knowledgeable audience that really LISTENS, while awaiting the correct moment to applaud. Perhaps what it needs is a cue card, as in television, or as Mr. Hines suggests, a flashing sign saying "applause."

Nuclear Plant

What Hydro officials describe as minor leaks of nuclear materials from the Candu reactor at the Pickering nuclear power station recalls questions about the safety factor before a Belleville audience.

A couple of years ago the station's public relations officer, Pat Kelly, was questioned on this theme by members of the Rotary Club.

Mr. Kelly assured his audience that the plant has fail-safe equipment to deal with any such mish-up. And even at that, no serious problems were anticipated.

As Mr. Kelly pointed out in his address: "A nuclear reactor is simply a different kind of furnace. Once the heat is produced, it is virtually identical to a conventional type of thermal station. The heat is used to boil water, which in turn produces steam. This steam drives a turbine which spins a generator, thereby producing electricity."

If any threat to the surrounding area, or to residents, is posed by this incident of recent days, it is Hydro's responsibility to issue immediate warning. But the word is that no such danger exists.

Petty Crime

Bell Canada reportedly has a costly program on its hands mending telephones severed or damaged by sharpshooting vandals.

These are the same type of louts whom householders here complain throw stones, and even fire pellets ammo into windows.

If any of these people are caught by the police, and appear in court, they should not be let off lightly.

"Far too often crime these days is rewarded with next-to-no punishment. Parolees are let out of jail, and the next thing they have committed some other, perhaps even more serious, crime.

It is time parents, schools, and our system of justice combined to give the young a greater sense of direction and discipline. And it should include a basic respect for property which the above incidents indicate is often lacking.

Israel Though Wary Seen As Battle-Fatigued And Abandoned by Its Friends

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Israel is not in the news these days as events unfold elsewhere in the Middle East, to Cyprus, Ethiopia, Greece and Turkey.

This temporary "abandonment" of Israel by world powers are concerned with other issues, inflation, oil resources this winter, elections, may be part of the reason Israelis are not responding in their usual tough way to the many enemies still surrounding them.

Echelevitch, to reduce personal consumption in a country with better than 25 per cent inflation and 40 per cent of its national budget devoted to the military, was fallen in deaf ears.

The ever-present threat of terrorism, either the kind that comes over the headlines or the kind that between Israel and Lebanon or the more unexpected kind in the major airports, is now considered a part of life in urban crime in the United States.

There is the growing but rarely publicized opposition to Israel set against the well-meaning Jewish intellectuals, everywhere full of enthusiasm for Israel's stand, but who are not around to don a rifle and share the dangers of the shooting war.

There could all be a reaction from of battle fatigue from a struggle which has lasted not for six years of Second World War but a quarter century spanning the life of a generation from Israel's old and young.

Apathy about the world conflict could be, on a local observer has written, the only way to describe what is a mental fog since if and when it comes.

But there is a change in attitude no longer hidden in spite of the ever-present threat. Israelis think for themselves in judgments made by politicians and military leaders in the Yom Kippur war of a year ago.

Israelis are not naive. The infallability about political and military leadership which the Israelis justifiably did not feel they had in 1967. Then, as the forefront in the month of the press, the quick rejoicin to foreign gifts — who said the Arabs were bedding up in fire-power and their skill in using it coming. Israel's many Arab neighbors.

The early losses in October 1973, especially in the air, and during the tank warfare along the Israel-Syrian front have not been published by Israel.

Unlike 1967, there were no "close parks" created in the major cities of various kinds of captured Soviet equipment made available to Egyptians and Syrians.

And during the current bursts of discussion by world oil producing and user countries, notably in the U.S. at the annual meetings of the World Bank, Arab representatives are not expressing their strong feelings against Israeli expansionism" in any volatile way.

Their anticipated opposition to Israel has been viewed as an essential part of discussions and negotiations preliminary to the final continuity to the Western industrial nations.

Undoubtedly the armed forces are as alert as ever, the air force is waiting for its next batch of U.S. jet fighters, the army on the "qui vive" against the Syrian armor. Reserves are restricted by the Golan Heights agreement with Syria last year.

All in all, it's an uneasy and gloomy time for Israel. The Israelis are resigned to remain content that the Kissinger mission is working of earlier this year will keep the peace in the Middle East for now.

Of course no one can be sure of anything and the Tel Aviv man-in-the-street knows it.

Spectre Of Zero Economic Growth in Canada As Economists Peer Into Their Crystal Balls

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Each year at this time, the economists come into their own with a flurry of forecasts about the next year's business conditions.

Today's highly unsettled situation is putting the economists on their mettle as never before.

For many years past, the basic assumption was that the Canadian economy would automatically expand by the following year. The only question was by how much, and what areas of the economy would be stronger than others.

Most economic forecasts for 1974 seemed to be based on that automatic assumption — and were therefore largely incorrect.

In a perverse way, most forecasts went wrong in the one area where they called for a slump. Sales of big cars were widely expected to fall thus reducing the demand for primary steel, tires and the like) but Canadians have gone right on buying gasguzzling cars (Detroit, Oakville and Windsor, Ont., can produce.

The consensus of economists a year ago was that Canada's 1974 economy would expand by a bit more than five per cent (vs. about seven per cent in 1973).

Latest figures available cover the six months up to mid-1974. At that point, the economy had stopped growth altogether.

As Statistics Canada said in a comment that angered Finance Minister John Turner, "the Canadian economy may have entered a period of weakness common to industrialized nations of the world."

One of the earliest 1975 forecasts, and one commanding widespread attention, is that of the Conference Board. Its forecast is based by Arthur Smith, former chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, and its forecast—its first—is based on an econometric model).

It suggests that next year will be a period of greatly reduced activity in Canada, but with no progress in restraining inflation (13 per cent) nor wage increases.

The Conference Board expects that real per-capita income ("frequently a rough measure of the average standard of living") will rise by only 1.5 per cent next year, and real Gross National Product by 1.2 per cent.

It warns that unemployment could reach 7.8 per cent of the labor force by the end of 1975.

Other private forecasters look for a better performance. One well known Toronto-based economist thinks today's situation is 1951-52 and 1920-21—both periods of rapid inflation and depression fears, but followed by many years of growth.

At the moment, a selective choice of economic indicators could support both views. Financial indicators tend to be discouraging, while non-financial ones are brighter.

Financial: Securities markets are in a state of confusion, with sweet almost totally unwilling to respond to the latest price increases. Interest rates are so high that housing starts are running 20 per cent below 1973's level. Reports of many types of goods are lagging because fewer consumers find our prices too high.

Non-financial: The employment rate improved substantially in the third quarter. Summer spending remains remarkably high (even in areas). Items such as art objects and thoroughbred horses fill the order of retailers.

In other words, the future of the economy it uncertain—as always.

But today's uncertainties are deep and serious—and they call for special care in putting together the all-important federal budget.

Teachers' Federation Study Seeks Better Schooling

By DON O'HEARN
Education Writer
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Our teaching fraternity and sorority, the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, has often been viewed with less than praise in observations in this space.

In recent years it has been the apparent greed for shorter hours, more money, smaller classes, work to rule, has been almost in the forefront and rightly or wrongly deserved the license of abuse they have been the matters commented on and often somewhat critically.

It is therefore pleasant to be able to report a positive line of action by teachers and the OSSTF.

This action is a $75,000 study which the Federation is sponsoring to find out how to improve our educational system through better ways of teachers and more importantly, the public.

The study aims to find out just what is wrong with our secondary school system and how good to see the teachers volunteering their services to investigate it—and then come up with proposals for solutions.

The obvious first conclusion is that this is a propaganda move, and it undoubtedly will be hailed as such in some quarters.

It may, and very certainly could, turn into this. Just a vehicle try and sell what is being said out there doesn't seem to be a unreasonable way for them to have a voice.

However, the writer prefers to take it on faith.

For one reason because the officials responsible for the study, from President Jim Foley down, have given an impression that feeble faith. They appear to be both serious and sincere.

Then secondly because such a study could be valuable.

The study is to take the form of a questionnaire to 34,000 secondary school teachers and then to rams at Sudbury, Windsor, London, Thunder Bay and Ottawa.

The questionnaire appears interesting in that the study may be done by mail, not by personal contact with the grassroots.

Thus the teachers can give better advice on our educational system today and tomorrow.

Simultaneously the parents in home and school associations, and the public at large, whether mother or father who is not a teacher, will be given the chance to buy to cast contact with children without any preconceptions or influence what is good education. Without preconceptions.

The "public" is to be listened to as well as teachers, but this is to be a "representative" public—of labor groups, home and school.

It would be reassuring if the Federation would give a bit more thought and figure out some way that we can get the word from Mr. and Mrs. Joe Parent.

These people are probably the ones most worthy to be heard.

The study is going to be hard to do. Only time will tell if it is a valid and a platform from which to air heads.

A Marshmallow for a Bullet

Critics Say Anti-Inflation Package a Fizzle

By BRUCE LEVETT
WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States public had been warned not to expect "a blockbuster" in President Ford's economic proposals—and they didn't get one.

What they did get, many economists and analysts said, was a middle-of-the-road set of counterbalancing policies that do not hit hard enough at the inflation problem.

While Ford had warned the public they would have to "bite the bullet" in the days ahead, his economic program—as one economist put it—has more nibbling into a marshmallow.

Analysts suggest that there was one outstanding facet to the Ford proposals, a proposal for business taxes as a reflecting the president's conviction that for the long haul a favorable climate for capital investment must be created to stimulate new jobs.

His call for a five-per-cent surtax on middle and upper incomes to raise the $5 billion needed to carry out his anti-inflation program is criticized as hitting at the wrong section of the economy.

It draws fire, also from economists who say the proposed billion by shelfing taxes does not have a deep effect in a $1.4-trillion economy.

But if the Ford program is under fire for the proposals it makes, it also draws criticism for some things it does not do.

There was no call on business and labor for hold down price and wage—no controls and not even suggested guideline in that area.

Those who sought a full-scale fight against inflation are disappointed by the lack of any specific cuts in the federal budget and by the decision to encourage — immediately attack — government practices that contribute to inflation.

And there was no comprehensive energy-saving program.

Ford, in asking for the surtax on corporations and income, said he was doing so now—less than a month before the congressional elections—because he believes fiscal policy is key to the country's economic problem.

The decision on whether to play politics in this regard may not be his to make.

Already, there are indications on Capitol Hill that Republican senators and congressmen are dismayed at having a proposal become a football for debate added to the other burdens they must carry to the hustings.

On the other hand, Ford has promised an easing of money and credit strictures which, if followed through quickly enough, could aid the Democratic cause.

Indeed, Ford's call for aid to the unemployed, for a fight against inflationary practices in government, revving the allied housing industry and pushing food production are areas which wrongs in it—and they come up with proposals for solutions.

The obvious first conclusion is that this is a propaganda move, and it undoubtedly will be hailed as such in some quarters.

It may, and very certainly could, turn into this. Just a vehicle try and sell what is being said out there doesn't seem to be a unreasonable way for them to have a voice.

Electronic Hansard

Commons on Television on All-Party Basis

By STEWART MacLEOD
OTTAWA (CP) — A key element in government plans to televise parliamentary proceedures is televising Commons and committee proceedings on which might begin within a year.

"The government is determined to proceed with an 'electronic Hansard,'" says a high-placed source. "But we think it can be done on an all-party, non-partisan basis."

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp is expected to begin informal talks soon with other House leaders so the matter can be referred to a committee for further study. Televising procedures is considered the key element because this could influence greatly other changes to speed the work of Parliament.

None of the parties is happy with the present committee system. In the 1968 overhaul of parliamentary procedure a great deal of Commons business was taken from the public eye under the expectation that public attention would be the major force transfer. But it didn't work out that way.

Only a few exceptions, committees have received little attention from the public or press and MPs still regard the Commons as the only major forum for speeches. Also, the 1968 reforms have not greatly speeded the legislative process.

"But if committees were televised this could change," said the source. "We would get shorter, snappy speeches, less hacking, and members wouldn't feel that the Commons was the only forum for reaching hometown audiences."

It could have a similar effect in the Commons.

Sessions involved in highlevel discussions on the subject, says there is a strong view within the government that the Commons should retain its own television and recording operation, as opposed to having it fed to an existing network.

The tapes and film would be made available to licensed carriers this is considered fair usage would be that the carriers give a "fair and balanced" view of proceedings.

Speaker Lamoureux Jerome also believed to favor such an operation.

Three years ago, a Commons committee recommended that such a system be tried on an experimental basis, and this report likely will form the basis of the new study. But House officials say the new committee might eliminate the experimental recommendation.

"It's not going to be nothing," said one. "The lighting and the sound system would have to be revised, and once we committ ourselves it will be a permanent thing."

While the House speech, subject of this new session of Parliament Sept. 30, said that parliamentary reform would be sought "as a matter of urgency," sources say televising proceedings is the key issue. Other reforms could follow after the public decides whether this new public exposure helped the day-to-day operation of the House.

Despite objections from some Liberal backbenchers, who normally get little exposure in the House, senior party members are confident that agreement on televising proceedings will be reached before spring.

LETTERS

Civil Servants Want More

To the Editor:
The Intelligencer:

I am fed up with all these civil servants who claim they are underpaid and the "second-class citizens". I have often met civil servants and talked with some of them.

The Civil Service Association of Ontario is talking nonsense when it refers to its members being in this category.

Despite all the threats they are currently making, I notice there are no suggestions their members go on strike, and that would provide the perks they want.

Too many civil servants today are overpaid, underworked and, in some cases, underqualified.

Many put in less than a 40 hour week and all enjoy fringe benefits that are the envy of most other working people.

Today's civil servant has the greatest fringe benefits of all going for him - job security, 20 years and he is all pensioned, 35 years and he can get the highest pension in the land, plus the odd spade and say yes on cue.

You can be lazy, indifferent and incompetent - it makes no difference, it is all pensionable.

Don't knock it chaps, the pickings are RICH and very good.

Dollar a Day

In Pay and Hours---

Anglican Church Reporters Fifty Years Behind Times

EDMONTON (CP) — "Reporters for St. John's Edmonton Report cheerfully work at "breakneck" 80 hours a week for $1 a day and agree to live by the rigid rules of an unique Anglican order that calls itself the Company of the Cross.

The work force includes several veteran reporters with 20 years' experience who were lured away from newspapers in Oklahoma and Florida to toil for a weekly newsmagazine that had its beginnings in a private boys' school.

Ted Byfield, 46, is editor of Edmonton Report, which put out its first edition in November, 1973, and now has a circulation of 10,000. Publisher Keith T. Bennett says the magazine needs a circulation of 17,000 to break even and 25,000 to feel secure.

For 35 cents a week or $7.50 for six months subscribers get about 36 glossy pages of information a week, ranging over such topics as pornography, the university, the media, unions and justice.

Mr. Byfield was brought up in Toronto, moved to Washington with his family, dropped out of George Washington University to become a copy boy on Washington Post, served as a reporter on Montana Journal, where he met and later married veteran page writer Virginia Naim.

He was an editor on Timmins Press and Sudbury Star, then came west to Winnipeg Free Press, where he worked for 10 years and won a National Newspaper Award in 1957 for political reporting. He left The Free Press in 1962 to help establish St. John's School in Manitoba and the Company of the Cross.

The company was organized by Anglican laymen to run the Manitou boy's school at a minimum cost to parents. Mr. Byfield moved on to Alberta a few years later to establish a St. John's School near Stony Plain, 20 miles west of Edmonton.

The schools are basically self-supporting, with boys assigned to fund-raising projects and routine chores," said John Vernhout, managing editor of Edmonton Report and former editor of the Daily Oklahoman.

"In Manitoba, the boys ran a highly profitable business to raise funds but provincial regulations wouldn't allow that in Alberta."

So the Alberta school started its own printing business, which proved a success and prompted suggestions from Mr. Byfield: "Why don't we start a magazine?"

The magazine rapidly outgrew production facilities at the school—where the boys helped with routine printing by folding and cleaning while the editorial staff commuted—and now is published by St. John's Edmonton Report Ltd. from offices in Edmonton.

The Company of the Cross found that starting a magazine was easier said than done. As Mr. Bennett put it in an editorial in one of Edmonton Report's early editions:

"Establishing a reading habit among 25,000 people is a formidable task. The probability of failure is high. The reward — of success are great.

"We in the Company of the Cross were finding out exactly how big a job we have undertaken. We were both appalled at its proportions and heartened by such initial successes as we have achieved."

—Edmonton Report began by circulating 4,500 copies to about 150 stores in the city. A third of them sold, the rest were returned. The company gave away another 4,500 copies to residents of west Edmonton, then went back to cover-charge for subscribers—about 250 came in. Combined with sales in stores, that gave Edmonton Report an initial circulation of about 2,000.

The company kept plugging away—15,000 copies of the third edition were distributed free to Edmonton homes—and circulation began to look up—to 5,000 in May, 1974 and to 10,000 in August, 1974.

The company then turned to the task of finding a circulation manager and a publisher than staff, canvassing Canada and the United States for people willing to work under the peculiar circumstances of the Company of the Cross.

As Mr. Bennett put it, the circulation manager would have to be "a remarkable individual, able to get up with the company at six o'clock in the morning, say his prayers, and think about virtually nothing else except the sale of the book until nightfall when he can say them again and go to sleep."

Editor Ted Byfield (left) and managing editor John Vernhout discuss the editorial policy of Edmonton's new weekly magazine, the St. John's Edmonton Report. Quaker Lectures At Queen's

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

Few people have a chance to run riders with the great. In a sense, readers of this column will have such an opportunity next week, Dr. D. Elton Trueblood is to deliver four public lectures in Convocation Hall, Queen's Theological College, an integral part of the setting of Queen's University. The occasion is the eighty-second annual conference of the Theological Alumni Association.

Elton Trueblood is a distinguished American philosopher who has published more than 30 books and received 13 honorary degrees. A Quaker by background and conviction, he is also a leader in fostering renewal in the whole Christian Church. (Harper and Row are his publishers).

Through his books, Dr. Trueblood exerts a global influence. One that mocked me deeply is: "Abraham Lincoln: Theologian of American Anguish". It had this effect, in part, because I read it while Watergate was the centre of attention. Incidentally, I am told that Trueblood could be very lucid in an interview with Richard Nixon about a year ago.

In addition to his work as a scholar and author, Elton Trueblood is a world-renowned leader in the laymen's movement. "Time" magazine early described his contribution as "one of the most effective ministries to laymen, clerical and unchurched in the United States". Ecumenicity has been enriched by his "Yokefellow" movement. Through a program of retreats and conferences laymen are encouraged to develop strong devotional habits.

Dr. Trueblood shows that Christianity makes sense. He disavows the autonomy of reason, but it rather with the Holy Spirit and the Bible as a source of truth. It is this belief that has steered up the faith of multitudes.

This equilibrium is indicated by the general theme of his lectures next week, "Rational Christianity" unfolding in specific themes. These will be (1) "The Christian Cause Today" — Tues., Oct. 15, 8 p.m.; (2) "Contemporary Christian Theism" — Wed., 10.30 a.m.; (3) "Meaning in Sacramental" — Wed., 8 p.m., (4) "The Recovery of Spiritual Power" — Thurs., 10.30 a.m.

Whether we can attend one or more of Elton Trueblood's lectures, whether we speak or listen in the days to follow, each address, I have a feeling that some of this Christian's passion, and power, will rub off on us all.

Provinces Pondering Reduced Speed Limits

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Plans to reduce speed limits on highways are under study in all but one province, following recent reports that reduced speeds contribute to lowering the death toll from highway accidents.

Nova Scotia, with limits of 60 miles an hour on all highways except those termed "all-weather" where 65 is the top speed, has no plans to reduce limits, says Highways Minister Leonard Pace.

Earlier this week, British Columbia announced plans to reduce the 60 m.p.h. limit now in effect for most main highways to 55 and 70 m.p.h. limit on freeways to 60.

Vancouver Island and some other areas with high traffic accident potential will be posted at 50 m.p.h.

Graham Lea, B.C. highways minister, said the decision to reduce speed limits was based on a study by his department of statistics following the introduction of a 55 m.p.h. speed limit in the United States.

John Rhodes, Ontario highways minister, said the province may impose selective reductions, in speed in some areas, but stressed that the government is not considering a general blanket reduction such as the one announced in B.C."

Statistics on highway speed reductions in the U.S., Mr. Rhodes said, do not show conclusively that lower speeds are directly related to fewer road deaths.

Quebec, which now has speed limits of 70 m.p.h. on freeways and 60 m.p.h. on other highways, is considering reduced speed limits, a spokesman said.

In Prince Edward Island, Bennett Campbell, provincial secretary said the matter of highway safety in his province has been turned over to a special committee which probably will report late this year or early next year. Meanwhile, speeds there remain at 60 m.p.h. in daytime and 55 at night.

The western provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba said they are interested in the prospect of reducing high-way speeds and will discuss the idea at a meeting in Winnipeg next week of ministers responsible for motor vehicles branches.

Manitoba in particular favors a uniform speed limit across the west and suggested that such a uniform speed limit be applied only to major highways.

Betty Ford Back Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford is back home with her family and recovering so well from breast cancer surgery that she plans to go to Japan with the president in mid-November.

Meanwhile, though, a White House spokesman said Mrs. Ford's schedule will be restricted during a three-to four-week convalescence period.

Mrs. Ford was released from Bethesda Naval Medical Centre Friday, 24 days after she underwent a mastectomy for removal of her right breast, some lymph muscles and lymph nodes from the underside of her right arm.

Hazel Hit

TORONTO (CP) — One of the worst natural disasters ever to strike the Metropolitan Toronto area occurred 20 years ago this month, Hurricane Hazel smashed a path of destruction across the city and left 81 persons dead.

The most violent tropical storm ever to hit the city, Hazel swept in on Oct. 15, 1954, and dropped nine inches of rain within 48 hours, swelling rivers and streams into raging floods.

Convicts Get No Reasons

OTTAWA (CP) — In a split decision, the Supreme Court of Canada has upheld the right of the National Parole Board to revoke a convict's parole and force him, without giving any reasons, to go back to jail for all the time he had been out on parole.

The court dismissed an appeal by Leonard John Howarth, imprisoned for armed robbery and later released on parole, who had asked the judges to take another at the parole board decision to revoke his parole.

Faguy Quits

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Faguy, commissioner of penitentiaries who began years of highly-controversial reform in Canada's prison system, announced Friday he is retiring.

When Mr. Faguy joined the penitentiary service 4½ years ago he put an end to the policy of building great stone fortresses where prisoners could be hidden and where rehabilitation was questionable.

Nicklaus' Firm Fined for Pollution

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — North American Golf Courses Construction Ltd. was fined $700 Friday on two pollution charges arising from construction work on Oakville's Glen Abbey golf course.

The construction company, owned by golf star Jack Nicklaus, was originally charged with five counts under environmental acts, but three charges were stayed and will not be pressed if the firm conforms with environmental regulations.

Crown Attorney A. James Fuller said the company was fined $200 for improperly constructing a dam on Sixteen Mile Creek in its work to upgrade the golf course for use as the permanent home of the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

Mr. Fuller said the charge was laid under the Lakes and Rivers Improvement Act. The dam was a temporary structure and has since been dismantled, he said.

The company was also convicted of flow from on a charge under the Fisheries Act.

Mr. Fuller said the company polluted the water by depositing substances harmful to fish life in the stream that runs through the expansion area of the golf course.

Commons Roundup

Mortgages to Get More Subsidy

OTTAWA (CP) — Faced with a tailspin in housing construction, Urban Affairs Minister Gilbert Isaac says he is considering broadening the government's mortgage rate subsidy plan for new home buyers.

The program would be along the lines of the Liberal election proposal to double the money available under the assisted home ownership program by adding private lenders funds to government aid, he indicated in an interview Friday.

The minister said the proposal is one of many before the cabinet to cope with the downturn in housing activity in recent months.

But Mr. Danson is clearly leaning strongly in that direction as he suggests a limited amount of government money could shake loose a larger amount of private money for new home purchasers.

William Teron, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) president, said in Montreal Thursday that if housing construction drops well below an annual rate of 200,000 starts in early 1975 the government will intervene heavily.

Mr. Teron suggested public subsidies could be linked to private capital to permit many more Canadian families to buy homes of their own.

Under such a plan, private lenders lending money at the current CMHC direct loan rate of 11.25 per cent could get subsidies bringing the effective rate down to eight per cent for AHOP borrowers, a corporation spokesman said Friday.

Viceroys Get Raise

OTTAWA (CP) — Wage raises ranging from 75 to 118 per cent were proposed for Senators and members of the House of Commons Friday.

The government proposes paying the 10 Queen's provincial representatives $25,000 a year. They haven't had a salary increase for nine years.

Currently, the lieutenant-governors of Ontario and Quebec are paid $50,000 a year. Prince Edward Island's representative gets $19,000 while all seven others get $18,000.

World Series Bumps Bombers

OTTAWA (CP) — Otto Jelinek (PC—Toronto High Park-Humber Valley) complained in the Commons Friday that a Winnipeg-Ottawa Canadian Football League game today on CBC television has been pre-empted by the opening game of the World Series between Oakland Athletics and Los Angeles Dodgers.

He said the decision runs against well-established government policy to promote Canadian television programming.

A CBC spokesman said the reason for the switch was viewer interest.

"The World Series comes once a year," said the spokesman. "Canadian football is carried all through the season."

Why an obscure law about our working conditions means a harder life for you.

The Davis government has passed a law that dictates the terms of our employment as public employees.

It's oppressive and unfair. It denies us all kinds of rights that other workers have. It keeps us behind.

But it affects you, too.

Low pay and unfair conditions cause low morale. They lead to high staff turnover and understaffing. They deter good people from becoming government employees.

So your public services suffer. Important services, from maintaining roads to staffing community colleges.

All because of this law, CECBA (Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act).

It denies us a say in many things that are usually the subject of collective bargaining.

Like promotions. Job classifications. Pension funds. Lay-offs. And many others.

We're just not allowed to negotiate on these matters, as other workers are.

So the Davis administration, as the government, has made sure the odds are in their favour as employers.

We suffer. And in the long run, so do you.

If you think that's wrong, help our fight to change this law.

Write your MPP or the Premier.

Tell them life's hard enough already.

Newspaper Publisher Saw Problem After Calgary Weekly Went Under

CALGARY (CP) — Starting a newspaper has proven disastrous more often than not and that city's SUNday was no exception, but the weekly's publisher, Mike Horsey, thinks he knows what went wrong.

The tabloid, which was launched last February, folded in June because it hadn't enough money behind it to last until the gap between costs and income was closed, he said.

"I think we made a grave mistake in not budgeting for a longer period of time.

"We just didn't have enough money to play around with . . . I would like to have tripled the financing and we would still be publishing a newspaper."

Mr. Horsey, now in public relations, worked as a reporter in Vancouver Sun after editing the University of British Columbia newspaper.

With that background he says the newspaper business is in his blood and like many journalists he had a dream of starting his own newspaper.

So after a quick survey of the retail market he found seven Calgarians who agreed to back the venture and with the publisher buying a full share, the paper started out on what he now considers a shoestring of about $80,000.

"I should have equipped us better for starters. Then I should have provided more capital funds and should have arranged further capital monies.

"It's easy to see that we could have invested a quarter of a million dollars in this venture before it returned a dime and instead we invested less than half of that . . .

"It's not so much the loss of money, I am the least able to afford a substantial cash loss, but like the product. . . .

"We were bright, and a little sassy, and we looked, I think, pretty good."

SUNday was sassy enough to earn it two defamation suits, from a city alderman and a public school board trustee, but with the paper gone belly up, these now are in limbo.

Much of the staff was cribbed from Calgary's two dailies, The Herald and The Albertan, with the rest made up of local people who wanted to write, including a rabbi who put out a gossip column and a former football player who did the literature and arts pages as well as sports.

Many of the feature stories in SUNday could be found in any daily with exceptions occurring when the staffer bore down on an issue, using the time a weekly affords. Mr. Horsey especially remembers a couple of good consumer features, a hard look at the problems of some individual communities and sports stories on things like squash, bowling and cross-country motorcycle racing.

The paper was sprinkled with weekend news and sports provided by United Press International and even had a short story and poetry page.

Most of the 50,000 distribution was home delivery but SUNday could be bought on the street for 25 cents. Mr. Horsey said he was trying to distribute it free to each household once and while he never quite made it, the paid circulation was getting up around 8,000.

Between 30 and 40 per cent of its 28 to 32 pages were advertising including a number of major department stores and Mr. Horsey feels if SUNday could have lasted to the "back to school" and Christmas advertising of the fall and early winter, the tabloid could have survived.

"It was an interesting thing, socially when it was dying, to just look at the number of pages of advertising we had and how what your cost is and how you're not going to make it. . . . The gap was certainly closing."

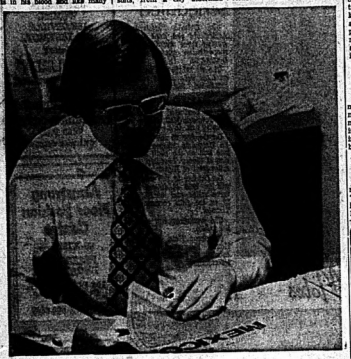
As the end drew near and the Calgary backers refused to put any more money into SUNday, Mr. Horsey said he tried to convince eastern publishers to bankroll of the operation. Had he started that project sooner, he said, he might have been able to close a deal and kept the sheet going.

The 33-year-old Mr. Horsey says he's not going to try it again but remains convinced the publication could have been a success.

"The concept is pretty good and I think it's possible. There are one or two things that will affect it. One of them is the current economic situation. It's going to a crawl . . . and I think one of the first things to go in an economic recession or a depression is a new publication which has not proved it's worthwhile.

"The other major factor is the cost of paper.

"The price of paper and the economic climate are against it so I don't think you'll see any Sunday papers or any kind of new successful publications for a little while now."



Not Enough Money

Mike Horsey of Calgary is back full-time as a public relations man after a fling at starting a Sunday newspaper. Mr. Horsey said SUNday folded because it lacked enough capital to close the gap between costs and advertising revenue. (CP Photo)

Great Tomato Controversy

The Great Tomato Controversy continues. This is one of those public issues that makes of Organic Gardening a nervous because it's important to know what's right.

A few weeks ago, I reported that according to the province's ministry of agriculture and food, yellow "ice-acid" tomatoes are perfectly suitable for canning by water bath methods. Ordinary tomatoes, the release implied, contained enough acid to be safely canned at the temperature of boiling water.

A few days later a reader reported that a doctor on the television show "Marcus Welby" featured a home economist — a representative of the federal government — who said that tomatoes of any kind were not suitable for water bath canning because "modern" tomatoes aren't the high acid products they used to be.

Then I received a new canning book from the Ball Company in the United States which includes the statement on tomatoes", The Ball company, which manufactures canning jars, says that experts agree that all tomatoes, including "sub-acid" tomatoes can be safely processed by ordinary water bath methods.

Now, the most recent issue of Organic Gardening and Farming has an article that makes all of the huge numbers of persons becoming involved in canning in response to the food prices quite interest in natural foods. Most of them just don't know what they're doing. Consequence: the incidence of botulism is increasing.

"We couldn't have the population decimated like this," Mrs. Winarski points out wryly, "so representatives of the ministry of health and the ministry of agriculture and food got together to formulate rules that would be absolutely safe: rules that would give no margin for error."

The rule: all vegetables except tomatoes must be pressure canned. Tomatoes — and only tomatoes — may be canned safely by water bath if you expressly follow the steps outlined in a reliable cookbook. Italian Plum tomatoes and yellow low-acid tomatoes require pressure canning. If you don't know the kind of varieties, stay away from canning.

If you still feel insecure, you can boil your home canned tomatoes for 10 minutes as an extra precaution.

Last year — before anybody had anything — they were perfectly safe. And you, in favour of This year — though you've canned them the same way — they may not be safe. Doesn't make much sense, but better safe than sorry.

Why "dear?" Because safe tomatoes are hard to find. A discussion refers to the deadly botulism micro-organism, which causes the most severe type of food poisoning.

In the end all the confusion drove me to seek a final and certainly dependable authority: the senior nutrition consultant in the Ontario Ministry of Health.

Marilyn Winarski explained that the recent upsurge of information and misinformation about home canning is the result of the huge numbers of persons becoming involved in canning in natural foods. Most of them just don't know what they're doing. Consequence: the incidence of botulism is increasing.

"We couldn't have the population decimated like this," Mrs. Winarski points out wryly, "so representatives of the ministry of health and the ministry of agriculture and food got together to formulate rules that would be absolutely safe: rules that would give no margin for error."

Old Glasses Re-cycled by Medical Mission

Valerie Truax is known to many in the community as District Director for the Quinte branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, an administrative post.

But quite apart from her VON career, Miss Truax is a nurse for a few weeks each year in the Interest Republic.

Along with many others from Canada and the United States, she volunteers her services during vacations to the Medical Group Missions Program. Organized by the Christian Medical Society based in Illinois, the mission is also affiliated with the Evangelical Medical Missionary Aid Society in Ontario.

This mission project that Miss Truax has worked on has been one which focuses on eye care for the needy people of this Caribbean country.

"I first heard about these medical missions from a family friend who's an opthamologist," says Miss Truax, "and naturally, the programs he'd been involved with concerned eye care and it sounded interesting to me.

"So I volunteered my services for the first time a year ago, to help in eye clinics and with eye surgery."

Like the other volunteers Miss Truax pays her own way. — The doctors even bring their own equipment," she says — and she brings as many medical supplies as she can.

She collects bandages and medication donated by local doctors and the Belleville General Hospital; supplies that otherwise would be discarded," Miss Truax says.

"And like the others on this particular mission, I collect eye glasses to be distributed at Dominican Republic eye clinics."

The collected glasses have their lenses read by a lens scometer and are then labelled to meet individual requirements.

The glasses are given to those whose prescription match the glasses. As many as 3,500 people have received glasses in one three-week long mission.

"There are so many glasses being unused by people who have new ones," Miss Truax says. "They'd just be tucked away in drawers but this way they're put to such good use."

The eye care teams travel to the Dominican Republic by Canadian Republic, setting up clinics in churches or schools, and operating in a mobile surgical unit.

The volunteer doctors and nurses work to correct crossed eyes, cataracts, pterygia (a growth covering the eye), and do up to 250 operations during one mission.

Not everyone who volunteers is medically trained, Miss Truax explains. Sometimes families decide to spend their vacations this way, and assist in the charitable organized jobs this kind of venture entails. Those who know Spanish are immediately put to work as translators.

"I learned a little Spanish during the two visits I've made, says Miss Truax, "but most of it is just relevant to eye examinations."

Preparing for her next trip in November, she looks forward to a trip to the interior of the island, remote villages she's not been to before.

"Although the high humidity makes it seem very warm, it's a beautiful place to work," she says.

The Medical Group Missions also visit Haiti (the other half of the island) and the Bahamas, with similar eye care teams, and sponsor other dental and general health projects around the world.

If you have eye glasses you'd like to donate,call Miss Truax at 968-3231

HELEN ALLEN

Family Finder To Speak Here

Helen Allen, the originator of the idea for Volume To-day's Child, will be in Belleville Thursday, October 17, talking about her work finding families for hard-to-place children. The public is invited to hear her speech at the Royal Canadian Legion Season Hotel at 8 p.m.

Miss Allen began the To-day's Child column in the Toronto Telegram 10 years ago. In 1971 the Children's Aid Department took over the column which now appears in 23 daily papers and 125 weeklies, as well as in the Toronto Star.

Miss Allen it also involved with the television program The Family Finder, launched in 1969 at her suggestion by CFTO-TV. Offered without cost to other stations, it is carried by 13 across Ontario.

Miss Allen is a newspaper woman but Helen Allen is the column that is now her life's work. Her dedication to the finding of homes for children not readily adoptable has been honored by the Order of Canada's Medal of Service, awarded by Governor-General Roland Michener in 1971.

Miss Allen has recently been in Vietnam with Victoria Leach, Adoption Co-ordinator for Ontario. They were sent by the Ministry of Community and Social Services on a fact-finding mission regarding the possible adoption of Vietnamese children by Ontario families.

Course for Volunteers Begins This Month

The way to be an effective volunteer is the subject of a five-session study course being offered in Belleville for the first time this month.

"Effective Volunteering" is a training course for persons currently working in community organizations or for persons who wish to do so.

The free course is sponsored by the Central Volunteer Bureau, the Social Planning Committee and United Community Services and the Hastings County Board of Education.

Sessions offered each Monday night beginning October 28 are the volunteer experience — communication — groups — one-to-one relationships — effective use of community resources and a final session of group discussion.

The course is being planned by Virginia O'Rourke, Ruth Burrows, Dave Smith and Brian Bentley.

For information about registering for the series, contact the Central Volunteer Bureau, 360 William Street, or Telephone 968-1355.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Benn

Benn — Foertsch

Colgate Divinity Chapel, Rochester, N.Y., was the scene of the September wedding of Gay Lynne Foertsch and Christopher Stephen Benn.

Gay is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Foertsch, New York; Christopher is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Benn, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white organza with lace appliques and ruffles at neck and hem. She wore a wide brim white organza hat and carried white gardenias and coral sweetheart roses.

The bride's sister, Holly Foertsch was maid of honor in a princess style coral and white gown. She carried a long stem white rose.

The bride's sister, Andrea Foertsch and Nancy Barker also attended with Cheryle Foertsch, her sister-in-law and Linda Benn, the groom's sister. They were attired as the maid of honor and carried coral roses.

Best man Dave Duncan was assisted by usher Reed Foertsch, the bride's brother, and Eric, Kevin, and Gary Benn, the bride's brothers.

After a buffet in the garden of Asbury Hall, the couple left on a wedding trip to Forest, Pennsylvania.

They reside in Ottawa.

Turkey Loss

TORONTO (CP) — Large food chains are selling turkeys at cost and in some cases below cost, turkey producers and food chain executives said Thursday.

Sam Crystal, vice-president of public affairs for the Ontario Group which supplies IGA and Food City stores, said these chains are selling turkeys this year below cost.

A spokesman for Loblaws said it is selling some turkeys below cost and breaking even on others.

Food stores call turkeys "loss leaders," meaning that, although they will make nothing on the sale of turkeys—currently selling from 56 to 59 cents a pound—they will recover their losses on other products the consumer buys.

Peter Flanigan, secretary-manager of the Ontario Turkey Producers Marketing Board, said it costs about 36 cents to produce a pound of turkey meat but many producers are getting only 35 cents.

He said processors are asking 59 cents a pound for the table-ready product, but double many are getting that much.

William Dyck, vice-chairman of the Farm Products Marketing Board, said that too many turkeys are being produced in Canada, and the solution to the problem lies in formulating a national plan which will get supplies in line with market requirements.

Nutrition Workshops Scheduled

The Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food is conducting three nutrition workshops in the county beginning October 29.

The workshops will be based on discussions of the recently completed Nutrition Canada survey.

On October 29, the workshop will be conducted at Huntingdon Township Hall, at 1:voice from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

On October 30 the site will be Uxbridge Women's Institute hall on the ninth concession of Elzevir Township, three miles west of Highway 14.

On October 31 the workshop will be held at Gilead Hall, three miles east of Highway 37 on the fifth concession of Thurlow.

The workshops are open to the public.

Telephone Kale Ann Wahl, Home Economist for the county, at 395-2393 for more information.

Errington — Post

Redneersville United Church was the scene of the September wedding ceremony of Elizabeth Joanne Post, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Post, and Harold Kirby Errington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Saunders, Stroud, Ont.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floral satin over sheer gown with matching train and veil trimmed with lace. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and baby's breath centered by a purple orchid.

Maid of honor was Debra Post, the bride's sister, who wore a yellow crepe gown and carried a basket of yellow carnations, mauve daisies and baby's breath.

Debby Weese and Sandra Lyons were bridesmaids, attired as the maid of honor in mauve.

George Hamilton IV, North Carolina, was best man for the groom, assisted by ushers Dick Lovering and Kenneth Post, brother of the bride.

After a reception at the Elks Hall, Belleville, the couple left on a wedding trip to Northern Ontario and the eastern coastline of the United States.

They reside in Downsview.

Hand-Made Dolls Popular

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — For a woman who had to teach herself to sew when her first daughter was born, Ruth Davies is making a fair career of it.

For 12 years, her national and historical dolls have been sold in stores across Canada. Each is authentic to the last detail, the product of painstaking research that took her to 30 countries in three years.

She still uses the sewing machine her mother gave her 20 years ago for—meaning, doing the rest of the work by hand. For variety, she usually works on six or 12 dolls at a time.

"I work in organized confusion," she said, explaining that she has found it impossible to take on an assistant because she can't explain to anyone what she wants done.

"I am usually 1½ years behind in my orders," she said.

She has been approached by dealers from the United States and as far away as New Zealand but prefers to confine her operations to Canada.

Many of her dolls are purchased by missionaries who take them abroad to illustrate their descriptions of Canadian life.

For the Japan World Exposition in Osaka in 1970 she was asked to make 115 Anne of Green Gables dolls to be given to the wives of dignitaries.

Mrs. Davies' home contains not only a sewing room filled with the ingredients for her dolls but also crocheted afghan squares, hooked rugs, embroidery, macrame and other craft work and a collection of dolls she has picked up on her travels abroad.

Leg Surgery For Vanity

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Lloyd N. Carlsen, director of Cosmetic Surgery Hospital in Woodbridge, Ont., said Wednesday that over the last 4½ years 11 Metropolitan Toronto women have undergone a type of cosmetic surgery performed nowhere else in the world.

Dr. Carlsen, also on staff at the Scarborough General Hospital, told the Ontario branch of the College of Family Physicians of Canada that these women, ranging in age from 19 to 54, had implants placed in their calfs to make their legs more shapely.

He said a putty-like material, shaped to the patient's specifications is used to make a mould of the artificial calf which a commercial company then uses to make a permanent implant—a soft and pliable one.

The implant is inserted in an incision behind the knee, where the scar will not show, and tucked in next to the muscle, he said. After three weeks, the patient is active again.

Most cosmetic surgery is not covered by the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP).

Ann Landers

Kids Can't Tolerate Dad's New Wife-to-be

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl 17 and my sister is 12. We need your help desperately.

Our father has been secretly dating another woman off and on for several years. Mom knew about it and broke them up on two occasions.

Last January mom died. Dad started to date this woman almost immediately. Sometimes he doesn't come home at night and we know he is with her.

It looks like they are going to be married. This is very hard for us to take because we know how much heartache she caused our mom. The woman is divorced and has two children. There are four of us. (We have two younger brothers).

My sister and I think that if the 10 of us try to live under one roof it will be a disaster. We are unable to hide our true feelings for this woman and don't know what to do. Are we wrong in feeling this way?—From Chicago

Dear Chicago: I have no idea what your father's marriage was like, and neither do you. I am not condoning his behavior, but I am suggesting that there might have been some factors your kids didn't know about.

If your dad does marry this woman please do your damndest to create an atmosphere of acceptance and forgiveness. Remember—Hate the sin, but love the sinner."

Dear Ann Landers: It's taken me until now to simmer down after reading the letter from the young man who wanted to picket the doctor's office because he was sent a bill for $40 after removing a plantar's wart.

I have been a medical assistant's secretary for nearly three years and I am sick of hearing complaints like this. First of all, a doctor is a professional man who has studied, worked and sacrificed many precious hours of leisure that many of us take for granted.

My boss is at the hospital at 8 a.m. to make his rounds. He puts his tie for other doctors, does clinic work, attends meetings and is in his office at 12:30 to see patients.

His bills are reasonable, yet I must spend hours sending out "reminders" and telephoning patients about long-overdue remittances. It's strange how they turn from sick and desperate people to deadbeats. They must see the doctor at once because they are dying! When they get well they'd rather have him than pay their bill.

Thanks for listening, Ann. I feel better now.—Tired Off

Dear T.D.: I hope the kid who had the plantar's wart sees your letter. And for the record, the price was not high. If the job was well done and the wart was removed permanently, he got a bargain.

Successful Living

Imagination and Love for Elderly

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I love old people. I think some of the nurses and nurses' aides just don't know enough about their human qualities and how to help them keep on feeling like people— which they are!

Here are a few suggestion I found helpful, when I worked in a nursing home:

If you have a confused patient, or one who won't communicate I found, while brushing hair etc. — if I sang an old hymn — or song — once their attention was caught, they would not in time to the rhythm and if I "accidentally" misheard a word it would pop out of them automatically and in due course they would join in — if only under their breath (perhaps not the first time but eventually.)

Also asking advice if they are hard. How to make some home remedy — how they coped with some particular problem or what their best "saving stunt" was during the depression — ask them to tell you "next time". This start's a whole chain of thoughts that keep them mentally occupied for ages and is company for them for hours. Don't ask for more than one suggestion at a time.

Don't ask them about a particular thing. Such as a recipe or certain poem this worries them and they "pull a blank". Whatever comes, let it be spontaneous, and if the home remedy does not sound corrected, don't say so. A scribbler (sometime cut crossways) and a pencil — one a string attached to the book — so they couldn't lose it, was helpful.

This way they can jot a thought down and have it ready for next time, because if they forget or struggle and retain the memory it will be a worry to them and serve no entertaining purpose for them.

I adopted five old people 25 years ago and have kept that number ever since. When I lose one I add another but always try to have the ones who have no one else, or are in need of letters. At present I have a colostomy patient in Calgary, a lonely widower — a cardiac in Medicine Hat (widower) — a lonely widow in Minnedosa, another in Winnipeg (whose family is too busy!) plus my own two parents — Dad has a stroke and lives with us.

Adopter-Nurse.

Dear Adopter: Your suggestion will be clipped and posted up in many a nursing home, I am sure! They are practical.

My sister had a business friend, an elderly man who had a stroke and could not speak. But when she took him for a drive and started singing one of the old songs, he joined in. Knew the words, and they laughed and sang together.

We need all the communication we can get about how to re-humanize the elderly patient. He has much to give and to enjoy, if our workers will use imagination — and love — to encourage him.

(We now have some understanding of why people act as they do. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper about your particular human problem enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

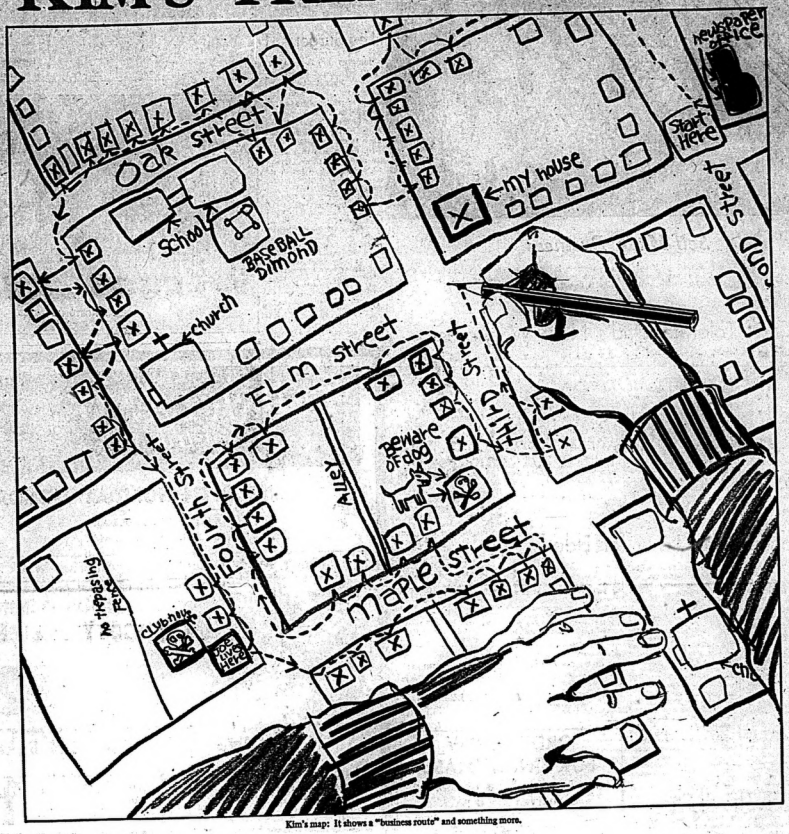
KIM'S TREASURE MAP



Kim's map: It shows a "business route" and something more.

He made it of his paper route.

Look at Kim's "treasure" map. It's along the dotted-line that he conducts his daily business. Which is seeing that you get your newspaper on time and where you want it.

The map shows his territory. Where he makes his profit, selling our product retail to customers like you. This profit is treasure he could be laying away to help see him through college or for whatever use he chooses to make of it.

Carrier Kim also gains hidden treasure not shown on the map. The ability to get along with people. A priceless treasure. How to handle money. How to keep records and be punctual. And, on his route, he applies the lessons he learns every day in school, which is a good way to learn – by practical application.

Think about it. Youngsters like Kim are putting themselves "on the map" of life. Tell your carrier this when the dotted-line takes him to your door today.

Refugees Roam Camps In Cyprus War Aftermath

(CP) — There is something biblical about the scene, a strange waiting and stillness in the multitudes—the refugees.

"The first few days here I could not stop myself from crying," said one young girl, and then he stopped away across the off-white field, shading her head in an abashed way.

The foreign visitor's sense of unneeded activation and immobility is odd, because actually there is much motion in the refugee camp. It is as though a motion picture abruptly froze. The picture is too stunning to take in at a glance.

More than 9,000 persons are wandering about on mundane chores under the eucalyptus and tinder-dry pine trees, and hundreds of camp fires are burning because it is nearly time for the evening meal.

"If we ever have a fire here, it will be worse than in Tutu," said a Red Cross official.

Theodora Kyriacou, busy with scrubbing board and basin outside a tent, paused briefly in her task of doing the family wash.

"There are four of them," she said in Greek, indicating her children. "We come from Ayios Sergios."

That village is near Famagusta—the Mixed Beach of Cyprus—only 20 miles away, but behind the Turkish lines.

"All four of our boys became they feel safe near the British," said Sofoklis Zivas, a district administrator.

When Cyprus was independent in 1960, the former British masters retained two sovereign bases—land—ceded to the British territory—on the south shore of the island, at Akrotiri and Dhekelia.

Greek refugees flocked to the district near Episkopi when a Turkish army struck in northern Cyprus. Turkish villagers, meanwhile, ran for the Akrotiri to escape retaliation by the Greek-Cypriot National Guard or army.

We have 125,000 people in a district where in normal times we had 84,000," said an administrator at Larnaca, the nearest town and once the most important port in all unless Cyprus.

Townsfolk today can use the lessons of the most famous son of Kition, saw Larnaca—Zen, founder of the Stoic school of philosophy.

On the road from Larnaca to here, the village of Xylotimbou is choked with humanity. Refugees have escaped with only the clothes on their backs are bargained in the lanes and open-air shops for everything from grapes to second-hand clothes and wash themselves, perhaps timed meal. I understand it, but it is very dangerous here in the trees. When the rains come in November, and then winter, it will be worse, for other reasons.

"We bake 1,500 of these big loaves of bread a day, stable at the British base, and another 300 come from the Larnaca welfare office.

"But the prospect of winter is very serious for this camp because it is only temporary. The government wants these people to leave here, but they feel secure near the base. We have only 2,000 blankets for 9,000 people. The situation is not good at present. Doctors are examining 250 people every day but so far the complaints are minor."

There are south of the 220,000 refugees in tiny Cyprus, 180,000 Greeks and the remainder Turks. Maj. Murray Smith of Canada, Secretary of the office for the United Nations peacekeeping force, says virtually every village in the southern area of Cyprus has refugees, sometimes two or four, sometimes 400 or 500.

Then, there are the big camps like the Akhna Forest. Two little boys, Michalakis, 12, Panayiotis, 3, and Kyriacos, 10, crowd around a reporter as if all was well with the world.

With the hot Cyprus sun sinking in a crimson haze, Maria Savva finds her two-year-old nephew, Chryso Louca, sleeping contentedly in the fold of a tent beside the road. She picks him up and hurries off "home."

B.C. Railway Passengers Buy Tickets to Yesterday

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — Thousands have bought tickets in yesterday since the British Columbia Railway began operating a steam-driven excursion train that chuffs 30 miles into nostalgia.

The train, pulled by a restored Royal Hudson series 2800 locomotive and capable of carrying 360 persons on the line to Squamish, began its operations on the government-owned rail line June 30 and was booked solid for the summer.

At times, the magnificent scenery along the eastern shore of Howe Sound was obscured by waving arms as passengers and crew waved to people who stood along the right of way to see the vintage locomotive and its drab, retread coaches of the 1940s go by.

The train chugged along and reached chiselled out of cliffs and punctuated by dark, mysterious tunnels.

The 467,500-pound locomotive, which is 34 years of age, was bought by the province at the instigation of railway director Bob Swanson.

It pulled 11 coaches, an open observation car, a club car that served alcoholic beverages to 50 patrons and a baggage car.

The engine had lost metal crowns from its cylinders that marked her pedigree as one of a class of engines chosen to power the royal train during the 1939 Canadian tour of George VI and the present Queen Mother.

Mr. Swanson had fresh crowns made locally as well as getting a new boiler casing cut in stainless steel. Cab gauges and controls had been stolen and replacements had to be found.

The boiler and superheater tubes needed replacing and Mr. Swanson had to go to the Steel Company of Canada Ltd to get new tubes made to a special order.

The train doesn't go beyond a sedate 25 miles an hour, robbing engineers of the chance to set No. 2860 demonstrate how its 79-inch drivers can roll.

The return trip to Squamish costs $5 for adults, $3.75 for students and pensioners and $2.50 for children aged 5 to 11.

"We're really hoping the American tourists really go for this," says Mr. Swanson. "If you keep a tourist here an extra day, by gosh, you're really doing something."

Future plans include installing a plane in the club car and using the train route as transportation for skiers heading for Whistler Mountain.

Maoist Prisoners Treated Poorly

BOMBAY (CP) — A major political controversy has been sparked in India by reports of ill-treatment of imprisoned members of the extremist Naxalite Party.

Amnesty International, a London-based organization looking after the welfare of political prisoners all over the world, charged in a recent report that an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 Maoists have been detained by the Indian government in "grossly overcrowded conditions" in the state of West Bengal.

Amnesty International also alleged that some of the detainees are kept in fetters.

Simultaneously, 200 left-wing intellectuals and academics from many countries have protested the "ill-treatment" of political prisoners by the Indian government.

The Indian government has strongly denied the allegations.

Saying that the total number of political prisoners in West Bengal is only a little over 1,600, officials f the federal home ministry, which is in charge of internal security, said there is no ill-treatment and that the prisoners continue to receive proper food rations, clothing, books and newspapers.

Observers are intrigued by the wide divergence between the figures given out by Amnesty International and the Indian government.

Inquiries indicate that Amnesty International's estimate was not based on on-the-spot investigations but on reports from various sources it considered trustworthy. New Delhi Hindustan Times, a consistent critic of the administration in matters involving civil liberties, described the estimate as an "overstatement."

Supporters of the admission 000 political extremists in prison without taking Parliament into confidence.

While this contention has found wide acceptance among Indians, the government's denial that some of the political prisoners are subjected to harsh treatment has been supported by several MPs.

S. S. Mari Swamy of the opposition Tamil nationalist party has demanded a full inquiry into the condition of the prisoners.

Mahavir Tyagi, another opposition MP, said he is not satisfied with the way the government has handled the matter.

While pointing out that the Naxalites have been following terrorist tactics—more than 200 people have been killed by the extremists so far—the influential Bombay Times said the government "owes an explanation to its own people, it owes it to the outside world, for keeping large numbers of young people in prison without trial."

Hindustan Times said editorially that "it is no defence to argue that Naxalites being wedded to violence deserve no mercy." The paper was referring to rejoinders by members of the ruling Congress Party that some of the prisoners have been guilty of shooting down innocent citizens and even beheading villagers who refused to carry out their orders.

In the meanwhile, reports from West Bengal say the state government is likely to have a "second look" at the files of the detainees. Women, teenagers and those not found guilty of violence may be set free.

NATO Aircraft Replacement 'Contract of the Century'

LONDON (CP) — The Netherlands, Belgium, Norway and Denmark will soon be faced with the necessity of finding a single aircraft to re-equip their NATO air forces and Britain has been up with a possible solution—an answer to a re-equipment problem which might mean an expenditure of £1 billion.

The replacement of the American F-104 in these air forces has been described as the "contract of the century."

For the last few months a steering committee set up by the four countries has been looking at what aircraft could best meet their over-all combat and strike needs. Three possible choices have been evaluated—the Swedish Saab Viggen, a development of the French F-1 fighter, and a derivative of the American YF-16 or YF-17 air combat fighters.

The British Aircraft Corp.- (BAC) now has put proposals to the four governments for a two-type solution—a mix of French F-1 for the air defence or fighter role and the Anglo-French Jaguar for strike and reconnaissance. BAC says this is a cheaper, more effective solution than seeking to give the planes a single aircraft to provide each capability.

Jeffrey Quill, responsible for Jaguar sales in Europe, said the plan has an advantage. A mixed force of F's and Jaguars would be operationally more effective than a single type of aircraft and would be cheaper to buy and operate. There would be less financial risk and it would provide a wholly European solution. In addition, the Anglo-French combination would provide equal or better industrial offset deals to the four buying countries.

The Netherlands, Belgium, Norway and Denmark have a total of some 675 F-104 and other aircraft which will need replacing in the forseeable future. BAC believes 200 of these could be replaced with F-1s, and the remainder by British Jaguars.

Both the F-1 and Jaguar are in production and air force service. In Britain's Royal Air Force eight squadrons of Jaguars will be allocated to NATO.

At around $2 million, the twin-jet Jaguar is claimed to be at least 20 per cent cheaper than any of the aircraft currently being evaluated by the four-nation group. The BAC consortium is seeking a replacement plane at a highly competitive price that rules out a purpose-built multi-role, combat aircraft such as is being developed by Britain, West Germany and Italy. Latest price quoted for a single such plane is £3.4 million.

The secret of Jaguar's success is said to be its navig7 ion and weapon aiming. It can fly fast and low and deliver its weapons load with great accuracy. These systems are described by air force chiefs as "the best ever."

Futurist Toffler Started Early

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The world's leading futurist, advisor to statesmen and confidant of the famous, began by reading Rock Rogers.

"I've been a writer journalist all my life and writing about the future all my life. I was reading Buck Rogers when I was five," said Alvin Toffler in Belleville Wednesday night.

He began seriously compiling philosophies of the future after a stint in Washington.

"I saw there was no thought about the future at all there, so I started writing," he said.

Within a month of the publication of his best-seller, Future Shock, the president of the United States had set up an advisory committee to study the implications of the book and report back.

"That was before he got interested in other things," quipped Dr. Toffler.

Despite his reputation as an instant expert, he said he's afraid to say "I don't know the answer." In comical confusion he threw at him by listeners.

The man who questions technology is enamored of a 20th century machine — the airplane. He flew himself into Belleville from Toronto in a friend's single-engine Cessna and returned to Toronto the same way to pick up a New York flight.

Although he flies himself, he's uneasy about the skies and cites complicated formulas to prove that the gliding ability of small aircraft makes them superior to the giants.

I'm basically a coward, and if they weren't safe I wouldn't fly them," he said.

Dr. Toffler refuses to be trapped into the role of a prophet, seeing his task as one of pointing out the hazards ahead and bearing a consensus of the people the job of overcoming them.

However, in Belleville, he ventured to suggest that "I don't believe you'll have a replay of 1855."

He was referring to the present chaotic state of world economy and the chance of a depression like that of the 1930s.

"We are much more service oriented now than in 1855," he said. "We don't have a servile population. I don't think the blacks and women will stand for being kicked out of the labor force. We are much more impatient than we were."

Dr. Toffler admitted the possibility of formation of fascist regimes in reaction to runaway inflation, wherin him.

But, he said, "a dictator wouldn't last."

"The opposite would make things miserable for a future fiiller," he said.

He himself considers himself as "a citizen of the globe". Dr. Toffler travels extensively to consult with world leaders and lectures at high-level conferences.

Asked if he had time to study the state of futuristics during his travels, he replied, "Certainly, that's why I go".

He says he finds the same problems in every country — the breakdown of support systems such as transportation, the lack of national unity and the rise of multiculturism, to name a few.

The rise of "French nationalism" in Canada, he said, is not unique to the country, but part of a global pattern.

He said he isn't afraid to cope with the phenomenon of futurism, he said.

Toffler, whose annual income from lecturing alone is estimated at $50,000, is accompanied by one member of the Belleville sponsoring committee at all times. He is emphatic in his answer to the question of how much he is paid a lecture — $50,000.

"I wouldn't kick my money up for more than 30 days", he said.

Corby Park Roses To Get Insulation

Roses are big business for the Belleville Parks commission and less expensive a commodity to treat lightly.

Through a "unique twist of weather fate", roses are a usually catty thaw followed by a cold snap devastated rose gardens in the city's Corby Park — a chance accident that shouldn't happen again," says parks horticulturist Gene Gemmell.

In the past, city roses were prepared for the winter by mounding earth around the stalks — the generally-accepted method.

This year not only will earth be applied to stems and stalks, but a two-foot-high snow fence will be constructed around rose beds and then the entire area covered with leaves and straw insulating the plants below.

The Belleville parks department experimented with the technique last year and only five per cent of the plants died in the cold snap as compared to 50 per cent mortality in the regular beds.

"It was an extremely dramatic difference," said Mr. Gemmell, a parks employee for two years.

More than 2,000 roses are planted in Corby Park. "It amounts to a considerable outlay and even the cold snap doesn't affect the beds again," said Mr. Gemmell.

Says Mr. Gemmell, "because roses are the most common flowers grown by the city, they are limited to just Corby Park where a full-time man gives his complete attention to the care of the roses.

"Corby Park is the passport lady of Belleville's park family," he said.

New Methods Tried

Gene Gemmell, a horticulturist employed by the city, says many horticulturists believe there is only one way — their way — to take care of plants. "In Belleville we believe several methods should be experimented with, to find the best one. Experiments include growing trees in baskets to induce denser root systems, giving the tree a better chance of transplant survival and a new kind of insulation for Corby Park roses to guard against frank cold snaps like the one that killed half the city's roses last winter.

Lois Vaughan organized the United Way campaign's residential canvass by telephone.

Marathon Phoner Set Up Canvass

Lois Vaughan's constant companion during the last month has been the telephone.

As chairman of the residential canvass for the United Way campaign, which hopes to raise $140,000 by 14 member objectives, Mrs. Vaughan has undertaken to construct an organization of volunteers to collect donations door-to-door.

In recent years, Belleville's United Way campaign has been conducted without a residential canvass. Most private donations have been made through payroll cuts, Bettens.

"I think our new director, Gordon Mahler, wanted to find a way to reach people, we were minded, retired persons and women who do not work out of the home. I agree. I think that women on the whole are very community minded; they'll welcome a chance to contribute," Mrs. Vaughan says.

To organize her campaign, she divided the city into eight areas; four are rural, four urban.

Then she began the task of finding area chairmen.

After "hours and hours and hours" on the phone, seven of eight chairmen have been appointed. They are: Joan Newman, Leona Riggs, Adelaide Ord, Eva Thrprush, Dell Dickens, Kay Runacres and Chally Oakes.

It's up to the area chairmen to find four to six team captains each who will in turn find one canvasser for every dozen homes in their area.

In all, 250 persons will be involved.

Rather than conducting the canvass throughout the month-long United Way campaign, Mrs. Vaughan and the volunteers will "blitz" the city October 21 and 22. On those days volunteers bearing pledge cards will cover most of Belleville and its rural routes.

Between now and then, Lois Vaughan will complete plans with area chairmen and answer questions about the United Way for volunteers.

All on the telephone.

Education Beat

Parents Like Old Methods

Staff Reporter

The future has been very much a part of the Parents' Room in Hastings county educational circles this week, as secondary school teachers and their board were hosts to the world famous author Alvin Toffler.

Among those present was one who probably has the most impact of all on the immediate future of Ontario education. He is Jim Forster, provincial president of the 32,000-member Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

Government, the ultimate source of funds, is legislated here, but if Jim Forster and his teachers say "we won't", there will be dad time in education in this province for a hiatus.

All of which makes Jim Forster look like an arch-reactionary.

He isn't.

Schools have to be instruments of change, he said while here for the Toffler lecture.

He said it despite preliminary findings of the $75,000 study he initiated into "the role of the secondary school". Parents, he finds so far are the arch-reactionaries, who are insisting on a return to the three R's, in training we, sus education, to the status quo.

The Toffler-initiated cult of futurology, a kind of educated approach to looking our into, falls on deaf ears among the middle-aged.

Mr. Forster has arranged five "forums" in large Ontario centres, where representatives of business, labor, parents, service clubs and students can come together to tell teachers what they expect of schools.

The first was held in Sudbury Tuesday night. It went pretty well as expected.

Jim Forster accepts the blame for this.

He uses the word "blame" intentionally.

"Teachers will have to accept the blame, and I refuse to say responsibility, the blame, for our ivory tower attitudes," he said. "Parents (before the teachers) will have to get involved, quickly."

Mr. Forster said the first public forum for parents, perhaps unconsciously, are beginning to distrust technology. They don't want machines (all the sophisticated audio-visual equipment and teaching aids) coming between teachers and their kids. Neither do students, who said they were turned off by such impersonal means.

Parents and teachers probably aren't as far apart as preliminary opinion polls suggest.

"Both stressed the need for communication," said Mr. Forster.

Parents, he has sensed, "lowering of morale", among teachers in the last few years.

As one reason he cited the requirements for completion of one secondary school subject credit. The ministry of education says it takes 120 hours of instruction to cover a secondary school course, but if a student gets to summer school, he is allowed to cover the same material in 70 hours. The community colleges are allowed to cram 120 hours into one, granting three years of credits in a year.

Along with this, Mr. Forster shares an observation with Alvin Toffler.

"Teachers are less subservient than they used to be," he said.

Contract Awarded

BANCROFT — The Ontario Housing Corporation has awarded a contract for nearly $15-million for the construction of 86 senior citizens housing units to be built here. Tara Properties incorporated of St. Catharines were the successful bidders, the amount of their tender being $1,467,200, or approximately $16,900 per unit.

Teachers At OSD Waiting

Teachers at the Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville still have no answer to a vote on whether they will accept the provincial government salary offer for the next school year.

The government position, released last week, provides increases from 6.5 per cent to 17.3 per cent on the teachers' salary grid for this year.

Special teachers at Ontario schools for the mentally retarded, the deaf and the blind are included in the government offer.

Mark Bulizan, of Milton, salary committee chairman for the Special Education Teachers' Association whose members work in provincial schools for the deaf and blind, said his group wants 13 per cent for everyone, excluding annual increment.

Dennis Newman, chairman of the teachers' salary committee at Belleville, said his group is studying the government offer but wants answers to a number of questions before calling a formal vote.

Mr. Newman said a "slight hitch" member of teachers "at the Belleville school are at level three which, under the provincial offer, gives them only the 6.5 per cent salary increase.

Many of the teachers here have taken special courses but cannot qualify for higher categories and higher percentage salary increases without university degrees.

'Charity' Defined

By JOAN FINNIGAN

I hate the word "charity" in the context of the United Way campaign and agencies, it denotes superiority and palitives and looking down upon. It conjures up pictures of Lady Bountiful from the Right Side of the Tracks or from the Manor on the Hill gathering together her basket of goodies at Christmas time for the family on the Wrong Side of the Tracks whose bread-winner is dying of TB.

I hate the word charity because it is old-fashioned and entirely out of step with the whole concept of United Way agencies. United way is an enrichment of the whole community, by the community, for the community.

I hate the word charity. It used to mean Christian love or love of one's fellow men and then somehow it got to mean the "haves" giving to the "have-nots" often because the "haves" felt guilty about having so much in front of the "havenots". More things are done out of guilt feelings than this world dreams of.

In last year's campaign I was wearing many hats and making reminder calls to a group of professionals who hadn't yet handed in their donations One of them came up with the excuse: "My husband gives to his charities and I give to mine."

United Way campaign money doesn't have much to do with charity in the community; but it does have a lot to do with service in the community.

Through its Red Cross, it means to have blood on hand when you or your child in an accident. Through its Y activities, it means to have memberships on hand for boys whose energies need to be channelled positively and whose parents can't pay. Through its CNIB, it means to help the blind to help this community to see with new eyes.

Charity. I hate the word charity. It denotes handouts. Hand-outs are almost always degrading. United Way doesn't do much of handing out. But ninety-nine per cent of the United Way agencies are enriching this community by providing services for BOTH "ever" and "have-nots". The fund for blood is in order to grocy arthritic pain and disease of the eye, artificial respiration for the drowned person — these things strike rich and poor alike. That is why the gifts must come from rich and poor alike, each according to his own means.

Charity. I hate the word charity. Stop associating it with the United Way Right now, as far as I am concerned, the word belongs more with bits of people taking unemployment insurance. You know: The kind who work six or eight weeks and then put their feet out for nine months. UIC payments. No pride. No self-respect. No responsibility. The world owes ME a living philosophy.

Charity has nothing to do with United Way. The United Way doesn't have charities. It has agencies that help people who want the chance to show this community — and the world — that it doesn't owe them a living!

Early Thanksgiving

Mrs. Louise Demczyna's grade 5 class at Cannifton-Corbyville Public School enjoyed an early Thanksgiving dinner Friday at noon. The 24 children in the class prepared their Pilgrim and Indian costumes and cooked a turkey dinner, with all the trimmings, Mrs. Demczyna reads her students in a song of thanks before they sit down to dig in.

Rental Gardens Possible

Belleville residents may be able to rent a vegetable garden next spring, says city parks director Lloyd Syer.

Mr. Syer's department is now completing a survey to determine the feasibility of creating garden plots for city residents — a survey requested by Mayor Robin Jeffrey a month ago.

The plan of renting garden space is already active in several large urban areas, including Toronto.

While details are still left to be discussed, negotiations have already been initiated with a landholder "in a dense population area of the city."

"In the initial stages, the person we are negotiating with seems receptive," said Mr. Syer.

Provided the scheme meets with the approval of the Board of Parks Management of which Mayor Jeffrey is a member — it is possible city citizen will begin plowing the land this November, readying it for spring planting.

"Initially we don't want to spend too much money off the project ... it's a pilot project for this year, if it is accepted," said Mr. Syer.

If Mr. Syer's plans are fulfilled, approximately 25 plots — measuring about 25 feet by 30 feet — will be rented at a "nominal charge".

According to a government report, the yield from a plot of this size was estimated at about $100, based on 1972 prices.

"You could practically double the cost of buying the yield at today's prices," said Mr. Syers.

Mr. Syer said some firm decision whether or not to go ahead with the garden plot plan should come at the Oct. 23 meeting of the parks board.

Intell Carriers of the Year

David Post and Joanne Kastien were chosen this week from more than 300 paper carriers as the best, all-rou nd carriers of the year. Certificates and cash prizes were presented by Mayor Robin Jeffrey standing with Basil Lavoie, circulation manager, and his assistant Bruce Tripp.

Top Carriers Selected

An Intelligencer paper route has produced big dividends for two Belleville and area youngsters, chosen this week as the Intell's paper carriers of the year.

Sharing the honors of being chosen from more than 300 carriers are 13-year-old Joanne Kastien of Grove St. and 13-year-old David Post of Prince Edward County. Joanne was in the city division and David in the rural division.

Both youngsters were named by this paper's circulation manager, Basil Lavoie, on the basis of "all round performance". Mr. Lavoie said the job this year was "extremely difficult" with so many fine carriers working in the past year.

For Joanne — a Quinte Secondary School student who keeps word of her working at a paper girl to herself — the 35-paper route paid her expenses for a trip to her native Scotland this summer.

Papers are a family affair for the Kastiens with three of four daughters working on separate routes. As for 50-fourth daughter, three-year-old Patricia, "she'll probably be a paper girl when she's old enough," said Joanne.

A 10-speed bicycle has been in the back of David's mind since last spring and according to the latest count — including the $25 cash prizes for carrier of the year — given by both youngsters — David has "a pretty close to having" the money he needs to get mobile.

Mobility is important to David as it is to most rural carriers who travel far afield in their routes.

Right now David is using an old one-speed bike to deliver his paper and walks during the winter — "the worst" time for paper boys.

For all the effort, time and machinery used in produce each edition of this paper; it is only through the daily effort of carriers like Joanne and David that 17,000 receive the finished product.

Patented Third Period Rally As Bobcats Defeat Lions 4-3

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

Belleville Bobcats kept their Metro Junior B Hockey League unbeaten streak alive last night by downing the Peterborough Lions 4-3.

A goal late in the third period by Robbie Foster gave the Bobcats the decision over the visiting Lions at Memorial Arena.

Foster's low, hard wrist shot fooled Peterborough goalie Rob Duncan. The puck went between his stick and the post. Foster, the Bobcat captain, continued to shine again last night, with a solid two-way performance.

Belleville's Jim Richardson opened the scoring at the 8:42 mark of the first period beating Duncan on a quick shot from a rebound off the goalie's pads.

Duncan came up with a brilliant game in net for the visitors, blocking many close-in shots throughout the course of the night.

Peterborough tied the game up at the midway point of the period as Brad Barnett's shot from the point deflected off a Belleville defenceman's skate.

Each team had several good scoring chances in the first period. Both sides rattled pucks off goal posts.

Belleville outshot the Peterborough team 13-8 in the opening 20 minutes.

Play in the second period was much the same as the first as neither team could mount an all-out attack for more than a few minutes.

Peterborough's 2-1 ahead goal came early as some good forechecking by Paul Johnston paid off. He dug the puck out of the corner and skated unmolested to the front of the Belleville goal and backhanded the puck through a maze of players by Bruce Clark.

Clark appeared sharp in the second as he was called upon several times to defend the net all by himself.

Despite Clark's efforts the Petes built up a 3-1 lead by the end of the middle frame.

Peterborough's third and final goal of the game came on a neat two-way passing play. Jake Ayotte fed Paul Graham a perfect pass and he directed the puck into the net.

SUMMARY

FIRST PERIOD

1. Belleville - Richardson (Foster, Watt) 8:42.

2. Peterborough - Barnett (Connolly) 18:37.

Penalties - Belleville, Taylor (major and two minors), Crespin, Lupacchin, Calloway, Peterborough, Taylor (major and minor), Baldwin (2), Dickinson (2), Dunn, Connolly.

SECOND PERIOD

2. Peterborough - Johnston (Graham, Connolly) 3:47.

3. Peterborough - Graham (Ayotte, Baldwin) 11:57.

4. Belleville - Lupacchin (Jeffery, Richardson) 14:37.

Penalties - Belleville, Watt (major and minor), Roberts, Taylor, Peterborough, Allen (major and minor), Pollock, Graham, Connolly.

THIRD PERIOD

5. Belleville - Lupacchin (Langevin) 15:14.

6. Belleville - Foster (Thompson, Jeffery) 19:36.

With Connelly off for tripping, Danny Lupacchin let go a wicked drive from his peripheral position on the point to put the Cats within one goal. Lupacchin closed the range to about 25 feet before firing.

Belleville outshot the Lions by a 8-4 margin in the second period.

The third period produced a familiar sight, — the patented Bobcat rally.

At 2:16 of the final period, Lupacchin alertly scooped up a rebound and tucked the puck in the net before a surprised Duncan could recover.

The rest of the game belonged to the Cats as they peppered 21 shots at the visitors' net.

Bobcats will play their third game in four nights as they travel to Pickering for a Sunday evening contest with the Panthers.

In other games played last night Markham and Oshawa played to a 5-5 tie, Pickering defeated Whitby by a 14-4 margin and Brampton skated to a 7-3 win over the Toronto Nationals.

Winter Tennis

City Players Get Priority The Next Time

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Recently, registrations were taken for the city's Winter Tennis Program. When the registrations were tabulated, it was discovered that some outsiders had infiltrated the program.

People from outside the city (non-taxpayers) had signed up to participate in a program subsidized by the tax dollars of the residents of Belleville.

The problem was that there was room for only 80 in the program. After the out of towners had signed up some of the city's ratepayers were left with racquet in hand.

Wednesday night when a meeting was called to attempt to rectify the existing problem - only 19 people showed up, even though all parties concerned were notified.

Nevertheless the problem has been resolved.

Under a recommendation from the Recreation and Arena Committee, City Council has decided that if you're on the waiting list its too bad for you. First come, first served.

In the 1975-76 Winter Tennis Program all city applicants will be accepted first. Then if there are any vacancies in the program, outsiders may have an opportunity to join.

"I'm glad the resolution was passed," said deputy recreation director, Cliff Belch, "it will at least give us somewhere to take a stand."

Non-residents of the city will have to fork over a 25 per cent surcharge on top of the $20, registration fee next year.

The constructive things which took place at Wednesday's meeting were almost blotted out by the trivialities.

The Winter Tennis Program is now being run by the members rather than by the recreation center.

Of the 19 people that turned out to the meeting almost all got involved in organizing a firm basis for a Winter Tennis Club. The people in attendance volunteered time and information and hashed out many of the immediate problems.

The members who were not in attendance will be informed of the Club's first meeting, to be held in the near future.

Debbie and Especially Notable – Friends

Bayside's 18-year-old Debbie Doyle

Ontario Champion Aims for the Top

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Perseverance, self - discipline, and ability. All are qualities evident in a champion.

But in order to become a champion one additive is necessary. That little extra is known as desire. You have to want to be the best. You have to put your goal above everything else and the attainment of that goal has to be the centre of your whole life.

For 18-year-old Debbie Doyle the achievement of her goal is her aim.

Miss Doyle, a Bayside resident, wants to become the best, not only in Canada, but the world, in the art of dressage.

It isn't such a far-fetched goal for her to attain since Miss Doyle is already the Ontario Junior Dressage Champion. She earned that title in just six, short months.

Dressage, in its simplest terms, is the immaculate control of your horse.

"I decided this spring that this would be my goal," smiled the attractive young lady, "and I'm giving myself six years to achieve it."

Miss Doyle has aimed her sights on the 1980 Olympics. At that time she wants to be part of the five-member Dressage Team with the Canadian Equestrian Team.

When Miss Doyle was 12 she took instruction in dressage, but lost interest.

"I don't know what happened," she said, "I guess I just wasn't ready for all the work it took."

In March she and her horse, "Especially Notable", began taking instruction again from teacher, Manfred Hunter.

During the six months that elapsed between the beginning of her instruction period and the Ontario Championships in Alexandria last weekend, Miss Doyle entered 11 competitions. Out of those she captured nine first place ribbons and two seconds.

"I had good instruction," she continued, "and I have a good horse."

"Especially Notable' is an Anglo-Arabian (half thoroughbred and half Arabian).

Miss Doyle explained that she and her horse have a "friendly kind of relationship."

"All riders have to be on a friendly basis with their horses," she says.

This is even more necessary in dressage where the horse has to understand every jog of the rein and every movement of the rider's leg – right down to the slightest flex of muscle. Each single movement must mean entirely different to the horse.

"Especially Notable' is now nine years old." If Miss Doyle is to achieve her goal she will have to get another horse to follow in "Especially Notable's" footsteps.

"Her horse comes from a good blood line," says Bill Doyle, Debbie's father, "but it just isn't bred for the type of competitive Debbie wants to pursue."

Debbie's father is aware of the seriousness of his daughter's venture and is prepared to invest $20,000 to $40,000 in a better suited steed.

"In order for Deb to progress to the higher levels of dressage she'll need a specially bred horse," says Mr. Doyle.

He proudly adds, "She has the talent to reach her goal. You can see it every time she rides."

One doesn't need to observe her in the saddle to realize her riding ability. Her awards and ribbons speak for themselves. She has over 30 of them.

Miss Doyle's greatest test however, will come November 6, 7, 8 and 10 at the Eastern Canadian Dressage Championships at Toronto's Humber College. Every province east of British Columbia will be represented.

"I know what to expect from the riders in Ontario and Quebec," she said with a serious tone, "but I don't know what to expect from the other provinces."

Her competition is the least of her worries.

"I go out to win no matter what show I'm in. I believe I'm going to win before I start. It's the only way to approach a competition," she said.

Her biggest concern is keeping her horse in shape and healthy. For three weeks before the provincial championships "Especially Notable" was ill.

"I almost had to drop out of the competition," she said.

All in all it's been a very good year for Debbie. She has won almost every show she's entered. She could be named the Eastern Ontario Dressage Champion and she is the Junior Ontario Dressage Champion. All this Miss Doyle has accomplished in just 6½ months.

What about the future?

"It won't always be this easy," said Debbie.

Her future plans are going to be setbacks, but I'm ready for it," she added.

Miss Doyle still has seven or eight more categories to go through before she can even consider trying out for the Olympic team, and the rest of the categories are harder to achieve as they progress in rank.

"It's going to be work, work and I know somewhere along the line I'm going to fail, but I'll just have to keep going."

She is aware that there will be little or no social life for her during the next six years.

"You've always got to sacrifice something to get something in return," she said, "and I've made my choice."

Until now, Miss Doyle's interests have been wide spread.

"Debbie could earn her livelihood at the Jockey Club in the winter," commented Mr. Doyle, "she's certainly good enough."

Seals Douse Flames

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It may not last long but, for a few hours at least, California's Golden Seals lead the National Hockey League's fourth division.

California, the unanimous choice to again finish last, shot out Atlanta Flames 3-0 Friday night. The Seals opened the season Wednesday with a tie against St. Louis Blues.

The showing gave the Seals the division lead with three points, one ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Sabres and three up on the winless Boston Bruins.

Gary Simmons, 30, a Nill rookie making his first start in goal for the Seals, handled 24 shots for the shut out.

The Charlottetown native who played for Phoenix of the Western Hockey League last season had to stop only three shots in the first period.

It was a goalie's battle until the middle of the third period when Ron Huston beat Atlanta netminder Phil Myre.

John Stewart, acquired from Atlanta in the off-season, scored the second goal at 19:46 on Stan Weir, who scored twice in California's opener Wednesday, got his third goal of the season with just six seconds left.

Wade May Get Nod

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sonny Wade has not started a Canadian football game since the fifth game of the 1973 season but he just may be leading Ottawa Rough Riders' Sunday afternoon when they meet Toronto Argonauts in one of three games on the CFL schedule for the Thanksgiving weekend.

Today in Ottawa, the hometown Rough Riders play host to Winnipeg Blue Bombers and the Montreal Alouettes complete their Eastern tour Monday afternoon in Hamilton against the Tigercats.

'Friendly Scuffle' Breaks Monotony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oakland A's, the strangest of baseball champions, are back in fighting form.

On Friday, the day before the World Series opened, the A's pitching slugger said he considers himself a free agent, and two other members of baseball's American League champions brawled in the clubhouse.

Rollie Fingers, the ace reliever on the team which began spring training all of his third consecutive World Series title Saturday, was taken to hospital Friday after five stitches required to close a scalp cut he sustained in a clubhouse brawl with teammate John (Blue Moon) Odom.

Speaking with experience that could only come from being with the team, A's trainer Joe Rosen said: "It was just a friendly scuffle. It should break the monotony."

Manager Alvin Dark, Catfish Hunter, the A's top pitcher, confirmed published reports that he will declare himself a free agent at the end of the Series on grounds that owner Charles O. Finley has failed to deliver $50,000 worth of his 1974 contract.

Finley, who always seem to wind up in the eye of a verbal hurricane, would only say: "There's nothing in it."

Earlier this year, outfielders Reggie Jackson and Bill North brawled in the clubhouse, and catcher Ray Fosse was lost for 11 weeks when he was injured trying to break it up.

Early in the season, players berated manager Dark there in public. Third baseman Sal Bando said: "He couldn't manage a meat market."

Thursday, Finley and a physician were sued for $51 million by Mike Andrews, the second baseman Finley removed from his squad in the midst of the 1973 World Series. Finley and the doctor said the day after Andrews made two errors in an A's defeat the player was not physically fit to play.

Neither player would comment on the scrap that occurred minutes after the A's checked into Dodger Stadium for a workout, but Fingers is reported to have suffered the scalp cut when he fell against a wooden post.

He was treated at nearby Los Angeles County Hospital.

"I don't want anything to do with it right now. The World Series starting," Hunter said of his contract problems.

He said that if he didn't want to pitch for the A's, he would've "retired long ago," he added: "I wouldn't mind being a member of the A's next year."

Hunter met briefly with his lawyer, Jerry Kearney, in Wingfield, Va., prior to the workout.

Kapstein said Finley's failure to send $50,000 to an investment company by a deadline required in Hunter's contract constituted a breach of contract.

"Jim is a free agent now, the same as a youngster out of high school," he said. "He's playing collaterally of his own free will in the World Series."

In addition to Hunter, Fingers and Odom, others among the Oakland holdouts are Vida Blue and Ken Holtzman, the other two starters the A's will use in the series.

Blue, dissatisfied since a long contract holdout in 1972, says he'll no longer pitching unless only if Finley sells the A's or he is traded.

Holtzman has refused to comment that he's tired of all-out arbitration and lost.

A's Aim for 3 Straight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oakland A's started swinging at Los Angeles Dodgers' pitching in the opening game of baseball's 71st World Series.

Seeking to become only the third team ever to win three successive World Titles, the American League champion A's sent left-hander Ken Holtzman, 18-17 in the regular season, against the Dodgers' right-hander Mike Marshall, Andy Messersmith, 20-6.

The Dodgers are 11-10 favorites in the best-of-seven series that begins at 4 p.m. EDT, NBC-TV cameras on the CBC national television network.

The series pits the veteran A's against the young, National League champion Dodgers; quiet, stern Dodger owner Walter O'Malley against the theatrical, outspoken Charles O. Finley; the hirsuted, wash-your-dirty-linen-in-public Oakland club against the harmonious, all-for-one-and-one-for-all Dodgers.

Despite their aim is the same—win this series and the $20,000-a-man reward that goes with it.

The big question mark is Oakland superstar Reggie Jackson, who batted .277 today because of a pulled hamstring in his right leg. Jackson was designated hitter in the playoffs, a position which doesn't exist in the World Series.

The Dodgers have looked bad defensively at times when they made a record five errors in a game to Pittsburgh during the National League playoff.

But they won 102 games, including three playoff victories over the Pirates, and probably would have won more if pitcher Tommy John had not been hurt halfway through the season.

With Jimmy Wynn having his finest season—32 home runs and 108 RBI—the Dodgers led the NL in homers with 128. "They also hit .272, second in the major leagues.

"This isn't the same team I used to face in the National League," said Holtzman, who had a 14-5 record against the Dodgers when he pitched for Chicago Cubs. "This is a much stronger team."

The Dodgers deal in power, pitching an deposed, and their style makes them tough for their opponents.

Both teams have superlative running threats in the No. 1 and No. 2 batting positions. Dave Lopes, the Dodger leader in the ter, stole 38 bases during the season. No. 1 man Bill Buckner batted .314 and stole 31 bases.

Bert Campaneris, the A's leadoff batter, had 54 steals and Bill North was the American League baseballing champ with 54.

Both teams have explosive 3-4 hitters. Steve Garvey was the Dodgers' big run-producer with 111 RBI and Sal Bando led the A's with 107.

Despite the loss of John, the Dodgers boast an effective and sometimes overpowering pitching staff headed by Messersmith and Don Sutton, 19-9. Mike Marshall, who made a record 106 appearances, is the equal of any relief pitcher.

The A's have three strong starters in Holtzman, Hunter and Vida Blue. Fingers heads the bullpen and probably is Marshall's equal, although he's not as active.

Old Honeymooner Carney Has First Big Movie Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Irish Art Carney, television star of the 50s, has changed.

He was Jackie Gleason's bumbling sidekick in the Honeymooners, Ed Norton, the self-styled "underground sewer line expert." Today he is a little heavier, thinks of himself with a neatly trimmed moustache and curly white sideburns.

For the first time in a career that dates back to 1941, Carney has a starring role in a movie. The 56-year-old actor is aged subtly with makeup to play a 72-year-old retired teacher.

Harry and Tonto is the film. Carney plays Harry. A big ginger cat named Tonto is his closest friend and companion. Carney, so real lovey, said the cat worked better than he expected.

"A good lead is a new ball game," he added. "With a good part, my television days know the next day what's going to think. But I have a good feeling and if I feel this good about doing my job, certainly something good is going to come out of it."

Carney's portrayal of Ed Norton made him a household face. But he said he always thought of himself as an actor playing a comedy role, not a comic.

He started working in clubs as a mimic at $50 a week and eventually used his mimicry talents in radio. Then came television, legitimate theater and now a leading film role.

"At first I turned this script down, I worried about the plot. I thought it was a little too old for me."

His agent and friend Bill McCaffrey kept after him. Carney was doing summer stock in Michigan when Paul Mazursky, producer - director and co-writer of Harry and Tonto, showed up to talk about the script.

"We decided Harry wasn't a doddering old man, agreed that he wouldn't have to change my voice, talked about ways of aging the character, and I thought I'd do it."

Carney's indomitable Harry finds his New York apartment torn down in urban renewal, his friends dying. Carried by police out of the soon-to-be-demolished building, he turns down offers of homes with his three children. He and Tonto make their way across the country, meeting a string of people with problems, hopes and dreams.

"I think Harry is a man with a lot of drive. At the end of the picture, you know he's a man who's going to go on."

Carney, youngest of six boys in a Mount Vernon, N.Y., family, viewed the film with something between anxiety and joy.

"I'll do more picture work—and I hope to—I'd like to work with Mazursky. Since we finished the film, I worked in another with Burt Reynolds. It was different, harder, not to be 'on' all the time. Mazursky spoiled me."

The film, which Carney said was perfect for Harry, came built-in, as did the hearing aid. Carney was wounded in France during the Second World War and picked up a job in radio. Then he was approached for the Gleason show.

Live television is what Carney said he most enjoys doing, although he has starred on Broadway in The Odd Couple and The Prisoner of Second Avenue.

His current schedule includes work on a Western movie with Lucille Ball. After that, it's back to the theatre.

"We're going to try to put together Ah, Wilderness. It's a family-type comedy, a delightful play. My good friend Jean Quintero is anxious to do it."

Show business, Carney said is not a business in which he is happy all the time. But it is his vocation, his everything.

"What makes it so fascinating, what makes me tick with it, is the uncertainty. You can be way down in the depths, saying 'Oh, I wish I was in hell,' you postpone Supposin Suppo new script, a new part and you're up there again."

Carney lives in New York City in a posh condominium. His first marriage ended in divorce but he often sees his three children. His second wife, Barbara, has two children, whom he delights.

He has had drinking problems and has been involved with Alcoholics Anonymous. He said it's a problem he battles one day at a time and blames his building paunch on craving sweets because he isn't drinking.

THE UNEXPLAINED
by Allen Spraggett

On Saturday, Jan. 3, 1891, something occurred in a photography store in London which has fascinated and puzzled researchers ever since.

The facts of the case are as firmly beyond dispute as facts can be. They were meticulously verified at the time by a team of investigators from the venerable Society for Psychical Research. The case stands as one of the most uncanny in the annals of the uncanny.

On the above date, James Dickinson, a London photographer, arrived at his studio about 8 a.m. Shortly after, a man called to inquire if his photograph was finished. Thompson was the name, he said.

Dickinson checked and said he was sorry but his picture wasn't ready. He asked Mr. Thompson to drop by later in the day.

"But I've been traveling all night," the man answered wearily, "and I can't call again."

With that, he turned abruptly and left the shop.

"Shall I show them in the mail?" the photographer called after him, but there was no reply. Dickinson jotted on a piece of paper: "No. 7976, Thompson" and left.

The photographer then went upstairs to his studio and asked his assistant, a young woman, to look up the Thompson negative and he would print it right away.

She returned after a few minutes saying: "This is Thompson's negative." Looking at it with his practised eye, the photographer called out, "Yes, that's it. That's the chap who called this morning."

When Dickinson went to print the negative, which in the old-fashioned style was on a photographic plate, he dropped it and the plate broke. He then wrote to Mr. Thompson apologizing for the accident and asking him to come in for another photographic sitting at no charge.

Six days later a man who identified himself as Mr. Thompson appeared in Dickinson's shop. He said he had come because a letter he had received had made no sense to him. He hadn't sat for any photographs.

"But you're not the man," agreed Dickinson. "He was much younger than you."

"Yes, that must have been my son, who lived at the same address. But he died suddenly."

"Died? Well, it must have been very sudden. He was only in here last Saturday."

"You are mistaken. It must have been before that."

"I certainly am not mistaken," the photographer insisted. "I told my assistant here about it at the time."

The elderly man looked at him for a long moment. Then he said quietly: "But my son died very early Saturday morning. At the time you say he was here, he had been dead for several hours . . ."

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Aries (March 21-April 19) There's a lot of this chorus you could get out of the way if you put your mind to it while you're in the mood. They won't like being...

Taurus (April 20-May 20) If you're planning to entertain today, confine it to a small group of your less active friends. You won't have much of a mess to contend with.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You still be a bit more of a homebody today than you generally are. Certain activities around things the family can do together...

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Use some of your spare time to catch up on correspondence and paperwork. Later this week you'll be glad you did.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll show considerable common sense and practicality in your material affairs today. It's not likely you'll be hoaxed in any manner.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In most things that will confront you today you'll gain the upper hand if you use your initiative. Don't treat them passively.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Today will be more enjoyable for you if you aren't involved in any thing too noisy or active. Some quiet solitude is required.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The friends you'll feel most at ease with are those who share the same practical interests you do. Other types will offer you little.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You are not apt to be idle nor regarding a goal that is important to you. Something productive will be accomplished.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Are both philosophical and practical in handling issues as they arise at this time. This combination will steer your through neatly.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll have an occasion to remind one who is indebted to you of what is owed. It'll be a detached, unemotional way.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You find pleasurable harmony in relationships that are important to you. You also fit very nicely in situations that call for teamwork.

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Aries (March 21-April 19) Lay the groundwork now for any important agreements you're contemplating so things will go in accordance with your schedule.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Conditions that have an effect upon your work or career will be harmonious than usual. Try to use this period to your advantage.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Certain benefits can be gained through contacts that you now have or will be making socially.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) A domestic situation has kept things off-balance a bit at home that can be clarified now with no scars to any of the involved parties.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't lock yourself into any type of plan that can't be altered if a sudden shift in conditions occurs, such as will happen shortly.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be alert at this time for profit that can be acquired through those with whom you share a close personal relationship.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're going to be able to bypass a stumbling block. It has hampered you where your self-interests are concerned. Be ready to move out.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) For best results at present, keep what you hope to accomplish limited to the parties affected. People who are not directly involved shouldn't be told.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Through a friend you will learn of something new that will capture your interest and imagination. You'll devote considerable time to this project.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) For the next few days you'll find those where co-operation you need for matters of importance will be more helpful than usual.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Concentrate now on plans that affect not only the present but what is important a few weeks from this date. Lay a firm foundation.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Give as much attention as you can to a joint venture that has financial or material interests. This is now a profitable area.

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Aries (March 21-April 19) One who hasn't always been co-operative with you in the past is more this time. Take him up on his offer of help.

Taurus (A pril 20-May 20) Don't let yourself become too tied down to old habits just because they're comfortable. Be a shade more adventuresome.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) There's a surprise in store for you today. You should find it to be pleasing. It will come through one of your social interests.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) With a little applied ingenuity at this time you'll find new ways to get certain things you've been wanting for the family but couldn't swing previously.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll pick up valuable elements from conversations today that will go right over the heads of others. You'll know how they fit—use them.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An unusual opportunity is within your reach now. It is difficult to recognize because it comes through a unique and unexpected source.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Don't let any grass grow under your feet the next few days where your self-interests are concerned. This is a time for action.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A matter that you've felt you haven't had complete control over will work out as well as if you directed all its aspects personally.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't be afraid to tackle situations now that you haven't tried before. Your competency in these new areas may surprise even you.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There is going to be a favorable shift in circumstances. It will benefit you in a situation where you're competing against others.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's a good day to talk to the right about your new ideas. Try not to go through a subordinate, as this could lessen the impact of your thoughts.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) If you ask the right questions now, information that was denied to you previously will be laid out in the bright light of day.

Still Won

LANE END, England (CP) — Telephone repairman Peter Cubbage, aiming for a post of safe-driving award, was sure he had lost his chance when he swerved to avoid a runaway cow in Buckinghamshire and wrecked his truck against a tree. Next day his new truck was charged by an irate bull—but he still got the award.

"Some day, Son, all this will be yours . . . unfortunately."

Talladine Tel spotted the king of hearts against the three-no trump contract and won the ace with the queen after South ducked. South won the second trick and led a heart right back.

"Thank you, my friend," said Ted. Then he proceeded to cash his last two hearts. East didn't feel at all thankful: he had been forced to discard two clubs and a spade, while declarer had gotten rid of one club and one spade from his own hand and dummy.

After taking half hearts, West shifted to the queen of clubs. South cashed his ace and king. Poor East was squeezed out of either his spade or diamond stopper and South had his nine tricks.

If Ted had been a student of the classic and had kept quiet and thought, he might have remembered about bewaring of Greeks bearing gifts. He need not have cashed either of his hearts.

Instead he could have led the queen of clubs. South would have been forced to win the trick. Otherwise, West would have been able to set the contract right then and there with four hearts.

South could have struggled along, but he would never have been able to collect that contract trick.

Incidentally, West's play is called the "cannibal squeeze," in that he ate up his partner's tricks.

To Your Good Health

Breast Secretion Fairly Frequent

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We women are told by doctors to self examine our breasts for any lumps or changes and report to the doctor, in case it might be cancer.

I am 59. My uterus was removed at age 47, and I have now been taking hormone shots for a year and a half.

For the last month when I press the nipple of my breast I have noticed that a couple of tiny openings in the left breast emit a drop of blood every time I press, as well as a drop or two of yellowish discharge from different openings in the same breast. The right breasts milk a bit of yellowish discharge when pressed but no blood.

I called my gynecologist and he told me it was a various vein and not to press the nipple. I have never heard of this. Is it common? I have noticed this breast being a little more sensitive than the right one.

SUNDAYS PUZZLE APPEARS IN INTELLIGENCER ALMANAC

My doctor has not examined my breasts for about eight years. I am concerned.—H.G.

You should be concerned but not alarmed. Fairly often a discretion can be expressed from the nipple in women who have borne children and also those taking hormones.

Non-cancerous changes in the milk ducts can cause wart-covered discharges, although severe that they are, the growths out are not likely to be due to malignancy. But since a bloody discharge can be a sign of cancer, it is imperative that you be examined and not just rely on a phone call.

You say your breasts have not been examined for eight years. I'd say that you should make an appointment for an examination—not just ask for a noncontrol opinion.

Vital part of the examination should be a Pap test on the secretions.

While self-examination to detect lumps or other signs is important, it need be done no more than once a month. I get the impression that you are spending the nipples oftener than this, and I join your gynecologist in saying don't.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Three years ago I had polyps removed from my nose. For a week before and after the surgery I took anti allergy tablets.

I was given to understand that the polyps were likely to return and they have. If the anti-allergy tablets were so effective, what would be the chances of getting rid of the polyps now by taking the tablets regularly for some time? Would I just tend to go away?—W.J.W.

No. The medication will relieve the symptoms of allergy but will not prevent formation of polyps or get rid of them.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to write you something about double vision. This happened to my brother about a year ago. At first we thought it was figures from too much reading—he was always a lot at the time. However now it continues to bother him. Can you suggest where he might obtain help or advice?—R.B.

I certainly can. He should go at once to an ophthalmologist (eye specialist), especially since the condition has continued so long.

Diplopia (double vision) can result from a wide variety of causes. The problem could be in the eye, itself, or be only a symptom of an imbalance in the muscles of the eye.

But it could also result from a brain tumor, or from one kind or another, such as multiple sclerosis. I don't mean to worry you, but I do want to impress upon you (and him) the necessity of being examined right away.

STILL WAITING?

Are you one of those waiting for prices to drop, or are you waiting for interest rates to go down? You may have a very long wait, according to those who should know. Several lenders raised their rates this week to 12%.

We can offer a choice of a good selection of mortgages at much lower interest rates. As many of these are NHA insured, they have lots of opportunity to increase in value in future. Possession in early spring.

SUBURBAN SECLUSION

a larger three bedroom split level situated away from traffic noises. This small exclusive area is only five minutes from town. The house has a separate formal dining room, and living room with fireplace. Kitchen has plenty of cupboards. Basement has great potential for future rec room.

Congressional Showdown

Ford Sides with Turks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is heading into its first foreign policy showdown with President Ford with most leaders expecting to lose in the fight over a cutoff of United States military aid to Turkey.

Opponents of the Turkish aid said Monday that's plain checks indicated they might be able to muster a two-thirds House of Representatives vote today to override Ford's veto of the aid cutoff.

But the opponents agreed with predictions of leaders, including Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott, that the Senate will sustain Ford's veto whether the House overrides or not.

A presidential veto can be overturned only by a two-thirds vote of both House and Senate.

Congress has postponed its scheduled recess for a week to act because the Turkey aid cutoff is in an emergency stop-gap funding resolution for agencies whose legal spending authority expired Sept. 30.

Denouncing "reckless acts," Ford said in his veto message Monday that Congress' combination of aid to Turkey is "entirely destructive" to U.S. efforts to bring about Cyprus peace negotiations.

The president also said the aid cutoff might imperil U.S. relations with Turkey and weaken us in the crucial eastern Mediterranean.

Turkey's deputies in the NATO alliance, he added.

Both the House and Senate originally voted four to one in favor of the aid cutoff, after Turkey's invasion of Cyprus, in force negotiations on Turkey's withdrawal from the island.

But Ford contended that rather than encourage negotiations, the Turkey aid cutoff "would mean the indefinite postponement of meaningful negotiations."

In a clear reference to congressmen's sensibility to Greek-American lobby for the Turkey aid cutoff, Ford said lack of negotiations will not help Greece or the Greek-Cypriots who formerly dominated Cyprus.

But opponents, including Senator Thomas Eagleton (Dem-Mo.), said continued U.S. military aid to Turkey is an obvious violation of law prohibiting its use for invasion and occupation.

Other opponents, such as House Europe subcommittee Chairman Benjamin Rosenthal (Dem. N.Y.), contend that as long as U.S. aid strengthens Turkey's forces, an Cyprus she will never negotiate a pullout.

Rosenthal said Monday he has asked Congress' general accounting office to itemize U.S. military aid to Turkey since the July 20 invasion of Cyprus, including any future shipments, and advise him whether there is any legal way to recover value of the equipment.

Rating Drops

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — President Ford's approval rating has dropped 21 percentage points since he took office, the Gallup poll says. The survey shows half of those questioned saying they approve of the way Ford is handling his job, 28 percent disapproving and 22 per cent expressing no opinion.

John Dean Has Another Chance To Finger Nixon Associates

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Dean, the first White House aider to accuse former president Richard Nixon and his closest associates, is about to renew his charges as the government's lead-off witness in the Watergate cover-up trial.

First, however, lawyers for John Ehrlichman, Kenneth Parkinson and Robert Mardian are to make their opening statements today. Lawyers for the other defendants, H. R. Haldeman and John Mitchell, reserved theirs until the prosecution case is in.

Dean was to testify to a jury that had been told by government prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste on Monday that Nixon once suggested Dean be given immunity from prosecution as a sacrificial "hors d'oeuvre (and) maybe they won't come back for the main course."

Quoting from tape recordings to be made public for the first time in the trial, Ben-Veniste told of conversations among the former president, Haldeman and Ehrlichman in April, 1973, about the threat posed by Dean, then spilling the Watergate story to prosecutors.

On April 14, Ben-Veniste said, the three men "considered a strategy of giving Dean what we'd side the circle of wagon around the White House." At that time, he added, Nixon suggested sacrificing Dean, a self-admitted participant in the cover-up.

The president recognized that if Dean was guilty that half of his staff could be considered guilty," Ben-Veniste told the jury, He said Nixon made a strong suggestion that "Dean has got to look down the road and realize there is only one man who can restore him to the practice of law after it's all over."

But by then, Dean already had gone to prosecutors with his story. When that information was brought to the president by Attorney-General Richard Kleindienst, Ben-Veniste said the discussion turned to how the matter should be handled.

Ben-Veniste called it "the cover-up of the cover-up."

Only Small Aircraft Stalled by Walkout

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Assistant air traffic controllers at the seven airports reported for work Monday night while their counterparts in most centres across the country continued the walkout that began Monday morning.

A ministry of transport official said Monday night that most of the 700 assistant controllers in the country's 40 tiers of the Union of Canadian Air Transport Employees — an affiliate of the Canadian Labor Alliance of Canada, remained off the job.

The assistant air traffic control assistant, who monitor aircraft movements, are seeking immediate consideration of their demand for reclassification.

They are seeking classification as technical staff rather than clerical — a move that would mean about a $5-per cent increase in their annual salaries, which now average $9,000.

Transport ministry officials said the walkout is not likely to interfere with the major airline schedules, but smaller operations might be slowed or crippled by the strikes.

Pilots Mark Time

MONTREAL (CP) — An Air Canada spokesman said Saturday the airline's 1,200 pilots would probably take part in any strike action until at least the end of the month.

Under a contract that expired June 1, salaries ranged from $9,000 a year for junior pilots to $29,500 annually for the senior men.

News Briefs

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Belgium's second-largest bank, the Banque de Bruxelles, said today its losses on illicit foreign-exchange operations will total at least $14 million — and may reach $36 million. The bank, announcing Monday that its accountants had turned up irregular dealings, said its losses are ample to cover any losses which might result.

Few Believers Left

LONDON (AP) — Only 39 per cent of British people believe in God, says a public opinion poll published Sunday. The poll of 1,093 persons was conducted by Gallup Poll Limited for a religious program televised by the British Broadcasting Corp.

Mr. Fixit Dead

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC's Mr. Fixit, Peter Whittall, 67, died of a heart attack Saturday at his home in nearby Richmond Hill. Mr. Whittall was one of the pioneers of Canadian television. His how-to-do-it programs for amateur craftsmen were on coast-to-coast TV for 11 years and on radio for 13.

Kissinger, Arabs Discuss Possible Israeli Pullbacks

ALGIERS (AP) — Henry Kissinger flies home to the United States today with "some positive indications," he says, that his latest Middle East tour has brought progress toward Arab-Israeli peace.

The U.S. state secretary ends a week-long tour of the Middle East in Rabat, where he talks with Morocco's King Hassan II. Their meeting takes place 11 days before Hassan is to be host to an Arab summit conference.

The Rabat summit may determine the course of peace moves Kissinger discussed in the capitals of Egypt, Syria, Jordan, Israel, Saudi Arabia and Algeria. No details have been disclosed, but Arab sources said proposals have evolved that include Israeli pullbacks from Arab lands and resumption of political negotiations.

Before Kissinger left Egypt Monday, President Anwar Sadat told him he will try to get support for interim agreements with Israel at the Arab summit. Sadat said he was "very optimistic."

After a brief stop in Damascus, Kissinger flew to Algiers and talked for three hours at night with President Houari Boumedienne among the most influential and radical of Arab leaders. Afterward, Kissinger said the talks were "very good and very positive."

U.S. sources said nothing new emerged from the talks, which they described as "a general review of the Middle East situation." They said the talks touched on the oil crisis and the possible restoration of diplomatic relations between Washington and Algiers.

Algeria is one of only three Arab countries—Iraq and South Yemen are the others—still without diplomatic ties with the United States.

Terrorist Leader Guest Speaker at UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Yasir Arafat, the leader of Israel's master terrorist gang, the Black September, is to be received at the United Nations early next month as the first outsider to speak to the General Assembly since Pope Paul in 1965.

Yosef Tekoah, Israel's ambassador, condemned the vote Monday by a number of the United Nations to murder and barbarism."

He said that Arafat heads not only the PLO but also the Black September group, extremists who claimed responsibility for the murder of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich. The Israeli said "that Arafat personally radioed commands for eight Black September terrorists in kill U.S. and Belgian diplomats in Khartoum, Sudan, last year.

Busy Weekend

CHICAGO (AP) — Twenty-seven persons died violently during the weekend in the Chicago area. Police say the availability of handguns was the major cause of the deaths.

Police said 38 shootings were reported from 4 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday night in Chicago alone.

Heath Losing Tory Grip

LONDON (Reuter) — Former Prime Minister Edward Heath's hold on the leadership of the Conservative party continued to slip today with a powerful right-wing group in his party calling for his resignation.

The Monday Club, a group of Conservative MPs, Monday night demanded a new leader to replace Heath following last Thursday's general-election defeat.

Their statement called for fresh direction to revive the party's fortunes and rescue Britain from what it called a "Marxist catastrophe." The demand increased the pressure on Heath from within the party to step down.

Another meeting of Conservative members of Parliament on Monday was understood to have urged Heath to state his own views on his leadership which has led the Conservatives to three defeats in the last four British elections.

Heath goes on television tonight but his speech is unlikely to reflect the leadership issue. He will be responding to Monday night's broadcast by Prime Minister Harold Wilson who appealed for national unity to meet the economic crisis.

Wilson meets separately today with representatives of the British Labor and business in an effort to win support for his new era Britain's economic policy.

Today's talks follow Wilson's call Monday for a partnership between his newly reinstated Labor government and "the whole of our national family."

Chief Refuses Lie Tests for Policemen Accused of Torture

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says investigations it has undertaken during the last five months indicate that incidents of police violence and police torture might have occurred in Toronto.

The newspaper says in a copyright story it, thoroughly investigated 50 reports of police violence using polygraph (lie detector) tests to assess the truthfulness of subjects on specific allegations. Results of nine tests which the newspaper says are reasonably conclusive as to their truthfulness, will be published during the next 10 days.

The story by reporter Gerald McAuliffe says Harold Adamson, Metropolitan Toronto Police chief, refused a request by The Globe and Mail to interview or give polygraph tests to policemen involved in the cases being investigated.

"I cannot and will not open it (the force) to a probe by The Globe and Mail," he said.

The newspaper says Metro police use the polygraph themselves on internal investigations.

Regarding incidents of police torture, the newspaper cites the case of a 19-year-old suspect who says he was beaten, handcuffed, stripped, blindfolded and had a spring-type claw clamped to his nose and penis to force him to make a confession.

Deputy Police Chief Bernard Simmonds, the newspaper says, refused to disclose to The Globe and Mail the number of policemen charged, convicted or acquitted of criminal charges under the Criminal Code or the Ontario Police Act. All charges under the Police Act are tried in private.

It says Chief Adamson has refused to make public the contents of Bylaw 14, passed by the Metro Board of Police Commissioners to set the rules and regulations governing the discipline of Metro's 4,300 police men.

The newspaper says five of the cases it investigated involve persons who filed complaints with the police complaints bureau and who were unsatisfied with the way in which their complaints were resolved.

Chief Adamson said any allegations in the newspaper's series would be thoroughly investigated by him and other senior officers, and the results sent to the board of police commissioners.

"I do not want brutal officers on the force," he said.

C. O. Bick, board of police commissioners chairman, said he would not comment as yet on the cases being reported in the series.

"If these are allegations made by individuals, I would not be willing to make any comment. I'd like to see the facts them thoroughly and hear all sides of the story," he said.

Charges Meat Packers Slowing Insulin Flow

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Canadian Diabetic Association has charged that packing companies have been hampering production of animal pancreas — a vital ingredient in the production of insulin — as a result the price of the drug is likely to increase.

Dr. Albert Fisher said on the weekend that Canada "wouldn't be self-sufficient" if shortage of insulin would develop.

"Most of the pancreases is going up a mile a minute," he said. "I'm told that this is just about because one of the major meat packers stockpiling pancreases and is buying them from other packers."

However, Hector McInnes, executive vice-president of Connaught Laboratories Ltd., the Canadian manufacturer of insulin, said there should be no immediate shortage. He said "we have a fair stockpile" of the bovine-dried insulin normally used for making the medicine.

"We hope at least a 12-to 18-month stockpile," he said.

Dr. Fisher, while noting that stockpiling pancreases is not illegal, said: "I don't think the diabetic should be placed in any sort of fear that there will be a shortage of insulin."

Doctors Live Dangerously

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors and nurses who work in operating rooms face dangerous risks of contracting some diseases or having miscarriages and deformed children, a medical study has indicated.

Frequent breathing of waste anesthetic gases in the atmosphere of the surgical suite may cause headaches, nausea and dizziness, the study of 4,000 doctors and nurses suggests.

The study showed that women operating room personnel experience more miscarriages, and their children more birth defects than other women.

EMSCO Ltd.

One Firms Fight Against Inflation

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

EMSCO Ltd., is probably the smallest company being city, yet it carries the impact of being the most diversified industrial supply house between Toronto and Montreal, according to its president.

What started out in 1945 as a one-man repair shop in Trenton has blossomed to during 24-employee business with a sister company Acme Electric employing 15 — both housed near Canadian National on Camilton Rd. The company supplies a variety of tools, raw materials and odds and ends to industry across eastern Ontario.

Times have changed for EMSCO like they have for everyone else. From the one man operation of nearly 30 years ago it now takes one full-time woman to keep up with the demand of supply industry's price changes.

Roland Belanger joined his father in the company in 1950. He became a top mechanic in the back shop and had time to devote some of his attention to community work. Now as the firm's chief executive he says he can still fix motors but doesn't have time anymore for the commercial work he would like to do. He's moved up to the paper work of a bustling business and along with the daily challenges of keeping his finger on price changes that hit him what inflation is all about.

In his line of business, Mr. Belanger says he is thankful he doesn't directly deal with wage - earning consumers. Rather, he deals with industries that in turn absorb the price increases, increases so numerous that paper work for the staff is "almost fiscal".

"But, sooner or later the price increase is passed onto the customer who can only do is shrug to no use," said Mr. Belanger in reference to the observer of individuals trying to cope with runaway prices.

While Mr. Belanger says he does not agree with government meddling in free enterprise and he is sceptical of recent government moves to curb the climbing cost of living, he says "the federal government is the only body that can attack all aspects of inflation at one time."

Simultaneous controls on retail prices, profit and wages would be the heart of Mr. Belanger's anti-inflation theory.

"We should have controls on the major conglomerates and the major unions," he said.

Mr. Belanger said a lot of people are not being helped by a union are living on a fixed income, being left behind by union men in the race to keep up with the country's economy.

"As unions continue to strike and gain higher wages, the others are left farther and farther behind . . . placing closer to the poverty line," he said. "They are unable to keep abreast."

"It's a delicate line to draw between keeping a company healthy and providing sufficient salaries to keep employees comfortable," he said.

In EMSCO, three or four price increases a day is common now. Over the last year Mr. Belanger says his steel, synthetic and rubber products have increased an average of 40 per cent.

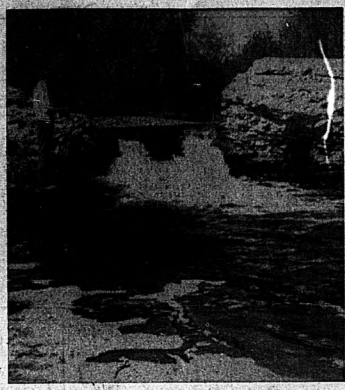
In the past, goods would be received a month to three months after order. Lately delivery has been nine months to a year after order.

Because of order delays, profits are being placed back into the company — increasing the stocking inventory by 25 per cent. "We had to do it to keep up," said Mr. Belanger.

Looking through the bins and shelves, there are empty spaces because products have been discontinued by EMSCO suppliers who steel and cut into fast-moving stock rather than risk spending scarce capital on supply.

In the face of inflationary prices and one-time stock holders preferring to invest in bank certificates rather than in company shares, Mr. Belanger and hundreds of other Canadian businessmen say Canadian society is based on healthy business".

"If industry collapses, we're all going to suffer," said Mr. Belanger.



No Time For Cold Feet

Jim Purdy, whose home is only a stone throw from the Moira River near Colborne St., says it is worth cold feet to try for fish in the river. He's pulled out specimens up to 24 inches long. Once out of the water, socks and running shoes fairly flew onto his feet.

Police Report Quite Weekend

The Thanksgiving holiday weekend was a relatively quiet one in the Quinte and nearby area. A check of provincial police stations within a 25 mile radius of Belleville revealed that from 8 p.m. Friday until this morning there had been only one fatality, a man killed in an automobile accident in Campbellford Saturday.

In fact, Campbellford was the only area to report a fatality in the usual weekend for accidents. A spokesman said they had about eight or nine accidents to deal with over the weekend.

In Napanee an OPP official said that 22 accidents had occurred from Friday at 4 p.m. to midnight Monday — all minor. He added that had it not been for the heavy rain that fell Monday night there would have been hardly any mishaps at all.

In Belleville, the situation was brighter with no major accidents and none involving injuries. The city's OPP detachment investigated a total of 13 accidents during the holiday weekend.

Likewise, Picton OPP reported a similar situation with no major accidents.

While Bancroft provincial police report no fatalities, a spokesman said there had been several accidents, some involving injuries. The Brighton area, too, had one accident, involving an injury, Saturday in Colborne, OPP there said. They had seven accidents altogether on the weekend.

Provincial police in Madoc report an accident-free Sunday weekend with a spokesman saying everyone must be taking it easily on the road.

Sanders Protests Dismissal

Robert Sanders, the New Democratic Party candidate for Hastings in the last federal election, has filed an official appeal of dismissal as a social worker at Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. Sanders claimed in a letter to hospital director Phillip Rickard, "my nomination as the NDP candidate and subsequent statements I made in the course of the election campaign of 1974 were the primary causes for my dismissal."

He also said "that in my case the accepted principal of seniority has not been applied."

In his letter to the hospital director, Mr. Sanders requests "a full and impartial public inquiry."

Milk and Bubble Gum Lead Rising Prices

Milk at your local corner store will soon cost 55 cents a quart but consumers will buy it anyway because it's more convenient than driving downtown to save a couple of pennies.

With the five-cent a quart federal subsidy coming off milk, the average price around the city will climb from about 45 cents to 50 cents.

Morris Taylor, owner of the Victoria Ave. Maple Leaf Variety, said he had learned another three cents increase is coming which — by November — will mean about 53 cents in the chain stores and about 55 cents in the corner store.

The extra two cents is said by the consumer for the convenience of stepping across the street to a corner store as opposed to driving downtown," he said.

Mr. Taylor says customers are generally sympathetic to the farmer but complain about dairies "they feel are behind the price increases."

Mr. Taylor suggests adding powder to your milk.

Mixed half and half — powdered milk with liquid milk — great savings are to be had.

The average milk (sells for $1.65 for eight quarts) is going like crazy," said Mr. Taylor. "We sell bread and milk more than anything else ... about $100 worth of milk a day."

"Inflation hurts the corner store more than the big chains which have volume buying power just we (corner store owners) won't go out of business.

"Consumers will just pay more for corner store convenience," he said.

"We've got to increase prices to stay in business ... It's terrible," he said.

When asked how what inflation means to the corner store operator, Mr. Taylor explained his own position of watch, big last week's profits "gobbled up by this week's price increases."

"In spite of this inflation, people have more money to spend than they ever did," he said.

Apart from bread and milk, "kids and junk buying is a big part of my business," he said.

"It's not unusual for the youngsters to come in and spend a dollar on junk candy and especially bubble gum," said Mr. Taylor. "I have one little four-year-old that comes in every day of the week and spends 25 cents."

"These kids don't even think about spending a buck," he said.

Mr. Taylor says his store sells a case of gum — chewing gum each week — roughly 3,000 pieces.

Price increases aren't going to burst the bubble.

"I think case of gum will send the price to two cents a piece. "They won't buy less, they'll spend twice as much," he said.

Roland Belanger was once the best electrical motor repairman in his father's Electric Motor Sales and Service Company. Now as EMSCO's chief executive, he says he's a "a little rusty" after moving from the work bench to a desk that handles "astronomical" amounts of paper work. EMSCO is reputed the most diversified industrial supply house between Toronto and Montreal, according to comments made by salesmen who make regular rounds between both points.

REAL ESTATE:
WHITE ELEPHANT SYNDROME

Ed. McGinnis
A.E. Lepage Realty Ltd.
In the real estate trade it's called a "White Elephant". An excellent home for sale which just sits and sits. Often you can recognize it by the tall grass and weeds surrounding the front yard; an occasional broken window here and there. The cause of this blight is usually the same — OVERPRICING!
The blighter always has a sad ending — for the seller. Eventually, he has to reduce the price to sell. By this time, it's too late. The good prospects have waved goodby and found other homes. The appreciation and equities have deteriorated. The greatest selling price is far below what it could have realized had it been realistically priced from the outset.
You don't have to increase the "White Elephant" possibilities. There is a safe way to establish the RIGHT price. When you're ready to sell, see a Realtor. He'll know the true value and what it will bring in the market. Top price, yes! Overprice - No!

Ontario Energy Board
Notice of Application and Hearing
TAKE NOTICE that the Board will hold a hearing commencing at 9 a.m. on Monday, November 18, 1974 at Its Hearing Room, 8th Floor, 14 Carlton Street, Toronto, Ontario M5B 1K5, in respect of an Application by Northern and Central Gas Corporation Limited dated the 7th day of October, 1974 (Docket Number E.B.R.O. 214-b) for an interim order to recover such Increases in the cost of gas as may result from an order of the National Energy Board in the application of TransCanada Pipe-Lines Limited dated the 9th day of August, 1974.
Based on TransCanada's filing, the Application if granted would result in an increase in the rates to Applicant's fixed rate customers (residential, commercial and small industrial) of $0.2220 per thousand cubic feet ("Mcf") in the Western Region $0.2284 per (Mcf) in the Northern and Sault Ste. Marie Regions, and $0.2403 per Mcf in the Eastern Region, based on 1973 volume of sales. For the Applicant's customers purchasing gas under Special Contract rate whose contracts contain a full pass-through cost of gas escalation clause, this Application if granted would result in increases in the limits of the negotiable range for the Western Range to $0.54 per Mcf maximum and to $0.5799 per Mcf maximum (from $0.29 and $0.73 respectively), for the Northern and Sault Ste. Marie Regions to $0.59 per Mcf minimum and $1.0284 per Mcf maximum (from $0.32 and $0.80 respectively), and for the Eastern Region to $0.65 per Mcf minimum and $1.2403 per Mcf maximum (from $0.35 and $1.16 respectively).
The Board has made a procedural Order dated the 8th day of October, 1974 in respect of the hearing. Copies of that Order and copies of the Application may be obtained from the Board at 9th Floor, 14 Carlton Street, Toronto, Ontario or from the Applicant at 4600 Toronto-Dominion Centre, Toronto, Ontario.
If any person duly notified does not attend at the hearing, the Board may proceed in his absence and he will not be notified to any further notice in the proceedings.
DATED at Toronto this 8th day of October, 1974.

BCH Seminar

Epilepsy — it is a word that at once startles and repels the reader.

But what the citizen should know is that epilepsy is not, as many in this supposedly enlightened age still believe, akin to being possessed by devils.

Rather it is a disorder of the neurological system, manifesting itself in two ways principally: in grand mal where the victim collapses in a writhing seizure; and petit mal, which can be no more than a brief lapse in concentration.

There is no known cure for epilepsy, from which Julius Caesar and many other famous persons have suffered, but modern drugs enable epileptics to lead productive and near-normal lives.

These drugs control abnormal activity of the brain's electric system which can cause seizures and which can stem from brain damage at birth, or from injury later in life, or from other unknown causes.

Much remains to be done however to educate the public about epilepsy, its causes and treatment. There remains, in the words of Ivan Wright of the Department of Rehabilitation Medicine at Belleville General Hospital "appalling ignorance of the malady on the part of the general public.

Thus, epilepsy is one of the principal topics of Rehabilitation Week '74 to be held in the Education Hall of the hospital Nov. 11-15. It will feature a professional seminar, with a panel discussion and open forum by day and, in the evening, a public presentation by, among others, Dr. Henry Dinsdale, Professor of Neurology at Queen's University. This will include an audiovisual presentation and a display illustrating the work of the Ontario Epileptic Association.

David Goodyear, executive director of the OEA will be present, and the program recalls the association's informational campaign last May which received widespread publicity. One suggestion is that a local chapter of the OEA might be established here.

Meanwhile, a still better informed public and greater understanding of this long-standing malady, is the goal of programs such as next month's BCH event.

United States And Cuban Regime Remain At Arm's Length

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

It looks as though Cuba is still in Washington's doghouse in spite of hopes the exit of Nixon would see a new relationship between Havana and the United States.

Two prominent U.S. senators recently visited Fidel Castro and had long interviews with him. And earlier a permanent official of the House Committee on Foreign Relations and a Latin American specialist had spent four hours with the Cuban leader.

Held in Miami, where a tough reaction was expected from the large and economically powerful Cuban exile community, there has been none except for a bitter editorial blurb from the anti-Castro, Spanish-language press.

The Organization of American States meets again next Nov. 19 in Ecuador with an increasing number of its member nations determined to see Cuba back in the OAS as a full member as well as diplomatically again part of the Western hemisphere.

So, what is holding up the work in Havana and Washington with President Nixon, Castro and Fidel Castro? The answer, and a positive sentiment at least that President Ford could be moved to make a move toward Castro?

Undoubtedly the length of the break between the two once-friendly neighbors and the bitterness of that rupture made in early 1961, have much to do with more delay. For 13 years the United States has maintained an economic blockade of Cuba, one of the main arguments which Castro has used to justify the establishment of Marxism in his island.

One of the most famous Castro lies, perhaps the most revolutionary slogan "Cuba: Free Territory of the Americas" is that the OAS and its member states of that long blockade. Cuba cut the umbilical cord with American capitalism with the revolution and the blockade is only one of the facts, was anticipated.

That may be true but on the one hand Castro has been showing dreaming by Castro seasons the status rule in history as did self-justification spouted by Communist leaders who broke back the anti-meeting U.S. which commanded Cuba's economy before 1959.

To add to the confusion other factors within the hemisphere press hard on both sides, a new spirit of independence in military regimes in Latin America led by Chile, Bolivia and Brazil pressuring Washington to end those the Cuban isolation, but also a growing clutch of Latin American nations, some of them with freely-elected democracies, pressuring the United States to bring Cuba once again and with recognition also her paramount phenomenon of the Castro social revolution.

These countries include Mexico, Venezuela, Peru, Panama, Jamaica, Trinidad-Tobago, Guyana and the Barbados which commenced or reopened diplomatic relations with Cuba since March in late 1971.

And many recently Venezuela again under the leftward-leaning elected Democratic Action Party which endured deterioration Cuban guerrilla assaults against it in the mid-1960s, is calling for a return of Cuba to the fold and is likely to make that more formal at next month's OAS meetings in Ecuador.

Civil Service Association Juggles Some Figures

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The new militant leadership of the Civil Service Association of Ontario is putting off on the wrong foot, at least as far as this one observer is concerned.

The CSAO recently has been a bit dishonest where facts are concerned.

In a statement concerning Toronto police it is seeking for community college teachers it certainly overlooked the fact that the teachers get a regular annual increment—now $400 and set to rise to $500.

Then in its case for the civil service generally it says that typical secretaries get $140 a week. Metro Toronto they get $173.50.

But government advertisements show that civil service secretaries get up to $156.30 a week.

CSAO officers in going to the bread-and-circuses may find they are putting their best case forward.

But to a newspaper man when they attempt to juggle figures they are showing they have a weak case.

And also, of course, are insulting the intelligence of the public.

Do women vote for women running for political office?

Old political wisdom would tell you that they tend not to. (Just as many Catholics vote for Catholics). It's something to do with an inherently complex.

But now we are told that women's Lib has voted.

A group under Mayor Jane Hughes of London did a study (independent of the government) on women in local government.

One of its conclusions was that the "Old Boy Network" won't support women "is an old canard. This, it said, "was shot down."

However, on inquiry it appears that any such shot was very, very weak. The London study, was arrived at from comments by people attending the ladies' luncheon.

A more accurate conclusion would seem to be that anyone going to sessions of an inquiry into how women is going to have biased opinions.

A fair assessment would seem to be that, canard or not, the proposition that women don't support women still is probably right.

Which not any interprovincial fight be over a lottery?

Tuesday morning Mayor Deakins has announced it will continue a $1 million lottery called the Olympics and its Lotterio are out of the way.

Much of the money for this would come from Ontario.

Unless it gets in first. Or at least gets in.

Which is doubtful. For it would mean getting off that part of the province which spends too much of its time slitting on.

Banks Anticipate $23 Billion Loan Bonanza

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

If you use bank loans or are in the market of credit, don't look for any early relief from today's record interest rates.

That was the outlook for the next 12 to 15 months, as per part of bankers' bank - the major suppliers of credit.

This region credits anyway, is that the banks expect the demand for credit to go on rising almost as rapidly as it has during 1974, while the supply of money increases more slowly.

The chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce predicts that financing demands of corporations, governments, consumers and other non-financial borrowers will total $23.5 billion next year, up from $22.4 billion this year and $18.7 billion last year.

The demand will be even higher, warns J.P.R. Wadsworth, if the banking sector does not defer its capital-spending plans to the extent he has suggested.

(One good reason for assuming that such capital spending will not be higher is the current shortage of capital equipment. For example, an industrial electrical transformer-maker must retain its big construction projects—if ordered today would probably be delivered bout the end of February, 1976).

While demand for credit continues to grow, the bankers expect financial markets to remain under pressure.

The Commerce - Imperial Bankers think money supply will expand by 13 to 14 per cent this next year, down from last year's increase of 16 per cent.

The Toronto-Dominion Bank is calling for an easing of the money supply on the grounds that corporate profits will come to a standstill next year (after several years of sharp growth) and that an overly restrictive policy is needed to maintain the level of capital spending and to ward off the massive unemployment that Ottawa fears will develop in 1976 (when, at one time, one out of every 14 people in the labour force will be out of work).

Whether Ottawa's monetary authorities will listen to the advice of the chartered banks is, of course, another question.

The so-called Committee for Public Justice, which represents the sum of Canada's combined efforts to combat inflation far distinct from its efforts to ease the impact of inflation through ever wider use of "indexing"—that is, increasing various benefits, payments and tax exemptions as the cost-of-living index goes up).

The demand for mortgage money next year will be even higher than it has been this year, in the view of Mr. Wadsworth, of the Commerce-Imperial.

If that is true, families waiting for lower interest rates, before they buy a house, will probably be disappointed.

Charges for consumer loans already the highest in living memory, are likely to rise, as all those levels because of soaring anticipated significant growth in consumer borrowing, linked to the growth of disposable personal income.

About the only bright spot in the consumer - Imperial forecast is the suggestion of diminished demand for short-term credit and fewer seasonal pressures on the demand for bank loans.

Some improvement in Canadian short-term interest rates will likely occur in 1975," says Mr. Wadsworth.

"However, there is little reason to expect any significant easing of long-term rates."

Bible Digest

by H. R. DEAN

"The Lord also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in time of trouble." Psalms 9:9

A Be sure of this. God has a place for us to go when the pressures of life get too much for us. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Premier Davis' Italian Trip

Peterborough Examiner
Premier Davis's provincial trip to Italian Davis didn't do it any harm to pick up tips on how to handle labor.

While the premier was busy in Italy, Labor Minister Bales, the Italian parliament in Rome was putting on a dandy show for the parliamentary procedure.

Members were debating whether parliamentary immunity should be abolished to let the police deputy so he can face criminal charges of taking part in a brawl. Two days before, a Communist and a neo-Fascist had come to blows in the chamber.

The Thursday night dinner in Rome is one path to a member's office and he should ignore. Our own Legislature is raucous enough as it is. It would be a shame to see it like what the members should do when they run out of epithets for each other.

Corporations And Inflation

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Profits rise 36.9 percent for quarter higher corresponding with period 1973, Statistics Canada reports today in its Industrial Corporations.

Estimated profits for all industries totalled $4.4 billion, up $784 million for the same quarter in 1973. Companies produced goods for short-term petroleum products had the greatest increases.

Petroleum companies also pay the lowest wages and don't have the cost of living bonus. These companies pay only 3% of the money in the bank.

Then the 1975, contract time comes along the big issue then is a big strike over a few cents an hour.

Farmers read this big profit industries are making, and then wonder why the price of beef has gone down, how can you blame them.

I feel sorry for those people that had the notion regar. It is unfortunate they could not, store them away like the big companies can hold their materials until the market goes up or obtain a 1975 model on a 1974, and still will approach Queen's Park, and Ottawa.

But now we are told that women's Lib has voted.

A group under Mayor Jane Hughes of London did a study (independent of the government) on women in local government.

One of its conclusions was that the "Old Boy Network" won't support women "is an old canard. This, it said, "was shot down."

Full Program

Not only epilepsy, but a variety of other medical and social themes will be discussed during the Rehabilitation Week program.

Injuries will be the theme on the opening night, with emphasis on industrial accidents in the morning session; and on prevention of sports injuries, and prevention of disability therefrom, should they occur, during the afternoon and evening sessions.

Epilepsy on Tuesday will be followed on Wednesday by a program about Arthritis, a painful ailment from which many suffer, and on Thursday the focus will be on alcoholism, an increasingly serious problem fraught with human tragedy and economic loss.

Finally, on Friday there will be talks about Children With Learning Disabilities and on Coping with the Handicapped Child.

This is a valuable program from which members of the public will gain information about human problems which nevertheless are not insurmountable. Indeed, with modern treatment, it can be shown that those involved can lead happy, fruitful lives.

Where's The Quality

As prices go up, the packaging of some products seems to be deteriorating these days. Take milk cartons; how often does the shopper find himself with a pint that is not? It is unfortunate, but higher prices are not necessarily commensurate with improved quality.

Another thing that may be noted in passing are shortages that occur from time to time — necessitating time-wasting calls at a number of stores — of a wide range of goods from washing soap to diaper liners.

Village Goes Automatic
A Switchboard Operator Retires

GREAT VILLAGE, N.S. (CP) — Cecil Nelson is enjoying the unaccustomed luxury of a good night's sleep.

When her mother died in 1945, Miss Nelson inherited her job as the operator of the Great Village telephone switchboard. Great Village is about 75 miles north of Halifax.

She operated the switchboard from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. and was relieved during the day by part-time assistants.

On Oct. 3, Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Co. Ltd., part of its program to introduce modern telephone equipment in Nova Scotia, replaced the switchboard and disconnected Miss Nelson.

At one time she was promised a pension but now she does not think she will even get that.

And she does not know what life will be like without her "people"—her subscribers.

"I was sad in their sorrows and rejoiced in their happiness, even when I called them my people."

Recently several hundred subscribers gathered at the local Masonic Lodge and showered her with cards, wishes, bouquets and a purse of money.

Another gave a friendship book signed by more than 500 subscribers, it said:

"In deep and sincere appreciation of the courteous, faithful and efficient service rendered, away beyond the call of duty."

Miss Nelson was one of the reception's organizers, said everyone will miss Miss Nelson and the way of life she represents.

"In a place like this people called on her for everything, at the time of day, bus schedules, a doctor or the police.

The first telephone system in Great Village was five years dating back to the late 1890s. In 1930, Maritime Tel and Tel installed it in Great Village.

Miss Nelson, who can remember making her first connection when six or seven years old, said her mother took the switchboard after her home because she had five children to look after.

Miss Nelson and her four brothers took turns operating it.

Recently remembered, Miss Nelson looks back on her years at school, she saw the local hotel burned and ran through it and helped her mother spread the alarm and summon help.

Recently the Second World War, when part-time assistants were hard to find, Miss Nelson often operated the switchboard 24 hours a day.

For many years she was the local information service, notified firemen of fires or disasters and dispensing election results.

She said although she enjoyed the work, she would not do it all over again.

"It's not that easy being alone at night with 400 people."

Walk-a-thon Brings $1,500

PICTON — A 9-mile walk-a-thon sponsored by Prince Edward Youth for Mentally Retarded (PEYMR) Saturday raised approximately $1,500.

Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson, one of the organizers of the seventh annual walk for the retarded, said 71 persons participated in this year's hike. A total of 81 started "finishing the route that extended from Picton to Lake on the Mountain Rd., West Lake Rd., Mallory Cross Rd. and Highway 33. The walk-a-thon ended at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

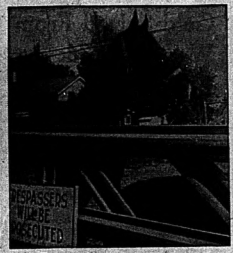
Youngest walking were Jeff Hamilton, 6, and Rob Richardson, 7, sons of Larry Richardson. Both boys completed the whole distance but it was strictly "old hat" to Rob who made the walk for the first time in 1973.

Mr. Richardson also thanked the route which he has lifted in air annual walk-a-thons.

First to complete the course was Terry FEX1 student. Steve Loner and Jim Gibbons who finished the walk in less than two hours. The girls to arrive at the finish line were FEYM students Sandra Sandford and Pauline Thorley. They both completed the walk-a-thon in six hours.

Mr. Richardson observed this year's funds raised through the annual walk-a-thon will be substantially below the amount raised in terry him. He suggested that FEYMR may attempt to earn money through another project in 1975 as the walk-a-thons have continued for seven years.

Money earned by the hikes is used to assist project backed by the Prince Edward Association for the Mentally Retarded. Among these is ARC Industries, a workshop located at Loch Sloy Industrial Park.



Enjoying the View

Weekend Fall Ride Attracts Horsemen

MILFORD — It was "turkey on the trail" Sunday for approximately 30 horsemen celebrating Thanksgiving with a cross-country ride.

Organized by the Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club, the 15-mile trail ride left the Way Stock Farm near Milford Sunday morning. Horse owners from Napanee, Picton and Prince Edward rode to the Macaulay Mountain conservation site where they travelled the recently opened nature trails.

The riders then doubled back, arriving at the Way farms in time for a corn roast and barbecue.

The trail ride is the first this year sponsored by the Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club. The newly organized group of English and western riders presented a series of monthly shows at Picton fairgrounds this summer, attracting entries from throughout the Quinte area.

A trophy night and banquet will be held by the riders Friday, Nov. 8 at Club Cedars. High point winners in several show divisions will receive awards.

Membership in the Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club is open to all interested horsemen in the Quinte area.

Horses Decorate Town's Centre

PICTON — Picton's East Main St. claims a country corner where race horses and saddle horses are stabled year around in a residential section.

Prince Edward County fairgrounds includes two large horse barns rented by the Prince Edward Agricultural Society to town residents owning Standard-breds and saddle animals.

A half-mile track on the property is used for training by several Picton horsemen who race regularly at Quinte Exhibition Park and Frontenac Downs in Kingston.

Owners of saddle horses also enjoy the track facilities and need for feeder rides.

The Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club this summer presented monthly shows at the fairgrounds, drawing many entries from throughout the Quinte area.

An exercise corral has been constructed near the barns and it is not unusual for Main St. residents to see horses frolicking near the street. A high chain link fence prevents the animals from becoming potential traffic victims.

The fair board has observed year around use of the barns and grounds should be beneficial.

The track is graded periodically by the horsemen who drain it and this extra main tenance is beneficial to the property.

By renting the stables the fair board makes it possible for town residents interested in horses or ponies to enjoy their hobby.

Batawa Marks 35th Birthday

BATAWA — Bata footwear and engineering of Canada settled on a 1,200 - acre site here in Sidney Township 35 years ago.

Tom Bata, president of worldwide Bata Industries in his 30s then, led the handful of loyal employees who fled Czechoslovakia ahead of the Nazi takeover to set up the Canadian operation.

Soon afterwards when the Second World War broke out Bata switched 85 per cent of its production to the Allied war effort.

On Saturday, threatening skies and chilly weather kept a more elaborate outside celebration confined mostly to the community centre.

Mr. Bata, in South America on business, was unable to attend.

Dr. C. K. Hert, manager of the plant here for 30 years returned along with a number of other pioneers of the Canadian organization for observance of the anniversary. When he retired two years ago he was vice-president and general manager of Bata Industries with branches in Toronto.

Music and dancing highlighted the entertainment for Saturday's program.

Set up outside the community centre, the Trenton Municipal band under the direction of Ted Snider provided listeners with the usual outstanding performance while inside the building the Eastern Ontario concert orchestra delighted followers with a variation of selections including the classics, semi-classics, xrypy, rock and modern music.

Conductor Stephen Clema, a long-time Bata employee now on the staff at the Hastings County Board of Education, founded the orchestra in Batawa in 1961.

The pace in the afternoon's proceedings quickened with colorful demonstrations of folk dancing by a Czechoslovakian team from the Toronto community.

Visitors showed a great deal of interest in a display of company photographs that depicted important events of the past and the people who made them possible.

Activities of the day were climaxed by a dinner followed by a dance in the evening.

A highlight of the evening was the award of the Dominic Chyra scholarships to Olga Smid, 19, and Rosemarie Houser, 19, Bata employees now enrolled at the University of Toronto. Anthony Dalcar another Bata of Canada pioneer made the presentations.

Art Duncan, retired public relations director for the Bata company, was master of ceremony for the program in the evening.

British Picture Somewhat Brighter

LONDON (AFP) — Latest economic indicators, apart from the widened trade gap announced last Friday, offer a somewhat brighter picture for Prime Minister Harold Wilson's new Labor government.

The wholesale price index, released Monday, showed a slight drop of 0.2 per cent in average prices for raw materials and energy in September.

Although a small one, the drop is noteworthy, for it is the first in nearly two and a half years apart from a one-per-cent reduction recorded in June.

The effect should ease inflationary pressures at the production level.

In August, an increase of 1.25 per cent was recorded. But for the last six months as a whole, the June and September drops have virtually cancelled out all increases.

Price increases for raw materials and energy are considered to be among the basic causes of inflation in Britain.

Another indicator, that of the retail trade, continued a slow upward swing that began in July.

Provisional figures showed that the volume of retail business increased by 0.5 per cent last month compared with the August level.

The upward swing was encouraged by last July's mini-budget which altered for tax inward adjustment of pensions and a cut in the value-added tax, as well as by wage increases.

Additional buying power now has been created by the recent wage settlements which run higher than current price increases.

Taking this into account, the level of domestic demand is roughly in line with targets set by the chancellor of the exchequer, Denis Healey.

Because of the price increases for oil and the trade deficit, Healey considers it desirable to keep demand at the level it attained last year.

The chancellor now is preparing a budget which is to be presented to the House of Commons next month.

Oil Struck In Mexico

MEXICAN CITY (AP) — The head of the Mexican state oil monopoly said Saturday a new oil field in southeastern Mexico may be the richest yet in the country.

The Washington Post reports that preliminary estimates place the potential yield at up to two billion barrels, which would grade oil—double the amount believed to lie under Alaska's North Slope.

The paper says the oil was discovered in the states of Tabasco and Chiapas.

Antonio Dovall Jaime, director of the state oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos, told The Associated Press he did not have exact figures.

"I cannot confirm such a figure now, but I believe the find will be the richest yet in the country. Explorations may reveal that it could be even bigger than that."

Dr. George Scott, head of psychiatric treatment at Millhaven and eight other federal institutions, wrote a report on the psychological effects of solitary confinement.

Dr. Scott says isolation has a serious effect on the mind.

"The longer a person is kept in isolation, the duller his mind becomes," the doctor said in an interview. "His can't think clearly, it is virtually psychological castration."

In his 1968 study, Dr. Scott said that the more a person is deprived of mental and physical activity, the greater his withdrawal into psychotic actions, including self-mutilation.

Prisoners can request isolation or can be ordered into isolation for breaches of discipline.

Millhaven has 70 isolation cells, each approximately eight feet by 10 feet. Prisoners are kept in the cells 23 hours a day, with one hour set aside for exercise.

Six other prisoners at Millhaven claim the isolation cells will prompt other suicides and have asked Mr. Copeland to represent them.

Mr. Copeland says one prisoner, Joe Wydryk, serving a 10-year sentence for bank robbery, has written letters describing a six-month stint in an isolation cell.

"None who leave here are normal," Wydryk said. "If and when I leave here I leave nothing behind.

"They will never count me among the broken men, but I cannot say I am normal either."

Solitary Confinement Violation of Rights

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Copeland, a Toronto lawyer representing six prisoners from Millhaven penitentiary, says he wants a coroner's jury to consider whether segregation of prisoners in solitary confinement is cruel and unusual punishment—contrary to the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Mr. Copeland is seeking permission to present evidence Oct. 30 when an inquest into the Aug. 10 death of Edward Nalon, a Millhaven prisoner, resumes.

Nalon, 41, apparently slashed an artery in his arm and bled to death in an isolation cell in the prison near Kingston, Ont.

Six other prisoners at Millhaven claim the isolation cells will prompt other suicides and have asked Mr. Copeland to represent them.

Gold Seized From Writer's Bank

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgary financial writer has accused federal tax officers of illegally seizing gold worth millions of dollars from a bank where it was being held.

C. V. Myers, author of a widely-read financial news letter, said the gold belonged to United States citizens and was held for them in Canada because American citizens are prohibited from owning gold.

The Canadian Press distributed an account of the report saying the gold was seized from Mr. Myers' home. Mr. Myers said Saturday that tax officers made raids on his home and the office of Inter - Publishing, where he works, but the gold was seized in the bank.

Mr. Myers prepares the energy and investment newsletter for Inter Publishing, a Swiss company. One of the services offered by the company is the private purchase of gold which is stored in Canada.

He said that although the tax officers have technically seized the gold, they have not been able because he has not given them the safety deposit box keys.

Mr. Myers said he offered the keys to Armando Manfredi, chief of special investigation for the department of national revenue, but made the offer conditional on confidentiality regarding the names of those who own the gold.

Mr. Myers said the official told him he could not promise that the names of the owners would not be given to U.S. officials.

Mr. Myers said no Canadian laws were violated by the practice of acquiring and holding gold for Americans.

Two men raided his home, taking virtually all of his personal papers including cheque books, unpaid bills, his wife's diary, letters and bank books, said Mr. Myers.

He said the officers raided his office at the same time as he did in his home. The offices of his lawyers and accountant were also raided.

"There was no warning, no announcement, no question," he said. "The raid came like a bolt out of the blue."

Dog Fight Suspected

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Humane Society (OHS) officials have seized a number of animals from a private kennel near Guelph, partly because they suspected a dog fight was being planned.

Don Hepworth, OHS chief inspector, said the animals were seized in a raid last Friday because they were found to be in a state of neglect.

But Mr. Hepworth said the OHS also suspected the dogs were to be used in a fight during the weekend.

Also seized in the raid by three OHS inspectors and two provincial police officers were a treadmill, a scale, an alarm clock and double collars.

Mr. Hepworth said the items are sometimes used in dog fights or training for dog fights.

No charges have been laid.

Beerfest Dampened By Rain

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Parade officials of the fifth annual Oktoberfest parade Monday blamed rain for the spectator turnout estimated at half last year's crowd.

The officials also blamed television coverage of the parade for keeping the crowds down to an estimated 75,000 to 100,000.

Showers washed the three-mile parade as it moved here from Waterloo. Gusting winds also damaged many of the modern floats.

The rain and a miscalculation in timing sped the parade over its route in a shorter time than allotted on the official schedule.

No charges have been laid at any of the beer halls despite the reporting of several incidents to police.

Now: a new minimum wage in Ontario

Effective October 1st, 1974

Ontario's new minimum wage covers people employed in general industry, construction work, domestic service, ambulance service, funeral service, including students and learners.

If you or your employees fall into these categories, it is important for you to know what the law now requires.

People employed by agencies as domestics, and people working as funeral directors or embalmers must now be paid not less than $2.25 an hour. Learners in General industry must be paid at least $2.15 an hour during their first month of employment and at least $2.25 per hour thereafter. People employed in construction work or as construction site guards are now entitled to at least $2.50 an hour. There is no learner rate for the construction industry. Ambulance drivers, helpers, and first-aid attendants must now receive at least $108.00 per week or, if they work fewer than 48 hours a week, $2.25 an hour. Students under 18 who work 28 hours a week or less, or during school holidays, must receive at least $1.90 per hour.

When employees occupy a room or eat meals supplied by their employer, $9.00 per week for the room and $1.00 for each meal or $21.00 per week for meals or $30.00 a week for room and meals may be included when calculating the minimum wage.

As for overtime pay, until December 31, 1974, it will be 1½ times the regular pay after 48 hours a week. From January 1, 1975 on, the time-and-one-half rate will apply after 44 hours a week. And from January 1, 1975 on, there will be three more holidays with pay—New Year's Day, Victoria Day, and Thanksgiving Day—added to the current statutory holidays: Good Friday, Dominion Day, Labour Day, and Christmas.

New York Injects Some Life Into Grand Central Area

NEW YORK (AP) — The area around railroad stations can be dreary, especially on weekends, and New York is planning to do something about it in the area of Grand Central Terminal.

Tourists in mid-town New York may find their excitement in the streets if a forthcoming experiment proves successful.

The experiment to put some life in the area when the office buildings are closed may rub off on the four hotels built over the railroad station, predicts Brian Corbell, who is settling that aspect of it.

"If the first event, the Portobello Road flea market, is successful, there may be other fairs, flower shows, antique and classic car shows and even some forms of entertainment in the streets," says Corbell, who described the present weekend atmosphere in the streets from 42nd to 47th Street when office buildings are closed as "pretty eerie."

In contrast, the streets of Paris and London are fun places to be at night and weekends, he remarked.

The fair, a takeoff of the famous London flea market, is being sponsored by the city of New York. A couple of hundred antique dealers are expected to accept the free space offered for their stalls.

A number of English dealers as well as some authentic bobbies will be on hand to lend atmosphere in the five-block area and there will be English style snacks—fish and chips and the like.

It all ties into Corbell's assignment as chief executive of Realty Hotels, to take responsibility for redeveloping the four hotels into "economically viable and enjoyable places."

Once will be romantically revived, another will have a lobby that looks like a park and still another will be crowned with special service.

Plans for another are being "thought out."

Getting in a hotel on weekends is a lonely business, Corbell said. You can go sightseeing, but on a weekend you might like to do something different.

In assessing possibilities for refurbishing the hotels, officials are finding that some of their new ideas are really old ones—old drawings have been confirming their opinions as they plan new restaurants, dancing and drink areas.

They are making the usual discoveries in structure—that a handsome ceiling and skylight have been covered with a false ceiling or that partitioning screens some architectural embellishments.

At the Biltmore, where millions of people have met under the famous clock, they are refurbishing the main dining room. Its fine architectural touches, gold leaf and fruit festoons, long dulled, will come to life along with its handsome ceiling and small, intimate railed balcony.

And there are other things being considered. Corbell said, as he figured a trial table arrangement in the Madison Room, where they especially aim for a gracious effect.

"Should we put candles on tables maybe with just the 21 foot-high ceiling illuminated? Should crystal chandeliers be left to supplement table lighting? What kind of chairs would be suitable, comfortable and easy to care for? Should the tablecloth be white, gold, plaid?"

In another hotel, they plan to focus on service, he said. In reply to the inevitable question, he responded that "although it is something you should be able to get in every hotel, it is the most difficult management test in New York."

"Employees live in dense, noisy areas, their transportation is dense and noisy, their environment is all hassle and it leaves an impact on the way they deal with other people," he explained.

They can afford to solve it where the clientele will pay more for extra service—at this hotel, for example, they are providing better employee locker areas, pleasant telephone operator rooms and central relative-the message to get across will be: We care about our employees, we are all in this together.

"In showing them that a guest is important we will stress that guests are important generally even in our homes. If a guest is at your door, you make sure there are no cigarette wrappers on the floor."

Changing Image

Wes Forth, with a precisely knotted tie and dapper moustache, does not fit the popular image of the charter or bush pilot. The Air-Spec Charter pilot says his company is trying to get away from that image, which is why all the company pilots wear suits. (CP Photo)

Farewell Pat

Herb Wiltshire, 79, gives his 18-year-old horse Rocky a pat on the nose prior to one of his last runs pulling a surrey with a fringe on top through Victoria Park in Niagara Falls, Ont. Mr. Wiltshire is retiring at the end of the season and his carriage will be taken off the road, since the Niagara Parks Commission is not transferring or issuing new licences. He has been driving the surrey for the last 14 years. (CP Photo)

Veteran TV Correspondents Author Kissinger Biography

By ED SIMON
The Canadian Press

Other foreign ministers of his time may have controlled as much to international understanding as Henry Kissinger. But none of them is likely to make the best-seller lists on the subject of a full-length biography.

Marvin and Bernard Kalb, CBS correspondents with more than 19 years' experience on the diplomatic beat, have drawn heavily on Kissinger himself as a source for the chronicle of his remarkable career from boyhood as a Jew in Nazi Germany to his triumph as a peacemaker between Israel and Egypt last January.

The book ends on a emphatic note as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat embraces the secretary of state and proclaims: "You are not only my friend; you are also my brother."

Political developments in the United States and abroad have already brought Kissinger down from the heights to some degree in the intervening months. Tension is mounting again in the Middle East and there are revelations of U.S. involvement in the overthrow of Chilean President Salvador Allende.

At least a generation must pass before the man and his policies can be placed in perspective. But the historians who eventually evaluate Kissinger's achievements will be deeply indebted to the Kalbs.

With the co-operation of their subject, they are able to give a detailed account of his protracted negotiations to pull U.S. troops out of Vietnam, the resumption of U.S. relations with China, the ebb and flow of détente with Russia.

The Kalbs' treatment of Kissinger, while basically friendly, is not uncritical. They record that his effort to achieve peace in Vietnam in time to bolster President Nixon's re-election in 1972 foundered when he failed to consult with his own experts and the South Vietnamese government and was trapped by the ambiguous terms of the proposed settlement.

And his lack of communication with the defence department during last year's Israeli-Arab conflict is blamed for a misunderstanding that left the Israelis critically short of U.S. assistance at a time when Russian arms were threatening to tip the balance in favor of the Arab cause.

These are handicaps of conman diplomacy at a time when Nixon, preoccupied by his Watergate problems, was content to leave the country's foreign policy almost entirely in Kissinger's hands.

The other side of the coin was Kissinger's success in dealing man to man with such opposite numbers as Sadat, China's Chou En-lai, Russia's Leonid Brezhnev and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho.

The book brings out the contradictory Kissinger personality, sometimes open, sometimes secretive, devious in playing to varying shades of opinion, vain and self-deprecating, capable of almost overpowering charm, occasional fits of temper and frequent flashes of humor.

"Dr. Kissinger, I want to thank you for saving the world," a man said to him after one of his diplomatic coups.

"You're welcome," Kissinger replied.

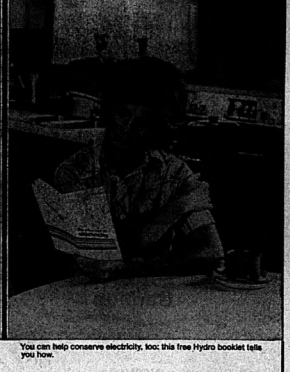
Ontario Hydro's Bernie Campbell discusses energy conservation with Ken Miller, President of Standard Induction Castings Ltd., Windsor.



You can help conserve electricity, too: this free Hydro booklet tells you how.

Foundry or kitchen, we'll help you use less electricity

Bernie Campbell of Ontario Hydro's Western Region is one of a team whose main responsibility is to show our customers how to use less of our product...by using it more efficiently. He works with industrial and commercial users, who consume about 65% of the power we produce.

Everyone who uses electricity, whether it's a lot or a little, can conserve it; and we'd like to help you. Unfortunately we don't have enough Bernie Campbells to go around; but we do have a booklet which suggests many simple ways of checking your use of electricity and other fuels around the home.

Send for a copy of "The Wise Use of Electricity", or ask for one at your local Hydro office.

Saving electricity isn't difficult. And if we each save a little, we'll all save a lot.

Daman Home of Coconut Toddy, Thousands of Active Smugglers

BOMBAY (CP) — The small area of Daman, about 200 miles north of here, is known for its coconut toddy, Indian beach resorts and its seamy bars.

There's the sizzling mare rogue that a glass of fresh coconut toddy attracts to people including members of the diplomatic community in Bombay, who drive to Daman to taste the beer-like drink.

It is said that a fortnight's stay in Daman is never complete without a regular intake of toddy makes a man feel 10 years younger. No wonder that overworked business executives from Bombay go there whenever they can get away from the bustling metropolis.

But little Daman has another face which is not so pleasant. It has become a focal point for international smuggling.

Air Bombay Times recently described it, "Daman now is one of the key links in the chain of international smuggling."

Daman's smugglers become active when the tourists are fast asleep in their hotels and villas. Nearly 60 per cent of the population of 41,000 is said to be connected with the smuggling business in one way or another.

Arab dhows, single-masted sailing vessels, put into shore almost nightly to unload their cargo. They bring all kinds of articles to Daman from Dubai and the creeks in their southern ports. These range from French perfumes to chocolates, Swiss watches, from Danish cheese to Japanese luxury transistors.

One local customs official estimated the worth of a year's smuggled goods at more than $700 million. Some newspapers place it at $500 million.

Once desperately poor, Daman's citizens now are prosperous. Many fishermen's dhows have modern gadgets like tape-recorders, electric toasters and washing machines. Some have TV sets though the nearest TV station is in Bombay, 200 miles away, and the reception is poor.

A senior Daman police official says there are fishermen who have become fabulously rich. Some spend their holidays in Europe and the United States.

"You may not believe it," the policeman said. "Ten years ago these very men were struggling to earn $5 a day in the local fish market."

The international smugglers operating from Daman need the fishermen's expertise to bring in the smuggled goods in from about 20 miles out at sea (where the Arab ships halt) into the creeks in their small country boats.

On their return trip to the Persian Gulf sheikhdoms the Arab ships help to smuggle out Indian rice, cooking oil and spices. Indian silver is also much in demand in the Middle East.

Of late, police patrolling of the Daman coast has been stepped up and some 35 smugglers have been arrested.

Give it ten minutes and it'll give you ten years.

If the new colour TV you choose is one of our Toshiba Briterons, you're going to be together for a long, long time. Toshibas have a way of lasting ten years, or more. Since that's a long time for a colour TV to keep you happy, before you buy, give it ten minutes, at least. Comparing. Turn on the other makes. Then turn on ours. Notice how 25,000 volts of picture power coming through a black matrix colour picture tube, and backed up by a 100% solid state chassis, delivers distinct, sharper, brighter colour. In other words, see how "Briteron" got its name.

Some of the other makes will have colour selection knobs and tint adjustments. Turn them. Adjust them. Then, please, press our single, automatic button that adjusts both colour and tint at the touch of a finger.

Measure their screens against the dollars they ask. Then see what you get for your money with Toshiba. 18" and 20" screens of colour viewing, together with complete portability. Your Toshiba Briteron will live with you, you don't have to live around it.

Check their outward appearance. Then take note of our handsome walnut and ebony finish and streamlined brushed-chrome facia. Ask yourself which you'd rather live with for 10 years. And see if you don't also get the feeling that the Toshiba Briteron is solid, and well built.

One thing you won't be able to compare in the store without asking, so we'll tell you here, is our guarantee of complete reliability in the form of a one year in-home warranty. At no cost to you.

Time's up. Add up all your comparisons now. We think our Toshiba Briteron colour TV's are all you're looking for and more. We build them to keep you happy for a long, long time.

Selma Bochnek, who's a very busy lady, likes this chicken dish for the family and for guests because it's quick to put together and cooks itself in the oven. Mrs. Bochnek, who with husband Sy and children Faith and Jay, live on Parkdale Drive, is office manager at Bell and Howell and a hard-working member of the Belleville General Hospital Auxiliary. She's also a board member of the Central Volunteer Bureau, and a member of Sons of Jacob Synagogue Ladies' Auxiliary and the Belleville Chapter of Hadassah — WIZO.

Easy Chicken Supreme four chicken breasts four chicken legs

one large spanish onion one large green pepper three stalks celery
one can sliced mushrooms or ½lb. fresh mushrooms one 19 oz. can cream of mushroom soup one 10 oz. can cream of celery soup salt sage
paprika

Season chicken pieces with salt, pepper and sage and place in a casserole dish. Slice onion, green pepper, celery, mushrooms and spread over chicken. Pour cream of mushroom soup and cream of celery soup, both undiluted, over chicken and vegetables. Sprinkle with paprika. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 1½ hours. Serve with rice.

Ross Irwin with Buggy

Back to Horse and Buggy Days

Ross Irwin came to Belleville in 1859 to open a collision business, leaving behind his family's Brant County home and business.

Sunday Mr. Irwin and wife Helen took a journey back through time to the old home and trade: the Mt. Vernon Carriage Works.

In a new display at the Hastings County Museum, carriagemaking and memorabilia from the carriage-making company began by his grandfather, Matthew, are on view.

Included in the group is the collection of nearly 100 buggy plates Mr. Irwin began acquiring about 50 years ago. A few of the plates are from some of the 12 carriage manufacturers and repair shops that existed in Belleville at one time.

A buggy from the Ameliasburgh Museum is also on display.

Clothing Prices May Go Down

TORONTO (CP) — Textile industry sources predicted Thursday that wool and cotton clothing could cost 10 to 15 per cent less next spring because of a decline in commodity prices in the last few months.

"We're already seeing price reductions of eight to nine per cent on many wool and cotton items in our spring catalogue," said Ken Logue, assistant to the vice president, merchandising at Simpsons-Sears Ltd.

He said an expansion in world supplies after a market tightening in 1972 and 1973—which increased clothing prices—is the major reason for the decline in commodity prices.

Since the start of this year, wool has dropped to $1.65 a pound from about $3.30 and cotton is at nearly a pound from 94 cents on the international market, industry spokesmen said.

The reduction means a $175 tailored suit could drop to $150 this spring and a pair of denim jeans could go to $12.75 from $15.95.

Prices will not decrease this fall because commodity prices take 12 to 18 months to work through the system, spokesmen said.

Fishy Vintage

LONDON (CP) — Cookery expert Mackenzie Hastings is launching a new fish cookbook, recommended that housewives "invest" in dustbins and lay them down like vintage port, filling the cans and storing them every two months. In two years, he claims, the olive oil will have preserved the fish, dissolving the bones, and producing a rare delicacy. The sardine is the only fish that improves with age," he says.

Social Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Matthews

Matthews — Purcell

Oshawa College Park Seventh Day Adventist Church was the scene of the September 21 wedding of Penny Kathleen Purcell and Robert Orville Matthews.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Purcell, Bloomington Illinois; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O.S. Matthews, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a white satin gown with empire sleeves. Her cathedral length veil was trimmed with lace and she carried a nosegay of daisies, roses and carnations.

She was attended by maid of honor Beverly Hanks who wore blue chiffon over taffeta and carried blue daisies.

Vicbelle Matthews, the groom's sister, wore a similar gown in yellow; Gwen Brownfield attended in green.

They reside in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. David Allan Rigby

Rigby — Kelly

Standard Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent wedding of Linda Diane Kelly and David Allan Rigby.

Linda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kelly; David is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Rigby Inverary.

The groom's father Rev. Rigby, and Rev. G.E. Armstrong performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an organza gown in the empire style with high neck and detachable train. A jewelled tiara caught her four tier illusion veil and she carried pink and yellow roses.

The bride's sister, Carolyn Kelly, was maid of honor in a blue brocade gown accented by a white parasol with blue roses. She wore blue roses in her hair.

Janet Green, Barrie, and Merry Lyn Brown also attended in gowns like the maid of honor.

Stephanie Green was flower girl and Paul Kelly, the bride's brother, was ring-bearer.

Peter Rigby, Boston, the groom's brother was best man assisted by Ron Green, Timothy Rigby and Kevin Dockrill.

The bride and groom were piped to their reception at St. Andrew's Parish Hall. The couple left on a wedding trip to Boston after the reception.

At the reception, an heirloom vase topped her wedding cake. The vase was on her mother's, grandmother's and great grandmother's cake.

The couple resides in Brockville.

QUINTE W.I.

The history of agriculture in Canada was the subject of a talk by Mary Davies, convener for the October meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute.

She told the women that agriculture was introduced to the country 400 years ago by Jacques Cartier who taught native peoples to grow peas and beans. Later livestock was introduced at Sable Island and later moved to the coast of Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Davies said that in early years a settler could only clear 1½ acres of land a year.

Miss Welsh showed the women slides of old log buildings and antique farm machinery, oxen and farming methods throughout the history of Canada.

The women will hold a dessert euchre and bake sale October 18.

LADIES' CLUB MEETS

Eileen Darling, Helen Spiller and Mabel Sargent convened the October meeting of the Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club held last week at the recreation centre.

Hymns and reading appropriate to Thanksgiving were on the program. Readings were made by Vera Morris, Helen Spiller and Flossie Henderson and Lorna Rorabeck.

A film completed the day's program.

SENIORS' TRIP

Stirling senior citizens travelled to Bancroft's community centre recently where they were welcomed by Clarke Rollins, MPP, who entertained more than 900 seniors from the riding.

A program including the Singing Post Family was followed by a two-hour color tour of North Hastings.

Cigarette Tax

LONDON (CP) — Doctors belonging to the anti-smoking pressure group called ASH—Action on Smoking—are submitting a plan to the government suggesting a "health tax" of about 12 cents should be levied on a pack of cigarettes. The money would go to treat ailments induced by tobacco and to pay dependents of cancer victims, say the doctors.

Ann Landers

Hunters: Keep Your Meat

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this open letter to My Neighbors:

Hi there: Hunting season is here and I know all you "sports" are polishing up your favorite 30-30, 375 Weatherby or British 999 double-barrel shotgun gun and heading for the hills of Pennsylvania, the western slopes of Colorado or Upper Michigan to play that mighty deer, elk, moose—or maybe your best friend, by mistake.

For many years you've been bringing in your half ration from being dragged three miles behind your trail bike, or shot over a horse, or hung up in a camp for three days while your buddies got their game.

You then ground it up with hamburger or pork and mixed in some sage and pepper to get rid of the gidaawful taste.

Please, friends, this year take a camera along and snap a picture of proof of "finality. Hands appearances sake, but were tied so you could say you "got" one.

Dear Ann Landers: Doug doesn't smell the most either. Thanks a bunch.

Dear You: Ann Landers: A young "widow" just left my office in tears. Her "husband" had been killed at work only a few days before. But that was only part of her agony. She and her "husband" were not married. They had "eloped" to another state. Social Security benefits and she may also have to explain to her family why she is not eligible for the additional income.

All of this could have been avoided if that woman and her sweetheart had known they could have been married secretly at any time after his divorce was final. All that is required is a valid ceremony before a judge or a justice of the peace. Many jurisdictions do not publish licenses, and if they do, a lawyer's request that no publicity be given the marriage would certainly be honored.

Will you please inform your readers? It could save a lot of anguish for others who are in similar situations. — Attorney Who Wishes To Be Anonymous.

Dear Attorney: Your letter could be very helpful to many of my readers. Thank you for taking the time out of your busy day to write it.

Dear Ann Landers: At two o'clock this afternoon, my hair was in curlers. I had on an old pair of slacks and was in the middle of tearing apart the closets. The doorbell rang and there stood our minister. I nearly fainted.

I apologized for the way I looked—the mess and all. He said, "It doesn't matter. I just came to pay a little visit since I was in the neighborhood. I haven't seen you since your brother's funeral." That was three months ago.

I made a pot of coffee and tried to be hospitable, but I was a nervous wreck. He stayed an hour. The whole time I felt like crawling under the carpet.

I have always thought it impolite to drop in on friends unexpectedly. Or is a clergyman a privileged character — Undecided.

Dear Undecided: Your minister came when it was convenient for him, but not for you. Guests are not privileged characters, regardless of who they are.

Refrigerators:

Wise Questions For Buyers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada has outlined at least a dozen questions that the homebuilder should ask himself when selecting out to buy a new refrigerator.

The questions spring from a series of tests the association made on nine popular no-frost, two-door models.

The association loaded the test models to capacity and placed them in an environmentally controlled room.

One of the things the testers noted was that the capacity of the fridge, as stated by the manufacturer, does not take into account the space wasted by controls, shelves and crispers.

They also found that frost-free units eliminated only the tiresome job of defrosting, use about twice as much energy as the comparable manual defrost varieties.

Another finding was that half-width adjustable shelves offer more variety for storing large and bulky items than those with full adjustable shelves.

The association urges buyers to check whether the new fridge will be big enough for the family—will it fit into the kitchen space available.

Buyers are also urged to check whether the crisper is big enough for a stalk of celery or deep enough for a head of lettuce.

Other items included whether adjustable shelves are easy to move or does the housewive have to fight with them. Another matter which often bothers the householder is whether the light bulb is protected and easy to replace.

The test results also brought up the question of sharp edges around shelf ends, compartment doors and shelf trim; the location of controls—whether they are easy to reach and the ease of evaporator is loaded.

The association notes that unlike ranges, refrigerators cannot be set at specific temperatures—temperatures within will vary depending on how full the unit is and how many times the door is opened.

They found that seven of the nine models tested had separate controls for the freezer and the mainspace—an arrangement which provides better distribution of cold air.

The association said temperatures in a meat-keeper should range between 30 and 35 degrees. Two manufacturers advocated a seven-day meat-keeper but the association notes that Agriculture Canada considers only cured meats can safely be stored unfrozen for seven days.

Successful Living

Meditation Found Medically Useful

By DORIS CLARK

My little girl, three years old, adopted by a fine dental work done. Yet she says she won't go. She's playing her mother her afraid.

What do you suggest?— Dentist Dilemma.

She is just lucky to be born in the era when and techniques have taken most of the pain out of dental work; now the job is to help her and dads. And teachers too, where the child is attending nursery school or elementary school.

Inquire around until you find a dentist recommended for his ability to instill confidence in the children he treats; which is not easy. Your own selling job should make a greater impression than a playmate's, especially if you stress your girl's need for good teeth as she grows up.

Then when you do get her to an appointment, show quiet control and confidence as you her completely in your dentist's hands. He nurse is bound to be with him.

The record of these wonder working, back-breaking professional workers in bringing mostly health to their young charges, is enviable.

DEAR DORIS:

I am a disabled pensioner. Have I the right to put money in the bank for cases of emergency?

A few years ago I had to go to hospital by ambulance, and also, I want to provide for my funeral expenses and memorial; and for religious ceremonies.

My parents are old. — Deeply Concerned.

DEAR DEEPLY:

The fact that you are a disabled pensioner does not divest you of your right to put money in the bank. If you can get it there-even by mail, that's your privilege.

Remember though, that if you were temporarily incapacitated, someone else (your husband or person, preferably could do your banking for you if you were to give him power of attorney. Your bank will help you arrange this.

Also, you can make funeral arrangements ahead of time; and you can let someone know all about it so things are not left in a mess.

If you would like a copy of the A.E.C.Estate Guide, which has places to fill in about your financial affairs, bank accounts, other belongings, write to me for one, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. This helpful leaflet does not replace a will, but it does tell some otherwise careless but responsible person where to look for what, at a time when you can no longer speak for yourself.

What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris care of this newspaper is the first step towards solving your problem.

Relaxation brought on by meditation appears to reduce the use of drugs, alcohol and cigarettes, says Dr. Herbert Benson of the Harvard Medical School. A study of 1,363 subjects who meditate regularly showed a significant drop in drug usages after they started meditation.

Benson teaches people to meditate by having them sit quietly, close their eyes, relax and breathe through the nose. On each expiration he has them say the number "one" and keep repeating that, disregarding all other thoughts and always coming back to the "one".

Within three to four minutes, physiological changes occur. The rate of breathing, sympathetic nervous activity, metabolism, blood pressure and heart rate all go down.

He notes that meditation has been used successfully by patients with certain types of high blood pressure and is a safe, economical and easy technique. "Which I hope will find a place in prevention and therapeutic medicine." — From The Journal, Addiction Research

Provincial Championship for SACO Peewee Team

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

SAULT STE. MARIE — If Belleville SACO Peewee rookies get a very successful season in Ontario Amateur Softball taking the Association Peewee A title here, Saturday.

Belleville downed champion Northern Ontario opponents in the best-of-three final series by scores of 18-4 and 12-1.

There was some question as to how the title would go after the first inning of the game but when SACO got rolling nothing could stop them.

Belleville fell behind 2-0 following the first inning of the opening game. But it didn't take long for the boys to get back on track. They came out slugging in the second and pushed across five runs before being retired. They added two runs in the top half of the third and gave one more up to the South in the bottom half to make it 7-4 and wound the score up at 10-4.

At that point Belleville's pitching ace, Cathy Rossi, went defensive shell. Sault Ste. Marie wasn't going to get to her this through that shell and Belleville didn't need to.

Rossi is a big, powerful team effort all the way," said Belleville coach, Herb Coltman. "The boys always have the idea that they're going to win and that's just what they do. Once they get started there's no stopping them."

SACO banged out seven hits in the second inning to account for their eight-run surge. They had two hits in the first inning and added three more hits in the third to count their final two runs.

Clarence Broekema, Judy Rossi and Bob Hedge were tops at the plate. Broekema had two singles and a double, drove in two runs and scored a pair. Rossi had two singles, picked up one RBI, and crossed home plate twice. Hedge, the closers for Peter, came through with a clutch double and single to drive in four runs and score one himself.

Tuesday, Tony Miller, Tim Soule and Ron Begley each singled to add to Belleville's offensive output.

Top batter for Sault Ste. Marie was Tony Bottero with a single, double, a triple and a single.

Tim Soule and Rossi, Lalo were the only hurlers of the afternoon for the teams.

Soule picked up both wins for Belleville while Lalo was the loser both times.

The local pitcher fired seven strikeouts in each game, and only walked two in each game. He gave up eight hits the first time around, but in the final game only allowed five hits.

For Lalo the results were a little different. He gave up 12 hits in the opening contest and was touched for 14 in the second game. He struck out three singles each to lead SACO at bat. Soule scored a pair — four in the first game and two in the next.

The Sault hurler displayed some fine control as he issued only two walks in the first game and three in the second.

Though defence was the outstanding feature of the Belleville team throughout the tournament, their offensive efforts could hardly be overlooked.

Pitcher Tim Soule, and catcher Dave Gee, had more in common than just being batterymates. They both pounded out three singles each to lead SACO at bat. Soule scored a pair — four in the first game and two in the next.

Broekema picked up a pair of RBIs, scored a run and Belleville SACO Peewees captured the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Peewee A title on Saturday downing Sault Ste. Marie 10-4 and 11-1 in the first two games of the best-of-three final series. Members of the provincial championship team are (from left to right, back row) Herb Coltman, coach, Clarence Broekema, David Gee, Tim Soule, Marg Brooks, manager, Bob Hedge, Allan Brooks, assistant coach, Ken Brooks, (front row, from left to right) front row) Paul Soule, Darrell Coltman, Andy Rossi, captain, Ron Begley, alternate captain, John Henry, and Tony Miller.

Team Effort Paid Off Says Coach

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

SAULT STE. MARIE — It had never been done before, but Belleville SACO Peewees hit Sault Ste. Marie on the weekend the outcome was inevitable.

SACO won the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Provincial Peewee A title Saturday at Bellevue Saturday beating the home team 10-4 and 11-1.

The accomplishment marked the first time in the history of this city that a group of boys had ever won provincial title.

In two consecutive age groups, Sault Ste. Marie, in 1972, they took the Ontario title at the Mead Johnson Esquire, Nov. 7th years later, the same group of boys are the Ontario Peewee Champions.

For coach Herb Coltman, it was his first provincial championship in just three years. He guided the same group of boys to the same title in 1972.

"They're a great ball team," said coach Colbert. "They are solid offensively and they're rounded defensively. But what really makes them a first rate team is that they are just a great bunch of boys."

The coach's description of the SACO club summarized it all right.

The locals simply went on the field and smothered their Sault opponents. It wasn't that the Sault Ste. Marie side is bad or anything, as a matter of fact, they were a good team. It was simply that Belleville was too tenacious.

"You can't go wrong with this club," said Coltman. "They can do everything."

SACO did it all. Offensively, their bats were booming. They hit everything the Sault pitchers threw. They hit in key situations and they hit in the clutch. When the top of the order wasn't hitting, the bottom of the order was. It was a perfect offensive combination.

What astounded many of the fans and really knocked the wind out of the Sault side was this defensive effort the local club came up with.

"I thought we had a pretty good ball club," said Sault Ste. Marie coverner, John Mercuri, "but these kids (SACO) play better together than any other team we've seen."

Andy Rossi, team captain, led SACO in the championship, with a number of clutch hits. He played from his position at shortstop. Rossi made several superb plays including pulling down a line shot that was labelled for deep centre field.

Rossi wasn't alone in backing up his pitching staff. Tim Soule, John Henry and Tony Miller had control of the right hand side of the infield while alternating at second base. Ron Begley drew raves for his outstanding work behind the catcher at third base.

Soule finds most of his pitches count, walking only four batters in the two games. He didn't strikeout many overpower batters just "outthink them" said coach Coltman.

Soule's batterymates, Bob Hedge and Dave Gee, weren't long in giving their pitcher a game plan against the Sault squad and Soule pitched them out they couldn't steal against the strong arms of the two catchers. Sault Ste. Marie didn't have a single stolen base in either of the contests.

"Clarence Broekema, SACO's first baseman, was the player that his own club considered the most valuable. He hit, he ran the bases superbly, he beat out bunts and he balanced out the solid, defensive infield.

Broekema, in his first season of all-star softball, "is just an all round athlete" says coach Colbert. The rest of his teammates considered him such a valuable addition that they presented him with the game ball from the championship game.

Sault Ste. Marie did manage to get the bats for a few hits. When they were out of reach of the infielders though, the outfielders were right there to cut the ball off.

"It was just a good team effort," said assistant coach, Ken Brooks, "but it's not really any different than we've played all season.

Assistant coach Brooks, "this is what the season all came down to and the boys were at peak performance for this series."

Don Turner made the catch of the afternoon in the outfield running from left field all the way into right centre to grab a fly ball between Turner, Allan Brooks, Darrell Coltman and Paul Soule, the Sault batters found it almost impossible to drop in anything for a hit in the SACO outfield.

Champs' Record On the Season

Even though the SACO Peewees didn't come up with as an increased number of wins as one in '73 when they were the Mead Johnson Squirts, the results did do some good.

In '73 they had 50 wins, one tie and only four losses. This year they had 40 wins, 14 losses and one tie in 55 games.

"These kids really matured as a team," explains this year's said SACO coach, Herb Coltman. "They played some tough competition and gained a very professional attitude."

Twice in the playoffs Belleville was down one game in a best of three series and came back to win. In the semi-finals against Oshawa they won in two consecutive games — 9-8 and 12-5.

After falling behind one game in the Ontario quarter-finals against Cedar Hill, Toronto, they came back with two straight victories to take the series — 9-3 and 10-2 respectively.

When the Ontario semi-finals rolled around coach Coltman knew that he would need a second best team in Ontario who was best out Grantham in this series. Belleville fell behind 1-0 in the series, but once again rebounded to take the final two games of the series 4-3 and 7-2.

Then in the provincial final the club had to face Sault Ste. Marie 10-4 and 11-1 to take the Ontario Amateur Softball Association's Peewee A title.

Along with the provincial championship, there were tournament championships as well.

SACO won the Richmond Hill, Woodstock and North York tourneys and they came in second in the Belleville and Grantham tournaments.

Juniors Lose to Chargers

Senior Saints Rolling

Quinte Senior Saints took a 47-0 decision over the Centennial Chargers Friday in what may be the largest Bay of Quinte high school football game of the season.

The game got under way at the usual time, 4 p.m., but did not finish until 6:30. The third quarter was the "long one" according to Quinte coach Mick Locke. That quarter took one hour and 15 minutes to complete.

Despite repeated protests by the coach to the officials nothing was done to set the time straight.

Yardmen Move In Front

Yardmen took over first place in the Gas House Hockey League, Monday night with a 4-3 win over Belleville Generals. It was the second win in as many starts for Yardmen.

Ron Pisseris and Rollie Lumber also registered their beaten, posting wins to go with no losing slate.

Rollie topped Chuckwagon Foods 3-1 while Jim's blanked Bell 4-0.

Dick Fubert, Pat Mullins, Terry Thomson and Doug Thompson shot the goals for Yardmen. Scoring for Generals were Gary Goyer, Roger Bryant and Jack Elliott.

A two-goal effort by Don Berry paced Rollins to its win. Brian Fenton and Metro Junior B action.

"We had a disastrous second period," said manager Jim Matthews. "The guys just had no legs. Coach Clapp made first single. Wayne Calberry picked up two goals.

Chuck Durocher was tops for the Pisseris with two goals and two assists.

The Cats next game is Friday at 8 p.m. in the Belleville Memorial Arena against Whitby.

Spartacus Wins Cup

TRENTON — A sixth place team during the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association regular season, Spartacus showed signs as the schedule progressed that it is the team to be a strong contender.

Sunday at Centennial Park here, the team put it all together. And the timing was perfect. A 1-0 defeat of Whitby Insurance gave Spartacus the Trenton Challenge Cup.

The all-Trenton final was well played.

Spartacus got the only goal it needed midway through the first half. Dave Perkunas put it past Whitby goalkeeper Terry Hern's hand and into the net.

With halfbacks Roger Moonlaney and Zoltan Csaszar anchoring a solid Spartacus defence, Whitby's, a strong second place finisher in the regular season, did not penetrate with any degree of consistency.

When Whitby shooters did get by scoring opportunities, Spartacus goalie Carl Ekenstein was equal to the task.

The two teams have hook up here, Sunday, in the Belleville Charity Cup final with kickoff set for 2 p.m.

Both teams suffered several injuries through the course of the game.

The most serious one was the play on which Quinte lost the services of Tony Meagher, who suffered a fractured arm on a punt return attempt.

Quinte held a commanding 25-0 first half lead on the strength of two touchdowns each by John Mathews and Scott Bowes.

Al Rutherford, Quinte's outstanding field goals kicker had another good day. His best kick came from 39 yards out.

Brian Turner was the second half standout as he picked up 145 yards on the ground and scored two touchdowns.

Quinte again had good blocking up front and a strong defensive unit as well.

The fourth quarter was played straight time due to the impending darkness.

Centennial Juniors fared much better as they defeated Quinte by an 18-0 score.

Paul Hinkin led the Charger attack, picking up a pair of touchdowns.

The Chargers led 6-0 of the end of the first half with the lone TD coming from Several penalties hurt the Quinte team in the second half, which beaten, posting wins to go with no losing slate.

Terry Thompson scored a touchdown in the third quarter and Hinkin picked up his second in the final quarter.

Oshawa Bantams Take Title

SAULT STE. MARIE — Belleville SACO peewees weren't the only team to win the Ontario Amateur Softball Association A title here on Saturday.

The Oshawa Shamrocks defeated the Sault representative 13-0 and 13-5 to become the Bantam A Champion.

Jeff Boyce was the winning pitcher in both games.

Bobcats Sag, Panthers Win

PICKERING (Special) — Belleville Bobcats had their scoreless streak snapped at four games Sunday when they dropped a 5-3 decision to Pickering Panthers in Ontario Junior B action.

"We had a disastrous second period," said manager Jim Matthews. "The guys just had no legs. Coach Clapp made first single. Wayne Calberry picked up two goals.

Chuck Durocher was tops for the Pisseris with two goals and two assists.

The Cats next game is Friday at 8 p.m. in the Belleville Memorial Arena against Whitby.

five goals to jump into an 8-4 lead.

In the third period the two clubs traded goals and the score ended 9-5.

Belleville Bobcats earned second star status scoring two goals and one assist. Goalie Mike Watt had a goal and an assist and Grant Keegan and Mike Clapp each fired single. Wayne Calberry picked up two assists.

Chuck Durocher was tops for the Pisseris with two goals and two assists.

The Cats next game is Friday at 8 p.m. in the Belleville Memorial Arena against Whitby.

Combines Win 3-2

In Belleville Broomball League action, Friday with only 30 seconds remaining in regulation time, Tom Nemmaniker gave the Combines a 3-2 win over the Golden Mile team.

With the win, moves the Combines into first place in the league standings. They are undefeated in their first two games.

Nemmaniker opened the scoring in the first half with Dave Perkins picking up second goal of the game setting the stage for Wannamaker's winning goal.

John Paul and Kevin Kirby tallied for the Golden Mile team.

Northern Electric handed Art's Esso their second loss of the season, winning 4-3.

Bill Bain scored Northern Electric into a second place tie with Golden Mile.

This game was also decided in the final minute of play as Ken McFarland broke a 3-3 tie.

McFarland opened the scoring and John Brown and Tom Lapeneta added the other two goals.

Jim Parks led the way for the losers, picking up all three of the Art's Esso goals.

Lions In Split

Belleville's Lions Midget Minors split a pair of exhibition games on the weekend.

On Saturday they defeated Trenton Midgets 13-3 and on Sunday they lost to Brockville 3-2.

The Lions open their regular season this week.

Sinden Fined

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League has fined Harry Sinden, managing director of Boston Bruins, $1,000 for making remarks about the integrity of referee Art Skov following a May 19 game between the Bruins and Philadelphia Flyers.

The NHL said in a news release Saturday that Sinden was quoted in several newspapers as saying that "he (Skov) told us in 1972 he'd get us and one day he did. He picked a ball of a time to call a penalty."

Sinden was scheduled to a minor penalty imposed by Skov at 19:59 of Sudden Death Overtime at the end of the game.

League President Clarence Campbell said in the release that an inquiry into the incident "disclosed that the statement of any kind was submitted that Skov ever made the threat and a part of which was denied by him" as well as my lengthy consultation with referee Skov, I am satisfied that he did not do so."

Old Team-mates

Halfback Ted Bell and guard Bob Samuelson of Michigan State were All-America team team-mates on the Carolina Cougars eleven in Youngstown, Ohio.

BOXING BRASS NAMED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Verne Pinkham, U.S. Olympic boxing coach at the University of Wisconsin, and Emmett Ashford, umpire and boxing coach of the United States boxing team for the 1975 Pan American Games in Sao Paulo, Brazil, Jesse Valdez of Houston, broke, specialist in the 1976 Olympics and 1967 Pan-Am games, was named assistant coach and Ken Gallop of Albuquerque, N.M., executive director of the Golden Gloves Association, was named manager.

WHA Will Keep Centre Red Line

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The World Hockey Association opens its third regular season tonight with a number of new faces but no new rules.

The league approved Monday that one experimental rule eliminating the centre red line had been rejected.

"We played a few exhibition games minus the red line, and the measure failed to gain approval," said Ted Polis, director of hockey operations.

Threefold 'cut' the centre line would have permitted passes from the defensive zone to the opposition's blue line.

Even without that innovation, there should be a little more offensive excitement tonight with former National Hockey League left wingers Paul Henderson and Frank Mahovlich in the Toronto Toros lineup.

The Toros are at home to New England Whalers while Winnipeg Jets visit Vancouver Blazers.

Other new Toros include centres Vaclav Nedomansky and Richard Farda, recent arrivals from Czechoslovakia.

Vancouver, meanwhile, will have Pat Price and Ron Chipperfield, two high-priced junior draft choices this year.

In one pre-season game Monday night, Chicago beat Minnesota Saints 4-3 as the Cougars wound up their exhibition schedule with four wins against three losses.

The exhibition schedule ends tonight with Michigan playing Cleveland Crusaders at Kent, Ohio, and Houston Aeros visiting Edmonton Oilers.

After weekend games, pre-season records for the Canadian Division were: Vancouver 4-5-0, Toronto 3-3-0, Quebec 3-3-0, Edmonton 1-3-0 and Winnipeg 0-5-1.

The Eastern Division had New England at 4-3-0, Cleveland 3-2-0, Chicago 4-3-0, and Indianapolis 2-3-2.

In the Western Division, Phoenix was 5-2-0, Houston 4-2-0, San Diego 3-1-0, Minnesota 3-1 and Michigan 2-4-0.

GOES UNDER KNIFE

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Running back Ken Willard of St. Louis Cardinals will undergo surgery on his knee today to correct an injury received two weeks ago in a National Football League game against San Francisco 49ers. The Cards expect Willard to be back in action before the season ends.

Canucks Turn To Trade Mart

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Although Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins appear the class in this third and fourth divisions of the National Hockey League, the teams are not there because of a relegation system employed in Old Country soccer.

But unless both teams spruce up quickly, they may continue to occupy their lowly stations in the standings.

The Bruins are idle tonight, so have no opportunity to climb out of last place in Division 4, but the Canadiens are at New York against the Islanders and a victory would move them into a tie with Detroit Red Wings and Pittsburgh Penguins for second place in Division 3.

The Canadiens, like the Bruins, are looking for their first win of the season. They have two ties, one against the Islanders.

In other action tonight, Los Angeles Kings, leaders of Division 5, visit Washington Capitals, a NHL expansion team, while Vancouver Canucks, buoyed by player trades Monday, are guests of St. Louis Blues.

Wilson but with one in the after three days, the Canucks completed transactions with Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Sabres.

Vancouver, never in the post-season series since joining the NHL in 1970, gave defencemen Jim Dorey, Guy Gouvremont and right winger Brian McSheffrey to the Sabres for centre Gerry Meehan and defenceman Mike Robitaille.

The Blues won Saturday's game 5-3, but coach Phil Maloney hopes to have all four players in the lineup for tonight's rematch.

Meehan, 28, was in his fifth season with the Sabres and had 96 goals and 113 assists. Before joining Buffalo, the Toronto native played 12 games for Philadelphia Flyers and 25 for the Leafs in the 1968-69 season.

Buffalo obtained Robitaille in 1971 along with Don Luce in a trade with Detroit Red Wings for goalie Joe Daley. Robitaille also played for New York Rangers.

Gouvremont, 27, used mainly as a penalty killer, scored nine goals and had 21 assists for Toronto last season.

Grimsby, 26, played for the Leafs in 1972-73, but last season was with Toronto's Tulsa farm club in the Central League.

Gouvremont, a star with Montreal Junior Canadiens, was the Canucks' first selection in the 1971 amateur draft. He scored 13 goals and earned 36 assists in his first season with Vancouver.

Dunn, 26, starred with the University of Saskatchewan Huskies in the Western Intercollegiate Hockey League. In 1970-71, he was selected as top defenceman in the Western Hockey League, and last season netted 11 goals and 32 assists in 68 games, playing mostly on left wing.

The Canucks are in third place in Division 2, while the Blues lead that section with one win and a tie.

The Capitals, 0-2, have a difficult task searching for their first point, because Bob Pulford's Kings look tough after defeating Iwo and tying one in three games.

In Sunday's games, Philadelphia Flyers edged newcomers Kansas City Scouts 3-2, Atlanta Flames defeated Chicago Black Hawks 4-3, the Red Wings trimmed California Seals 7-2, the Kings humbled Buffalo Sabres 4-1, and Toronto Maple Leafs tied Boston Bruins 3-3.

Saturday, Philadelphia beat Buffalo 5-1, Toronto slammed New York Rangers 7-1, the Islanders toppled Kansas City 5-2, Los Angeles and Montreal tied 4-4, Minnesota North Stars blanked the Capitals 6-0, the Penguins clipped the Wings 7-2 and the Blues beat the Canucks 5-4.

WHITES, BLACKS MIX

JOHANNESBURG (AFP) — For the first time next season white and black soccer players will be able to play against one another at club level, and even "multiracial" soccer leagues will be created, president of the Football Association of South Africa, Dave Marais announced Monday. His statement came shortly after Dr. Peli Koornhof, sport and recreation minister, made announcement in Parliament of the formation of a "multiracial" champion of champions soccer league.

Whitby Wins 5-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Whitby McDonalds picked up their second straight home win, defeating Brantford Foresters 5-3 Sunday in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action.

In the only other OHA Sr. A game this weekend, Orillia Terriers won a 6-2 victory over Cambridge Hornets Saturday.

Wayne Weller led Whitby with two goals with singles by Doug Yale, Bob Munro and Peter Vipond.

Brantford's three goals—all in the final period—came from Al Osborne, Jim Cochrane and John McMillan.

Stan Worrall blocked 32 shots in the Terriers' goal and Bruce Durno turned away 25 drives in the Whitby net.

Brantford was assessed 12 of 17 penalties before 1,200 spectators at Whitby.

In the game at Cambridge, one fans watched as Bob Kane and Dave McCullagh got Orillia to the lead with two goals each with Jim MacPherson and Dan Lotes scoring the other Orillia goals.

Derby's Gent Still Unbeaten

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Derby's Gent, unbeaten in Canada, preserved his record Saturday night by taking the $6,500 one-mile Sprinters Final at Barrie Raceway in 2:02 3-5.

The three-year-old gelding has won 19 of 19 lifetime races, being only in an invitational race Sept. 5 at Northfield, Ohio. He is owned by James and William Cadman of Penfield, Ont.

Ye Rye Roanie, driven by Joe Hix, of Cobourg, Ont., finished second in the Belvedere final and combined with Derby's for a skimpy exactor of $3.70.

Dark Looks for A's To Sting the Ball

OAKLAND (CP) — The towering pastoons Oakland A's hope to explode tonight with their bats instead of their tempers in the third game of the 1974 World Series with Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I'm expecting us to break out any day now, but I've been expecting that for six weeks so I don't really know," said Oakland manager Alvin Dark, whose team has had more newlies recently for hitting people than hitting baseballs.

Dark, whose team was the World Series sponor 3-1 Saturday in Los Angeles and then lost the second game Sunday by the same score, is thinking about an adjustment in his batting order.

Saying that the A's face a left-hander in Al Downing, Dark said, "I might bat Bill North first instead of second. He has more power as a right-handed hitter, I might also move some of the others around in the lineup, too. We've just got to get some more runs."

The best of the A's pitching staff, ten-game winner Jim (Catfish) Hunter, starts today. Hunter last week tossed since he only pitched to one batter Saturday after meeting in last week's American League playoffs.

The A's started the series out with a bang when pitchers Ramon Fingers and Rico Moss Odom exchanged blows in the dugout last week. And dishdown 8:30 p.m. EDT.

Monday's off-day worked at Oakland Coliseum, a sports writer was the target of wrath.

Reggie Jackson, Oakland's star outfielder, verbally abused Murray Chass, man, editor of Newspaper Enterprises Associates in Elks. It's rules, because of an article he wrote for a national magazine.

Jackson was unhappy about the general tone of the article, which dealt with his alleged battle with other players for role leadership of the team.

Meanwhile, Los Angeles manager Walt Alston feels that Downing, despite a mediocre 5-6 season record, can maintain the Dodgers' masterful pitching of late. The A's have managed only 13 hits so far.

"Downing pitched well late in the season," said Alston, explaining why he named him to start. "Besides, he's normally his No. 2 pitcher. "I think he'll do the job for us."

Alston planned no changes, other than going to his normal lineup for right-handers. In the first two games, the Dodgers faced southpaws but Alston insists he can do second. Alston will have Willie Crawford in right field instead of Joe Ferguson.

Alston also will use right-handed Ferguson behind home plate instead of Steve Yeager.

The contest at the 50,000-seat Oakland Coliseum, first of three dates exchanged here in the split season last week. And dishdown 8:30 p.m. EDT.

In Sunday's game, Ferguson paced the Dodgers with a two run homer in the sixth inning.

Don Sutton stopped the A's on two hits in the first seven innings and sputtered out of a one-out, base-loaded jam in the eighth inning before Mike Marshall took over in the ninth.

Sutton hit Bando with a pitch to open the inning and then Reggie Jackson hit a double into the right field corner, sacrificed him to third base, Alston called for Marshall.

Joe Rudi hit a double to knock in Jackson and Sutton. With Rudi on first and none out, Marshall struck out Gene Tenace, threw out Washington at first and fanned pinch-hitter Angel Mangual to end the game.

Jackson hit a 400-foot homer to lead the A's to their opening victory Saturday. It came before 34,891 fans in Los Angeles—the crowd was 15,000 less day at Dodger Stadium.

Jackson edged Andy Messersmith in the second inning for the first run of the contest.

The A's scored single runs in each of the fifth-and eighth innings and the Dodgers scored in the fifth and ninth, the final one coming on Jim Wynn's homer.

HANK AARON

Homecoming?

OAKLAND (AP) — Dan Dobbahan, president of Atlanta Braves, has given home-run king Hank Aaron permission to deal with Milwaukee Brewers.

The Atlanta executive made the disclosure Monday on the eve of a news conference which Aaron had called for Oakland today, reportedly to disclose his future plans.

Bombers Show Argos How It's Done

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Argonauts tried to self-destruct Monday night but failed to break a tie and failed. The Argos still were trying to do that when west wing Monday Wheeler's Blue Bombers made the quick kick work.

The two wild finishes evened almost the only excitement in an otherwise tame weekend of Canadian Football League action.

The Argos' failure to score on the last-second field goal attempted 13-13 with the Alouettes in Montreal Sunday but Winnipeg's clutchiness ended in a 15-13 victory Monday over the 3-5-1 pat-Cats in Hamilton.

The Bombers lost 37-16 to the Rough Riders in Ottawa Saturday.

With the Hamilton game tied 13-13, Winnipeg Rincon Christie intercepted a pass by Hamilton quarterback Don Jonas, setting the Bombers up on the Hamilton 31 with less than 2 minutes remaining.

After two running plays that gained 19 yards and with only seconds left on the clock, Argos's Web McKee punted into a strong wind, losing for the Bombers. Then Mike Walker took the punt about 15 yards deep in the zone and tried to kick it back out. Walker's weak kick went to Jim Washington at the five-yard line and the Bomber running back scooted into the end zone for the winning touchdown.

At Montreal, the Argos were trailing the Alouettes 16 with four seconds remaining. Ernest Ankrah, who leads the league with a 47-yard punt average, kicked about 25 yards into the end zone, right to Montreal's Skip Earman who booted the ball back out to Argo Brock Carnegie who flipped the ball back to Ankrayshyn. The Argo kicker tried a forward pass but it went to centre Morris Bobkowych, who was immediately tackled, despite being an ineligible receiver, and the game ended.

In Hamilton, many of the 37,401 fans came to see the duel between Jonas and Chuck Ealey, the quarterbacks swapped by Winnipeg and Hamilton last year.

Hampered by strong winds and a wet field, neither quarterback provided much offence although each scored a touchdown in the first half. Jonas on a five-yard run and Ealey on a 25-yard scramble.

The statistics showed Jonas completing eight of 22 pass attempts for 120 yards while Ealey was good on only two of eight for 13 yards.

But Jonas had two interceptions—one by Ted McEachern which set up a McKee field goal in the second quarter, and the other by Pritchett which led to Winnipeg's win. And on the plus side for Ealey, the Winnipeg scrambler picked up 67 yards on 14 carries, leading the Bomber rushers.

The win gave Winnipeg a third-place tie with Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Western Conference. Hamilton stayed in third place in the East, two points behind Ottawa and one ahead of Toronto.

The Argos have three games remaining and Hamilton two—both of them against Toronto.

Montreal maintained a two-point lead over Ottawa in the Eastern Conference standings, but got one touchdown from Steve Ferrughelli on a 30-yard run and Don Sweet kicked two field goals and a convert. Argo fullback Ed Shuttlesworth plunged over from the one for a touchdown and Andruzyshyn added the convert and two field goals.

Al Ottawa, quarterback Rick Cassata, starting for only the second time this season, completed 16 of 21 passes for 226 yards to lead the Rough Riders. Cassata also ran 13 yards for a touchdown and Art Green ran for the other two Rider touchdowns.

Gerry Organ kicked two field goals and three converts for Ottawa which held the Bombers to just 42 yards rushing.

Ealey hit Tom Scott with a 25-yard touchdown pass and McKee kicked the convert and a field goal.

Rookie Sparks Stampeders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

EDMONTON (CP) — Rookie quarterback Joe Pisarcik put together an upset victory for Calgary Stampeders Monday as they downed Edmonton 26-10 and robbed the Eskimos of sole possession of first place in the Western Football Conference.

The 21-year-from-Detroit rookie was working his first WFC contest and had Calgary on the winning side of the ledger after a dismal season that has Cal-gary in last place.

Earlier during the Saskatchewan Roughriders slipped past British Columbia Lions 17-15 with Rouge Rider defensive halfback Lorne Richardson scoring both touchdowns and kicker Brian Berg adding a 37-yard field goal and two convert points.

B.C. quarterback Don Moorhead threw to Slade Wills and opened Wills' way for a 35-yard run to paydirt as well as running the ball one yard himself in the first quarter. Ivan Mac-Millan converted both touchdowns and added a 30-yard single.

The game put Saskatchewan in sole possession of third place while Edmonton stood one point behind B.C. but those standings changed Monday when Winnipeg Blue Bombers beat Hamilton Tiger-Cats 19-15 and went into a tie with Saskatchewan for third with the Bombers having one game in hand.

Edmonton quarterback Bruce Lemmerman said he was not making any excuses. I played terrible. I couldn't have played any worse. I let the guys down and I have a hell of an upset feeling right now."

Jim Wood, Calgary coach, said "we played a good consistent balanced ball game. The defence really shut down Joe Pisarcik . . . was cool and poised. He proved he was a good young quarterback and he had super protection."

Calgary go points on Pisarcik's 37-yard pass to Bill Lide and a two-yard run by Willie Burden. Cyril McFall converted both, adding three field goals and a single.

Edmonton's Dave Cutler supplied three field goals and a single in a losing effort.

Learn Naturally

Thinking about a university? One that's right for you?

A university can be a hectic place where you become a number in a crowd instead of a name, a person.

Yet, there is a place, a university where you are a person; where you can be yourself in a natural, open environment. A place full of adventure. A new and exciting place to begin your future. A place to find yourself — naturally.

That place is Lakehead University.

Lakehead University isn't big: about 2600 full-time students on a 300 acre campus. And that's good because LU is a place where you can feel you belong. Classes are small so you're close to the faculty and to your fellow students.

Certainly, the buildings are well-planned, the classrooms, laboratories and library facilities plentiful and well stocked — Sure. Lakehead University is young, modern and progressive. But it's not sterile. It is a dynamic, natural, personal place for learning, growing and being.

Lakehead University rests at the heart of Canada, near Thunder Bay, Ontario, in the rugged and beautiful Superior country — a part of Ontario that still has room to breath, space to move around in, without crowds, without hassles.

The Thunder Bay area has all the advantages of urban living in the heart of a forest wilderness.

Here is a clear, natural alternative to the confining concrete cocoons, the strobing, confusing images of the mid-city landscape.

The wilderness around Lakehead is an outdoorsman's paradise. There is canoeing, hiking, and backpacking to rival the best anywhere. In the winter, the hills are full of skiing — both downhill and cross-country. And the hundreds of miles of natural laboratories to be found at random in the Canadian Shield country around Lakehead make earth sciences study particularly exciting and rewarding.

So, while you're deciding what your future will be, think about Lakehead University — it could be the place for you.

L.A. Kings' Bob Nevin Off to Great Start

MONTREAL (CP) — It took him the better in that department, goaltenders will be looking for help. After the first 22 games 182 goals had been scored, compared with 218 goals in the same number of games last season.

The others were defencemen Larry Sacharuk of St. Louis Blues and centre Pete MacKechnie of Montreal Canadiens.

Also notable in early season play was the fact that a goaltender for California Golden Seals registered a shutout in his first NHL game. Gary Simmons equalled the total shutouts scored by the Seals in 78 games last season—Gilles Meloche got that one.

Canadians Move Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kingston Canadians exploded for five third-period goals Monday night to beat Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 9-5 in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series play and move into a second-place tie with Hamilton Fincups.

The Fincups have five wins and three losses compared to the Canadians' four wins, three losses and two ties.

The Greyhounds' loss snapped the team's three-game home-ice win streak and extended its over-all losing string to three games.

Scoring for the Canadians were Mike Cronshaw, Bob Hor-ton, Alex Forsythe, Mike O'Connell, Barry Scully, Ronnie Ozmo, Bob Plumb and Brad Jo-

Beats Credit Card

MONTREAL (CP) — Two second year university students have come up with what they believe is an alternative to the credit card.

Sheldon Zimmerman and Eddy Lachman used $6,000 of their summer savings to launch the U-Save card.

For a $5.00 fee, members are entitled to 10-per-cent discounts at participating merchants when they pay for their purchases in cash.

The students say that merchants are eager to sign up for the project because they avoid the three-to six-per-cent charges accompanying credit purchases.

So far, between 3,000 and 4,000 persons have joined the plan and the students hope to increase total membership to 10,000 by the end of the year.

IN MEMORIAM

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear friend John Malcolm who passed away October 15, 1973. Just a memory of sweet days gone by.

Memories and love remain. Just the love and sweet devotion. Of a friend we can't forget.

— Always remembered by Mildred.

ARMSTRONG — In sad but loving memory of a wonderful sister-in-law, Ida Armstrong, who passed away October 15, 1966.

Sweet memories are treasured, Deep in the heart she'll always be, Time cannot dim the memories, Of one we loved so dearly.

— Always remembered by Sister-in-law Ivy Armstrong.

FOUND — In loving memory of a dear friend Ida Armstrong who passed away October 15, 1966.

Time heals the heart with farewell, But memories linger on, Of one we loved so dearly, Who left us one by one.

— Sadly missed by Mrs. Ivy Armstrong.

Sadly missed and always remembered by Mr. Ray Manthorpe of Frank and Mabel Stanton.

FOUND — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Harry Found, who passed away October 15, 1973.

There's an open gate at the end of my garden.

Through which each must go.

Where the one you love most is waiting.

For Father dishes his own.

Then the one you love most can, Finish happiness and rest, in the Father's home above.

— Sadly missed by Mother, Son and Daughter-in-law.

GREEN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Harry Green, who passed away ten years ago, October 15, 1971.

Ten years have passed since I last looked.

On the midst of my love I can hear, Words I'd speak, but I cannot, For you are not here.

— Sadly missed by wife and family.

ANDREWS — In loving memory of Mary Andrews who passed away October 15, 1973.

Sweet memories, precious and dear, A heart that's breaking with sad regret, There's a vacant chair that can never be filled, Since God takes someone very much loved.

Dear memories of them will always remain.

We miss them more than anyone can know.

In their year the emptiness grows, Our hearts are sore and sad with tears.

But the echo in our hearts will always be.

Of the loving care and kindness of their hearts of gold.

Time does seem to us than wealth and fame.

Memories are gone forever.

Time has come to deliver a message to them above.

Tell them we miss them and give them our love.

— Dearly loved by their children Mr. and Mrs. Fred Andrews, Donald and Ruth, and grandchildren Ronald, Barbara, Judy and Keith.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the doctors, nurses, and staff of the hospitals and relatives and friends who visited me during my stay in Belleville General Hospital. Also for the cards and flowers received during my stay in Belleville General Hospital. Special thanks to Rev. Bridge and Matthewson for their visits and prayers, to Mrs. Greer of C.W.L. Tea were all very much appreciated.

— Yours sincerely, Lena Wright-cook.

I would like this way to thank my friends, relatives and neighbors for the lovely gifts, cards and flowers that were received on Saturday evening, October 5th, at the Belleville Legion Hall. Also for the many telephone calls and visits during my stay in Belleville General Hospital. Special thanks go to our doctor, Dr. Wilson, and the nurses on the 3rd floor, Ward 3, Belleville General Hospital. Also to Rev. Bridge and Rev. Matthewson for their visits and prayers, to Mrs. Greer of C.W.L. Tea were all very much appreciated.

STILL WAITING?

Are you one of those waiting for rates to drop, or are you waiting for them to go higher? You may have a very long wait, according to all those who should know. Several lenders have had their rates this week to 10%.

We can offer a choice of a good number of new homes with far lower interest rates. As many of these have just started, you have lots of opportunity to incorporate your own ideas. Possession in early spring.

SUBURBAN SECLUSION

A larger three bedroom split level situated away from traffic noises. This small exclusive sub-division is only five minutes from town. The house has a country kitchen, dining room and living room with fireplace. The kitchen has built-in cupboards. Basement has great potential for future rec room.

Russian Society Protects Heritage

MOSCOW (Reuter) — When wrecking crews started to demolish a former aristocratic mansion in the heart of Moscow's Square, they found behind the plaster's ancient frescoes and stucco work hidden during Czarist rule. Now the mansion, one of the few scenic survivals of the razed Old Guard, is being restored to its former glory.

The wanton destruction of the society's founding came shortly after the Revolution of 1917, but intellectuals horrified at what they considered the senseless destruction of historic buildings in the name of progress, have found a champion in Soviet architecture. Moscow's President Nikolai Baibakov and Deputy Premier Vasily Kuznetsov, were arrested on the ruins of parts of the old town in the early 1930s.

Since then, says the society's executive director, Vladimir Ivanov, membership has trebled in 7 years than since 1966. Everyone pays an annual fee of 30 kopeks (about 40 cents) and many take an active hand in restoration work.

The Russian society has its 50 counterparts in all but 14 Soviet republics but each looks after its own affairs.

From its headquarters in a little 17th century monastery close to Moscow's largely rebuilt centre, the society coordinates the activities of 20 million workers throughout the Russian federation and the task-managers of other work of its volunteer corps.

The Soviet Government finances the society's aims at "no less than" 50% the state organs in "maintaining monuments, in use the income from the fees and in a small allocation of youth."

Ivanov said a building project will often find its state organs in direct conflict with the society, which they must negotiate a working ahead with any redevelopment.

"Generally we manage to agree at some point, but we promise. After all, we can't demand that nothing be built. That would be too much like the Chinese thing of his ancestors."

In some cases, as in the heart of Soviet architecture. Moscow's President Nikolai Baibakov and Deputy Premier Vasily Kuznetsov, were arrested on the ruins of parts of the old town in the early 1930s.

Since then, says the society's executive director, Vladimir Ivanov, membership has trebled in 7 years than since 1966. Everyone pays an annual fee of 30 kopeks (about 40 cents) and many take an active hand in restoration work.

The Russian society has its 50 counterparts in all but 14 Soviet republics but each looks after its own affairs.

From its headquarters in a little 17th century monastery camp under Stalin now being turned into an architectural museum.

In the far north of Siberia, for example, from the wooden church in the village where only 50 permanent residents.

They agitated until the church was rescued by Moscow and ferried complete piece by piece to Novgorod, 200 miles away, where it is now an art exhibition.

Home-made Harpsichord Cost $600

TORONTO (CP) — Matthew Rockwell, formerly a member of the White Lightning motorcycle club and a Hamilton-area hippy, Motorcycle Hash in Salisbury, Ont., also used to take private lessons.

That was five years ago. Today he is a music student at the University of Toronto and is working on his basement harpsichord.

So far he's built a harpsichord with one playing manual for about $600. The aim he is working on now has two playing manuals.

He has no plans to sell his instruments. They are destined for his chamber music ensemble, founded by Opportunities for Youth grant, which performs recitals in schools and institutions.

A third harpsichord is on the drawing board, but Mr. Rockwell also has another project in mind.

Browsers Welcome At Gladys Pike's

OTTAWA (CP) — Gladys Pike is looking for a complete set of Dickens' novels.

Mrs. Pike opened Ottawa's second-hand bookstore 15 years ago, after she and her husband came here from England.

She set up Ye Olde Books Shoppe and sells old books from her personal disposing of their libraries or from people who simply have run out of space. Her search for rare books helped her establish contacts in other parts of the world.

In 1967 her books moved and she wanted to go to Zagreb for a few months, so she put the books in storage and her return, to pursue her second career.

But so many of her former customers called at her home to ask her to find books that she finally decided to open an office to hold a bookstore. She got down to shop in an old brick house on the front window and her customers had outgrown her quarters for 43 years.

Now Mrs. Pike's Shoppe also always welcomed customers who wanted to look but not necessarily buy.

It's the name of her new shop, made smaller and crammed with books. A notice in the front window and passers-by that "browsers are welcome."

She no longer buys books in bulk. The main function of her store-within being a book-hunter service.

She said she always found the book hunting part of her business the most rewarding and enjoys being back in harness.

"I'll probably die in harness," she predicted.

Mrs. Pike resisted the delight of old Oxford family she helped. They had a relative who was a United States poet in the late 1800s and at their request she had them complete sets of his writings.

"Some people are interested in collecting books of a certain type of printing or binding or for the backgrounds — pictures and decorations," she said.

"Others want them on certain topics or for certain age groups. One client was interested in early juvenile books and I managed to get him an 1850 edition."

That was a first-class printing and cost around $45. Collectors usually want clean, crisp books with no broken bindings or edges and these tend to be expensive.

People drift into her small office-bookstore to look through her stock of old volumes and register requests.

It may take days, weeks or even months to find a rare book but Mrs. Pike will call her customers as soon as the book is in.

She charges no fee if the search among her book contacts in Canada, the United States and Britain is unsuccessful. Once she has the book she charges her clients a price that includes the search fee.

Now in her 60s, Mrs. Pike plans to open her new office only five days a week so that she can keep her hand in painting and devote a bit of time to reading her own collection of Canadiana.

Sullivan Owned Sundays For Over Two Decades

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Sullivan, the Great Stone Face whose "really big show" entertained millions of television viewers on Sunday nights for more than two decades, died Sunday night of cancer at 72.

He died at Lenox Hill Hospital, with Caroline Ansbacher, his aide and close friend for more than 40 years, at his bedside. Sullivan had been in hospital bed in his Manhattan apartment since a cerebral hemorrhage.

Bob Precht, Sullivan's son-in-law and head of Sullivan's TV production company, said the performer-columnist died "I know that he had cancer of the esophagus."

A warm but poker-faced newspaperman who got into broadcasting in 1930 with a radio variety show, Sullivan made his debut on CBS with his weekly TV show in May, 1948. The program was called, The Toast of the Town.

In his 23 years on television, the popular Sunday night program introduced to viewers such performers as Elvis Presley, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis and Dick Van Dyke.

The show folded in 1971 because of low ratings.

Sullivan, born in Manhattan and raised in Port Chester, N.Y., began his newspaper career 58 years ago as a $18-a-week reporter on the Port Chester Daily Item. He drifted into sportswriting and started his Broadway column in 1927 on the old New York Graphic. The column, I believe in getting the best acts I can, introducing them quickly and getting off," Sullivan said. He was credited with performers, such as singer Frank Sinatra, who crossed the Sullivan ire in 1965 by refusing to appear on Sullivan's show for less than $50,000.

The Sinatra feud ended just four months after it began. When Sullivan was in hospital after a car accident, Sinatra volunteered to act as a substitute host. The slot was filled for him, but the show landed an appearing on the show without pay, Sullivan recalled.

Sullivan, who in recent years lived at the Delmonico Hotel, an old show-biz hostelry on Park Avenue here, said in a 1971 interview that he was severely depressed when his weekly show was cancelled after 23 years.

"I've got kind of accustomed to doing the show," he said. "When you're off the air, it's like being dead — you're a dark character."

Sylvia, his wife of 47 years, died in 1973.

His survivors include his daughter, Betty Precht of Scarsdale, N.Y.; his brother, Charles Sullivan of Port Chester, N.Y.; three sisters, Mrs. Hugh Murphy and Mrs. George Hegel, both of Port Chester, and Mrs. Mary Casey of Manhattan; and five grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Wednesday, October 16

Aries (March 21-April 19) You'll eventually benefit in some manner from confidential information that will be either new or secret, so it is essential for the present.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Your judgment is especially good today, and it is important that you use it. Likely you'll overlook anything relevant in weighing matters.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You're fortunate in coping with matters that require a balance between work or career.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) There's something much larger and beneficial behind what will appear to be mundane goings-on here at goodwill from a friend.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're very much on the mind of one with whom you have strong emotional ties. This person will shortly act generously toward you.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your current ideas have more chance of being successful than you may realize. Enlist your cohorts with bold strokes.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) This is one of those days when things of a material nature are likely to be lucrative, so you should need for you to put out much effort.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're lucky now, provided you stick with your keen ideas and not those of another. Proceed as your logic dictates.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Those reliable hunch insights you've learned to depend upon will be extremely accurate today, so consult with them for guidance.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) To influence a group, single out the few key people and work in close accord with them rather than with the majority.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're still in a fortunate cycle where your occupation is concerned. Don't let anything unwarning slip through by being indifferent.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Is your dealings now, keep the broader picture before you. The smaller pieces will fall into place once the general outline is perceived.

Mink-lined Pyjamas Available for Dogs

TORONTO (CP) — Velvet pyjamas trimmed with mink are on Toronto boutiquel's answer to the question of what to give the dog who has everything.

The boutique also offers its clientele specially-designed raincoats, umbrellas, booties, sunglasses and rhinestone-studded 14-carat gold collars and leashes.

After all, nothing is too good for the pet that costs you $20 a year in health insurance, $25 for a tint and manicure and more than $100 to bury!

It's all part of the "much higher life-style" Toronto's 178,000 cats and dogs and 70,000 other pets are enjoying lately.

Wally Stonehouse, a Toronto veterinarian, said the pets' standard of living is improving by leaps and bounds as society and the city become cosier and colder.

"Our pets give us love with no strings attached," he said, "and in some cases they become substitutes for children."

As increasing number of entrepreneurs are, thriving as owners grow more attached to their pets and want to give them the best life can offer.

One Toronto dog-grooming expert offers his clients shampoo, set and manicure service to the salon—in a yellow 1973 Cadillac Fleetwood limousine.

Gary Cooksey, the hair-stylist, said he gets requests from customers to have their dog's toenails painted to match or the pet pink, blue or green—for $20 a visit.

To ensure that their pets don't become more than fashionably thin, Canadians spend money on cat and dog food that, when baby food, is estimated $100 million a year.

Some finicky eaters won't settle for the ordinary tinned stuff.

"You just wouldn't believe what we have to feed some of the dogs and cats here," said Jamie Parker of Parker Boarding Kennels in Toronto.

"One guy brought in $45 worth of sirloin steak for his dog, and another time I had to take $36 worth of crab meat for a cat.

"Chicken livers, beef hearts, fresh shrimp, barbecued chickens—I don't know where it's all going to end."

Just in case the pets don't stay healthy on such diets, two Toronto boroughs offer a pet-health plan. By 1975, Metropolitan Toronto pet-owners will be able to pay $30 a year to cover up to $700 of medical expenses for their pets.

And even when Fido pass-es-on-to the figure of old age—such as average age of 12 compared with eight 30 years ago—there is no need for the loving treatment to end.

He can be buried in a six-foot-lined coffin—made from hardwood and padded and equipped with fills, side accessories—for $80 and upward—receive a funeral treatment for $25.

"I figured there would be a demand for this service," said Gloria Hoskin of Toronto, who makes the coffins in partnership with her father and brother Art Lee.

"Some people want to bury their pets with dignity."

Dignity doesn't end at the coffin for Toronto's pets—273 boys a plot, marker and perpetual care of the grave at the Skyhill Pet Cemetery, about 22 miles north of the city.

Since 1969, more than 4,000 dogs, cats, canaries, skunks, snakes and others have found final resting places there.

Or for those who don't want to be separated from their pets, there's Animal Cremation Services of Toronto, which charges $25 or more to perform the task and then return the ashes in a plastic container which can be kept in the home.

Carsickness May Be Eye Problem

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am in high school but in grade 11 must take a driver's education course. The problem is that ever since I can remember, my brother and I have gotten carsick.

Of course it's very impractical to avoid cars, so I take a lot of motion sickness pills.

These pills work fine. I would like to know if they are safe to take when you're driving. Is there a chance it will clear up?—S.T.

Two suggestions. First, these motion sickness pills are safe, but watch the dosage. Stick to the amount suggested on the package. Too much of that medication can make you drowsy, and that's no way to be when you are driving.

Incidentally, does this carsickness develop when you are driving, or only when you are a passenger?

Second suggestion: An eye specialist pointed out to me (and I printed this some time ago) that quite a considerable number of carsickness victims turn out to have astigmatism. Sometimes it isn't enough to prevent them from reading and other activities but is enough so the eyes have trouble adjusting to the rapidly-changing views which pass at you are in a moving car.

So with that possibility in mind, it might be well worth your while to have your eyes checked by an ophthalmologist—remembering to tell him about your carsickness.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Until my husband came down with the chest thing he was a very healthy man. Now he has developed a cough that keeps him awake at night. I'm afraid he'll get pneumonia.

He has been taking cough medicine, but it doesn't help much. Is there anything else he can take?—Mrs. R.

No, unless it happened to be taken on a roommate when your blood sugar level was at exactly the right level. Such a test would give the approximate level of blood sugar at that time. Happening to make the test at just such a moment is highly improbable.

Even so I would say that a sugar tolerance test would be necessary, because the rate of fall, as well as the lowest level reached, is important for accurate diagnosis.

If a single finger test was low, a tolerance test would be in order to confirm it. Diagnosis should not be made on a single finger test. In addition, before the tolerance test the patient should have adequate preparation by eating a moderately high carbohydrate diet for three days prior to the test.

The finger tip tests give approximate readings, but not turn out to have anticipation. Sometimes it isn't enough to prevent them from reading and other activities but is enough so the eyes have trouble adjusting to the rapidly-changing views which pass at you are in a moving car.

It is not related to smallpox; nor is it caused by an emotional upset. It is caused by a virus, either identical or almost identical to chickenpox virus.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible to take a urine specimen from the tip of your finger and determine whether you have hypoglycemia? I know it can be found from a sugar tolerance test.—C.B.

No, unless it happened to be taken at a moment when your blood sugar level was at exactly the right level. Such a test would give the approximate level of blood sugar at that time. Happening to make the test at just such a moment is highly improbable.

The finger tip tests give approximate readings, but not are accurate enough as drawing the bit of blood necessary for the determination.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was told that quinine was the usual medication injected for homosexuals but that during pregnancy some other medication is used. Why? Does quinine injected endanger the embryo?—M.Y.R.

When hemorrhoids are small they can be treated that way, because of reduced risk in small. Still, it is avoided in pregnancy because it can be a factor in abortion or miscarriage. That's the rule that it is better to be safe than occasionally sorry.

Large amounts of quinine are ordinarily necessary to have any apparent effect in causing miscarriage, and even then it is not certain. Quinine, (And it can have other deleterious effects in any such quantities).

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is prompted by your having had a quinine shot early in your pregnancy. I would say that you shouldn't worry.

Health Emphasis Should Switch To Prevention

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Monday in Canada, a country that reached a limit on what can be gained from further increases in medical care spending.

Speaking to 6,200 delegates at the annual education conference of the Canadian Association of Employees Benefit Plans, Mr. Lalonde said the emphasis now must be on prevention, particularly in such areas as mental diseases, of choice or neglect and diseases of affluence, and many other factors such as overeating or overdrinking.

There is a point of diminishing returns in trying to raise the health level, he said.

Although there had been prediction that publicly administered health plans in Canada would drive physicians out of the country, but costs are controlled and lead to a deterioration of care, Mr. Lalonde said, the doctor-patient ratio has improved and there is a better geographical distribution of doctors.

Canada has more acute, short-term hospital beds, relative to population at seven per 1,000 than the United States with five per 1,000.

The health minister also said the costs per patient-day and per discharged patient are more than in the U.S.

The waiting room should get a lot shorter, Mr. Lalonde added.

"We've made a start when we tripled our family allowance payments last year; he said. "But more must be done."

Dr. Russell B. Roth, immediate past president of the American Medical Association, said the U.S. Medical-care system is richer and more with dollars than with the quality of care.

Warning Issued Against High Vitamin C Dosage

NEW YORK (AP) — New warnings against the use of high doses of Vitamin C for the common cold have emerged from an international meeting here on research into the vitamin.

To recommend now for the general public to take high doses of Vitamin C over and above those recommended by the (U.S.) National Academy of Sciences would be irresponsible," said Dr. Myron Winick of the Institute of Human Nutrition at Columbia University.

Dr. Linus Pauling, two-time winner of the Nobel Prize in medicine, has stimulated wide interest in Vitamin C with his book, "Vitamin C and the Common Cold."

A key study that has been cited in support of Pauling's ideas was conducted at the University of Toronto and indicated that big intake of one gram (one 1/28th of an ounce) a day and four grams a day when ill protected a 30-per-cent reduction in days-off work due to cold symptoms.

But Dr. Terence Anderson of the University of Toronto, who conducted the study, told the meeting that subsequent studies showed that such high doses are not necessary to produce a similar reduction.

Perhaps 100 or 200 milligrams a day would be sufficient, Anderson said. Pauling has recommended a routine daily intake of 1,000 to 10,000 milligrams or more to prevent colds.

The recommended daily allowance of the Food and Nutrition Board of the U.S. National Research Council, is 30 to 60 milligrams for an adult.

Defence Department Threatens Armstrong

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government is trying to figure out how to save the little northwestern community of Armstrong, whose existence is threatened by cutting of the federal defence department's radar station there.

The 400 people of Armstrong—founded in 1919 as a CNR divisional point in the bush 170 miles north of the Lakehead — had depended in recent years on the radar station for employment, fire protection and ambulance service. The station closed Sept. 30.

Now residents face the possibility of getting out or depending on welfare unless new industry is found.

"We're trying to keep the community alive on some viable basis," says Allen Grossman, provincial secretary for resources development.

He says the government is considering alternate industry and other sources of power—part of which had been supplied by the radar station — and other essential services.

The station had employed 45 civilians and 100 military personnel were stationed there.

The federal government has offered other public service jobs outside Armstrong to the civilians who worked for the station.

By September, 19 of the 45 had chosen from the 400 jobs offered and eight others had indicated they didn't plan to leave the community.

Prince Salutes Newfies

GANDER, Nfld. (CP)—Prince Philip congratulated Newfoundland and Labrador for the progress achieved since the island and Labrador became a province of Canada 25 years ago.

The Prince, who arrived at the international airport here earlier in the day for a 24-hour visit, in central Newfoundland, also recalled at a state banquet the island's historic connection with Britain.

The banquet, attended by Lt.-Gov. Gordon A. Winter; Premier Frank Moores, the provincial cabinet and members of the judiciary, was the final in a series during the last nine months to mark the 25th anniversary of Newfoundland's union with Canada.

Prince Philip said the decision by Newfoundlanders to join Canada in 1949 showed that uniting for the common good could be beneficial.

He said Newfoundland would have an excuse for another celebration in 25 years—the 500th anniversary of the island's rediscovery by John Cabot in 1497.

Armed Forces Slow Recruiting

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson suggested the armed forces opening up more than 1,000 jobs for women may help in creating an elite force the government will let recruitment lag.

He also announced in the Commons that because the size of the forces, now numbering about 80,000, is more than adequate to meet present commitments, the government may begin reducing the size of servicemen's pay increases.

He gave no indication of what changes may be cut.

Gen. Jacques Dextraze, chief of defence staff, whose effective military strength now is considered to be down to 78,000 personnel, said it is up to the minister to decide what tasks are to be cut.

Mr. Richardson said the forces must be well paid, well supported, well trained, well housed, well fed, well disciplined, well fed and well motivated.

"In other words, we need an elite force that is proud of the job it is doing for Canada — a force with a high morale to which many more Canadians would be glad to belong."

What resulted when after he said the forces will be reduced by not replacing all of the 6,000 to 7,000 people who leave the forces each year.

"We cannot achieve some of our objectives in a few months or perhaps in some cases in a few years, but at least we should recognize the concept and have the vision of that kind of Canadian armed forces that we want to build, and we should be working steadily toward that achievement."

He spoke through a cautionary stream of catcalls from Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East), whose constituency has a large armed forces population.

"Nonsense," the MP called at one stage.

Mr. Richardson said the main tasks the forces are dedicated to — of sovereignty, commitments to the North America defence system (NORAD), commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and peacekeeping.

He said he and Gen. Dextraze agree that the forces now are overworked and any reduction in personnel would have to accompanied by a reduction of tasks.

There has been no cut in the defence budget. The 1974-75 expenditures were estimated to be $3.3 billion—$180 million higher than originally budgeted.

The ratio of 87 per cent of the budget for personnel and only 11 per cent for equipment will be changed, he said. To do that personnel costs had to be reduced.

Ford Gets Postponement For Turkish Aid Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders hope to get quick enactment of a compromise worked out with President Ford to cut off U.S. military aid to Turkey, but not until Dec. 18, the Opponents led by Representative Benjamin Rosenthal (Dem-N.Y.) called that "no compromise at all," and said they would try in the House of Representatives today to cut off the aid Nov. 26, or sooner, if Turkey sends any more arms to its occupation forces in Cyprus.

But George Mahon (Dem.-Tex.), House appropriations chairman and floor manager of the compromise measure, said Ford needs until Dec. 18 to get Cyprus peace negotiations going.

House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate leaders said Thursday they hope to get final action on the Turkish aid dispute today and let congressmen get home to re-election campaigns.

Watergate Trial

Every Defendant for Himself

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least three of the five defendants in the Watergate cover-up trial have adopted strategies of putting some distance between themselves and the others.

Defendants John Ehrlichman and Robert Mardian are scrambling separately to avoid conviction, opening statements by the lawyers showed Thursday.

Jacob Stein, lawyer for defendant Kenneth Parkinson, was scheduled to make his opening statement today and was expected to emphasize his client's distance from the other defendants. Parkinson had escaped unsuccessfully in pre-trial motions for a separate trial.

Lawyers for former president Richard Nixon's former staff chief, H. R. Haldeman and former attorney-general John Mitchell plan to deliver their opening statements after the prosecution has completed its case.

One of those originally indicted in the case was already in jail, John Dean, who pleaded to lead off the Watergate prosecutors' case today, after a day's delay.

Dean, expected to be the prosecution's star witness, had been scheduled to appear Tuesday, but opening statements by two defence lawyers took longer than expected.

Besides his own extensive testimony on the cover-up, former White House counsel Dean also was to be called upon to verify the authenticity of at least nine of the White House tapes the prosecutors plan to introduce as evidence.

Nixon has himself been subpoenaed to testify by the prosecution and defence. U.S. District Judge John Sirica set Monday afternoon for a hearing on requests from the former president's lawyers that he be excused for reasons of ill health.

Drug Suspect Claims Metro Police Beat Him

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail quotes Ben Wicks' common-law wife as saying a police officer kicked and otherwise manhandled Metropolitan Toronto police after they had rested on a drugs charge last Feb. 8.

Mr. Henderson told The Globe and Mail that because of the squad, demanding he tell them where a gun was, he was handcuffed and otherwise manhandled. Metropolitan Toronto police after they had rested on a drugs charge last Feb. 8.

Mr. Henderson told The Globe and Mail that because of the squad, demanding he tell them where a gun was, he was handcuffed and otherwise manhandled. Metropolitan Toronto police after they had rested on a drugs charge last Feb. 8.

Mr. Henderson said his wife, Sandra, 18, was charged with possession of LSD for the purposes of trafficking after members of the metro drug squad raided their apartment. They were awaiting a court hearing.

He said that later at a police station he was punched and slapped and a claw-like instrument was used to grip his testicles.

He said one policeman told him that, if he told anyone about his treatment, "it will . . . take you to the Humber River and throw you in there until you are dead. . . ."

The Globe and Mail says the examiner in a polygraph (lie detector) test given Mr. Henderson in August supported the opinion he was telling the truth in reply to questions dealing with specific parts of his allegations.

Irish Jails In Uproar

BELFAST (AP) — Prisoners took the warden of Armagh Jail hostage today as riots spread in prisons throughout Northern Ireland.

Authorities said British army troops using tear gas are trying to free the seized warden at the women's prison in Armagh, 35 miles southwest of Belfast.

The Armagh incidents followed night-long rioting at the Maze Prison seven miles east of Belfast that left nine prisoners and one guard with injuries requiring hospital treatment and about 130 prisoner, guard and troops with lesser injuries.

No Powdered Milk

Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan doesn't utter a word of complaint as he was spotted paying the family grocery bill in a Attleboro, Mass., Ont., supermarket. Mr. Whelan was shopping over the weekend with his youngest daughter, Cathy, nine, for the ailing Mrs. Whelan who is ill with the flu. Although Mr. Whelan has publicly approved a suggestion by Health Minister Lalonde to use powdered milk, note the bags of fresh milk in foreground.

Farmer Holds Trump

TORONTO (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Tuesday that unless he's able to get a better deal for farmers, consumers will "be out of luck, paying higher prices than ever for food."

He warned that farmers simply will stop producing food if they do not get the security and standard of living now available to most other members of society.

658 Cattle Slaughtered In Protest

CURTISS, Wis. (AP) — Protesting low cattle prices, farmers shot or slit the throats of 658 calves and buried the carcasses in trenches.

"I'm tired of rhetoric," said Steve Parvich, president of the National Farmers' Organization (NFO) in Wisconsin. "There is a problem out here in rural America and something has to be done about it."

"None of us like it," one farmer said. "But if they don't change soon they might as well shoot the American farmer and throw him in the pit."

The farmer and Parvich spoke at a demonstration here Tuesday where 658 calves were killed by NFO members. Another 31 were slaughtered by members of the Bonna Vista Beef Growers Association near Wauwatosa, Rapids, about 8 miles southeast of here.

The farmers say the price of feed grain and other costs have jumped while veal prices have plummeted.

Mrs. Plumptre Makes Threat

OTTAWA (CP) — Beryl Plumptre said Tuesday she will resign as chairman of the food pricing review board if the federal government attempts to limit her power to recommend action on food prices.

She said in an interview it is "absolutely" necessary that the board be allowed to recommend government action when needed.

"Otherwise, what's the point?"

Incomes Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — Average family income in 1973 rose by 11 per cent to $12,321, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday. The figure for 1972 was $11,100. For individual men, the average income rose to $8,310 from $7,633, a climb of nine per cent, while for women the average jumped to $3,591 from $3,343, up 11 per cent.

Prince Ends Tour

MONTREAL (CP) — Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, was to begin today the last leg of a three-day visit to Canada with a look at sites for equestrian events at the 1976 Olympic Games. The Duke, president of the International Equestrian Federation, arrived here Saturday. He left Tuesday after a visit to the Royal Canadian Regiment, of which he is colonel-in-chief.

Mountie Arraigned

MONTREAL (CP) — Former RCMP constable Robert Samson was to be arraigned in court today after a five commissioner's inquiry found criminal charges responsible Tuesday for a July 26 bomb explosion.

Crown prosecutor Jacques Dagenais said Samson, 25, will be charged with at least two criminal acts of making and placing a dynamite bomb outside the home of Mikyrsy Dolzh, president of Steinberg's Ltd. supermarkets.

Samson, suffered injuries in eluding partial hearing loss in the explosion, and is currently serving 18 months in prison sentence after being cited for contempt of court for refusing to testify when the inquiry opened in late August.

Mexican Back on Tourists Welfare

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who took his family on an $8,000 vacation while on government welfare is not the only one.

Mr. Levi said that Mr. Philip will continue to collect welfare payments, says Norm Levi, minister of human resources.

B.C. was legally bound to keep up the payments despite the "unfortunate" Mexican vacation.

Mr. Levi said that J. Angus Phillip of North Vancouver spent an $11,000-damages settlement on a holiday instead of repaying 19 months of welfare payments as he had agreed to do when he went on government assistance.

But Mr. Levi said Mr. Philip has a wife and four children and we cannot abandon them."

"We are legally obliged to provide welfare as the father is not working."

Mr. Philip signed a repayment agreement after being disabled in a car accident in October, 1972.

But a section of the federal government's Canada Assistance Plan forbids any such assignments of welfare payments.

After collecting about $10,000 in welfare during a 19-month period, Mr. Philip finally got the damages settlement from the car accident in June of this year.

He said he took his wife and two of the children on a vacation in Mexico and spent the rest of the money on debts.

Pogey Past $1.5 Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance payments for the first eight months of 1974 totalled $1.546 billion, up five per cent over the same period last year, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

In 1973, a record $2.2 billion was paid out over the full year.

Higher average payments also set a reduced number of benefit-weeks paid by the commission. In 1974, the average payment had been $73.21 weekly to the end of August, up from $67.37 for the same period in the previous year.

Gets 90 Days

OSHAWA CP — Robert Lane, 34, of Oshawa, was given a 90-day jail sentence in provincial court Tuesday after he pleaded guilty to defrauding the Unemployment Insurance Commission of $1,026. Court was told Lane received benefits from Jan. 1 to March 31 while employed.

Stabbings in Schools

Guardsmen Mobilized in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — National Guard units were standing by today in armories around Boston as a series of racial incidents following scattered violence associated with busing for school desegregation. President Ford ordered a state request for federal troops.

Gov. Francis Sargent mobilized the National Guard Tuesday and about 100 troops were sent to armories. Other units were put on standby for possible callup.

The governor made the move after citing "stabbings, stonings and disorders" in schools Tuesday, mostly at a high school in the predominantly white Hyde Park section.

Eight persons were injured at racially tense Hyde Park High, including Joseph Cowles, 15. He suffered what a Carney Hospital spokesman described as a deep slash in the abdomen. He was reported in good condition Tuesday night.

All of those injured are white.

In rejecting Sargent's request for federal assistance, Ford said in a statement that the primary responsibility for maintaining order continues to lie with state and local authorities.

Ford said no request for federal help would be in order "until the governor is in a position to say he has utilized the full resources of the state and that despite these efforts he can no longer control the situation."

Sargent said he regretted Ford's decision to deny federal troops.

The governor said that if Boston police and the 440 state troopers and Metropolitan District Commission police called up by him last week cannot keep order, he will "use hesitate to deploy whatever resources are required to ensure public safety."

Sargent said he made the move based upon information received from state police and the FBI.

Canal Lacks Traffic Growth

TRENTON — Final figures outlining boat traffic on the Trent Canal this year are not yet available, but indications are that the usual five per cent annual increase will not be seen for the 1974 summer season, a canal official said Tuesday.

In an interview from Peterborough, the spokesman said officials will not have a final count for another three weeks.

The entire canal closed for the season Tuesday.

He said it is expected the count will approximate last year's 317,000 boats.

"We will not have that five per cent increase this year," he said. He added that the uncertain weather this year, coupled with the increased price of gasoline may have affected the number of boats using Trent Canal locks.

A delay in the mid-May opening of parts of the canal further affected the season. Canal officials were forced to keep sections of the system closed for up to three weeks.

Though traffic was best traffic in July, this year down by approximately 30,000, approximations did not materialize, he said. Only what he termed a "trickle" of increases in August totals kept the figures level with 1973.

In Trenton, at Lock One, the trend was similar. In August, 25,000 boats passed through the lock, up from 680 in 1973. July was a poor month — 7% years recorded last year, down to 700 this year.

In all, 1,877 boats moved through Trenton's only lock, an increase of 20 over 1973.

The largest number of boats were registered in the Toronto area. A minority, 259, down from last year, were from the United States.

Locks Idle

Lock One on the Trent Canal in Trenton stands idle as canal staff closed down the boat raising mechanisms Tuesday, the final day of summer operation. Boat traffic on the canal is expected to remain at the 317,000 mark set last year. The canal will re-open to boaters in mid-May, next year.

Students Dance For Funds

PICTON — I Could Have Danced All Night might become the theme song for students of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute planning a dance marathon this month to raise money for UNICEF.

Organized by Glenda Fiske, a 17-year-old PECI student in Grade 12, the marathon will be held Tuesday, Oct. 29 from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the junior cafeteria. Miss Fiske will be assisted by her home room class, Gr. 12-1.

Couples participating in the dance-a-thon will be sponsored per hour for eight hours. Five minute break periods will be permitted every hour.

The money raised through the marathon will be contributed to UNICEF in addition to funds raised by other classes through bake sales, penny collections and a cookout at a football game.

The dance couple raising the most pledge money also will receive a special prize.

Rotarians Advised Of Squadron's Role

PICTON — The role of the 436 Tusker Squadron, CFB Trenton, was outlined recently to Picton Rotarians by Commanding Officer, Lt.-Col. W. Neil Russell.

Lt.-Col. Russell explained there are three heavy transport squadrons in the Canadian Armed Forces, two at CFB Trenton and one at Edmonton, Alberta.

Organized in 1944 the 436 Tusker Squadron's first aircraft was the Dakota, in World War Two; the new squadron earned 18 distinguished flying crosses.

In the early 1960s the squadron was re-equipped with more advanced aircraft, the Hercules.

With a total gross weight of 120,000 pounds the aircraft can land on fairly short and semi-prepared airfields. Although slower than some of the modern jets, it can carry either passengers or cargo.

Col. Russell said it is his squadron's role to provide strategic and tactical airlifts for the armed forces.

"The emphasis on modern land forces is mobility," he said. He observed during the FLQ (Federation de Liberation de Quebec) crisis 1,000 troops were lifted.

The speaker assists national sovereignty and development and regular flies to the Arctic for projects of any government department. There is a weekly run to Alert, the most northerly settlement of any country in the world, Alert lies only 500 miles from the North Pole, and now is almost in total darkness.

"It presents a challenge to the crews," noted Col. Russell referring to the darkness.

Support of Canada's NATO commitment in Europe is also one of the functions of the squadron.

Forces are flown to Europe and regular flights are made to Germany, rotating the equipment used by forces there.

The 436 squadron also has carried cargo to the Philippines to supply hurricane relief and recently flew supplies to the Bahamas during a disaster.

Search and rescue is another of the squadron's duties and one Hercules aircraft remains on 24-hour emergency standby.

Since most air crashes occur in bad weather, search and rescue operations are not without hazards.

In providing a domestic airlift, the squadron can become involved "with almost anything in Canada," says Col. Russell.

One of the squadron's assignments involves transportation of an armored staff car wherever a visiting head of state arrives.

"We think we perform a very useful mission not just for Canada, but for humanity in general," observed the officer.

Col. Russell, a native of Minden, is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and the University of British Columbia. He has held staff positions in Intelligence and Plans and attended Canadian Forces Staff School and a one year Staff College course, both in Toronto.

He was transferred to Air Transport Command headquarters at CFB Trenton in 1973 and served as Senior Officer Joint Operation. He was formerly commanding officer of the 436 Squadron July 15, 1974.

Col. Neil Russell, commanding officer of CFB Trenton's 436 (Hercules) Squadron, was the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the Picton Rotary Club. The colonel, shown here with Wing Commander Albert Pirsh, used slides in his presentation explaining the squadron's role in armed forces and United Nations support. Hercules aircraft are essentially used for freight, and having long range capabilities are more versatile than the shorter range Buffalo freight aircraft also used by the armed forces.

Extra Money Allows Further Street Paving

TRENTON — An unexpected $50,000 windfall from the provincial government will speed up the town's paving program in the coming year.

Driver Hurt

A Picton area woman escaped with cuts Sunday when the car she was driving left County Road One, striking a pole.

Injured was Barbara Haag, 25, of Rt. 2, Picton. Damage to the car she was driving was $1,000.

In other business, council put off switching to Workmans Compensation Board employee insurance coverage pending receipt in writing of assurances the town will be able to revert to private coverage if it wishes in future.

Councillors agreed to wait for a letter, "to avoid any future misunderstandings."

Immigration Patterns

There are signs that the government at last is recognizing the need for some controls on the rate of immigration.

It is not just that immigration from such areas as Africa and South Asia have jumped sharply, there is also the question of how such large numbers — the highest number in more than a decade and a half — can be absorbed in a country where many are already unemployed.

Immigration from the areas mentioned has been almost too easy, putting pressure on housing and on educational services. Many families there have been complaints of school and college entrants from abroad taking advantage of the state educational system, obtaining grants and so on — and taking the spaces of ultimate racial trouble.

Canada has long been able to look smugly at racially-charged situations, and to criticize and offer advice, but it has not been seriously troubled by similar problems itself.

This could change, with the arrival of more and more people from South Asia and Africa. Not because Canadians are intrinsically racist, but simply that from sheer numbers and proximity (of other races) their reaction ultimately would be no different from what tends to be the case elsewhere.

As of now Canadians have a fair degree of living space. But any significant change in the population balance and in ethnic patterns could pose the kind of problems we have been happy to note exist only in other countries.

Immigration controls then, at this juncture, would be simply a matter of common sense.

Pressure On Smokers

If life is inherently harder for smokers, for health reasons — even though they refuse to acknowledge it — it is becoming still tougher with increasing recognition of the rights of non-smokers.

However, there is still a long way to go before public places, which is where the rights of non-smokers are most affected, are cleared of the pernicious aroma and fumes of tobacco smoke.

Now the newly-formed Non-Smokers' Rights Association has plans for television commercials showing the negative aspects of smoking. Smokers, they say, are more easily swayed by group pressures, and less individualistic than non-smokers, they tend not to perform as well sexually as non-smokers and they don't have the good health and stamina of those who don't indulge.

And now there are the findings of a Nutrition Canada survey indicating that smokers have about 30 percent less Vitamin C in their blood than non-smokers.

One of the most cogent arguments against smoking of late comes from the 7-year-old girl in a letter to Ann Landers. After smoking two packs a day since she was 14, "Lung Power" says she "finally got smart and quit out of the blue."

Other ex-smokers who have seen the light will concur with the young woman when she says: "I feel like a million since I quit. . . it's great to be able to walk up a hill or a flight of steps without turning purple. It's a joy to wake up in the morning and not cough my fool head off."

How about some more of the young smokers out there wising up and giving fresh air a chance?

And, as an encouragement to adults and young alike to give it up, more municipalities should follow the example of North York by banning smoking in food stores.

Sheep Diet

Recycling? Who needs it, to judge from a novel piece of scientific news from Australia.

Dr. Harry Coombe of the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization there has been using old printed sheets as part of an experimental diet for sheep.

The word is that the sheep are thriving.

Since sheep are not so abundant in Canada, maybe we could try feeding the paper to our cattle.

Manitoba's Experience

Government - Industrial Partnerships Come Under Fire

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Commercial Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The concept of government-industrial partnerships has come under a serious blow by the report of a Manitoba royal commission of inquiry into that province's Churchill Forest Industries project.

The cost to the public has been put at more than $130-million—and the value of CFI's fixed assets at somewhat less than $60-million.

The commission's report is highly critical of the Conservative government of Premier Duff Roblin—which initially conceived the scheme to exploit Manitoba's natural resources, and to create 4,000 jobs in the north—and successors of Premier Edward Schreyer, which took office in 1969 following one of the most bitter election campaigns in Canada's history.

The main significance of the report goes well beyond Manitoba's boundaries. Other provinces have poured billions of dollars—or hope of dollars into similar industrial undertakings, in the belief that they, with much of the money usually winding up in the hands of, the U.S. or European "partners"—that is, promoters.

It was early in 1966 that the Roblin government announced its financial commitment to a project which, over the 10,000 square miles northeast of Winnipeg.

The announcement said that the Commonwealth Generating Systems" invested in the project did not want to be almost-the kind of news that in a stronger way seems to enhance public confidence in such ventures.

The undistilled "investors" who turned out to be in the known first listed in St. Martin, chicken, with more and more foreign "investors" receiving high payments from the province and with no production planned for the Pas. The Premier's dictatorial overbearing places the taxpayer in the position of the Lamb to the Slaughter. The CFI project followed.

The whole sorry episode will be seen by different people in different ways.

Some will say it proves that government should keep its hands off business, and leave it entirely to the operations of private business. Others would say it proves that if government is going to put up the money, it must call the tune.

But there are some ventures that can succeed only through combinations of public and private effort. The essential point is that government must not throw public funds around as if it were using play money.

The CFI and similar schemes in other provinces illustrate a distressing tendency of politicians to ignore established Canadian enterprises, and to block out private sector foreign promoters.

What, after all, is so great about Swiss and German businessmen who "invest" in our country? Chances are that such unknown risky ventures would otherwise be left alone.

The International business world is full of knowledgeable experts, ready and willing to enter into industrial projects in which governments put up almost all the capital, and the experts walk off with huge commissions and fees, plus a big share of the equity.

'NO, NO, A THOUSAND TIMES – ER, MAYBE'

Shadow Of The Nixon Era Haunts Administration Of Gerald Ford

By JOHN D. HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The still new Ford administration has shown signs of ambivalence in policy and goals, a result perhaps of the difficulties it is facing in moving away from the Nixon era.

The most controversial move the new president has made was to grant pardon to former president Nixon, before the new Watergate trials had begun and while it was still not clear who would control many of Nixon's documents associated with the Watergate mess.

The repercussions of his pardon to Nixon will probably continue as long as Mr. Ford remains in office, and will inhibit him if he chooses to become a presidential candidate in 1976.

Other Nixon political hangups impede the new and very well-meaning president. The announcements of his limited economic controls, and his initiatives to investors smacks very much of the half-way house approach of Mr. Nixon himself.

If on the reason is not personal but ideological. It's apparently politically impossible for any Republican president, even in the midst of the present decade-high inflation, to take tough moves to control it.

Experts say the only reason behind Nixon's Draw phases of control did not work was because they didn't go far enough and they didn't last long enough.

But for a Republican president who began as a tough anti-inflationist, to change course and abandon with fervent leaders as Arthur Burns and William Simon once, the reasons for not going more heavily into state controls at home, still remain obscure.

Government in business may be historically anathema to Republicans. But in the present crisis realism more than history should prevail.

And perhaps Mr. Ford as a Congressman is still being more historical than contemporary in not going further in his economic controls.

Then there is the question of previous gifts to wealthy presidential choice Nelson Rockefeller by all kinds of people, including an alleged $50,000 at one point several years ago to Henry Kissinger.

Those were presumably harmlessly given to associates he admired. But in the still dark shadow of Watergate gifts from the vice-presidential candidate could prevent Mr. Rockefeller's approval by Congress.

And there is the case of Peter Flanagan, former Nixon adviser and apparent "fix". Flanagan is Mr. Ford's choice for American ambassador to Spain.

Democratic members of the Senate and House of Representatives are determined to stop Flanagan's appointment, linking Flanagan to other Nixon money raisers who were given ambassadorial posts.

In spite of all this and the strong possibility Mr. Flanagan's appointment will never be approved by Congress, President Ford is sticking to his guns. It is very unlike the fact American interests in a country as important and as complex as Spain need a much better man than Peter Flanagan.

On the other hand, President Ford's half-way house offer to the U.S. draft dodgers and military deserters to come home and accept employment in the public service for alternative service, patently, is a sound move away from President Nixon's unfair and hard line on these young men.

Nationalism And Investment Scene

Thomson Bureau

A foreign investment study act has passed second reading by a large majority, the Senate has given its blessing and one of the men who helped draft the bill says, "We are much more nationalistic than we thought." It all sounds familiar isn't it? Obviously the air out there is emanating from Ottawa, right? Wrong. All this worry about foreign investment is coming from Washington, D.C. And that's in the United States, the place where most of the people who own most of Canada live. The bill is expected to become law in the next month or two. The fuss in the U.S. is caused, apparently, on Arab money pouring into investments in the U.S. west - unofficially - from $600 million in 1973 to $2 billion in 1975. It seems the money comes mainly from the Middle East by way of London and Switzerland. And suddenly Americans started getting a bit sensitive about foreigners grabbing their land and industries. Most Canadians can certainly appreciate that fear. But we will have to be stunned for snickering behind our hands as we notice how that shoe pinches when it's placed on the other foot.

Non-Ratification By Union Ranks Too Often Unhinges Agreements

BY DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — One of the most thought-provoking statements in this session of Ontario throne speech concerned labor.

In detailing the legislation it said that various groups would be asked to "study and discuss" measures can be made to the basically collectively natures of the collective bargaining process.

The possibilities of suggestion and controversy in this proposal are infinite. And the possibilities of worthwhile developments in the positions of labor and management labor as well as they are, are probably dim.

But one possible ray of light is that the legislation will at least incite discussion.

Hopefully it is such some of this discussion will center on what is perhaps the greatest single weakness in our present bargaining system: The refusal of unions for ratification by vote of new contracts by union memberships.

This ratification procedure is something that has bothered labor relations observers for some time for a good many years.

For it has had a very destructive influence.

Time after time terms of agreement have been reached after lengthy negotiations only to be voted when referred to the membership.

The consequence has been strikes that have been prolonged over, for a time unnecessary, often leading to more bitterness than settlements that have been higher than reasonable and which have stoked inflation.

A senior official of Canada's labor department, William Kelly, has suggested that this ratification after agreements reached by their leaders should be taken away from union members.

Mr. Kelly's is the first important statement by any member of the practice and it is a welcome one.

Whether it will be a successful one is, of course, quite another consideration.

For union leaders at any position of leadership from the top power immediately put on their horror suits and rant about the sanctity of democracy.

This, of course, is a democratic cry. For in our democratic system it is left to leadership to act without consulting doesn't have ratification every, or any, action. The democratic cry is also false in that it can throw out leadership by doesn't agree with.

But a fact of life is that the principles and practices of democracy are little understood by many sectors of the public, including unfortunately labor.

And politicians, as we all know, are afraid of offending labor.

But that while the removal of the veto power quite probably would improve our social, and economic climate, it is the opinion of our seeing it, at least soon, are not hastening.

Haitians Face Deportation

Montreal Gazette

Law may well compel deportation of Haitians, many of the Haitian nationals now living in Montreal. Mr. Andre Ouellet this week by Gazette reporter Jacques Hamilton Commissioner, Police Force says that they should be allowed to stay.

The Haitians, it is said, have run afoul of tougher Canadian immigration regulations which were into effect almost two years ago. Before that they could enter Canada on the same basis as many of their countrymen who were visiting Canada with the economic hardship and political repression endemic in Haiti and arrived here as visitors. They travelled to apply for landed immigrant status later, but under the new regulations the route to Canadian citizenship is now blocked; Immigration officials have said out too late. Sometimes, immigration officials have said, wage them - after all, few "visitors" from Haiti can afford to support themselves for very long.

For as long as they remain by wages vastly superior to what they would get in Haiti, they have come through three agents to Montreal. Once in the Canadian boundaries they arrive quite legally, but they have entered on false pretences.

The 1,200 are not a drag on the economy; virtually all are working, Father Claude Charpentier refuses to talk. Many were deported in 1972 and 1973 after a group of them went on a hunger strike to protest the deportation of a Canadian citizen. Father Charpentier thought the law could be bent; as it constantly is in Haiti and, to some extent, in Canada as well. Were they to be deported, they would face a very real danger, even death, for their political ex posal early 1973 would at least face economic deprivation even if they did find jobs or, as is more likely, starvation should they find themselves friendless in the labor market.

In the past, Canada has gone to extraordinary lengths to accommodate special immigration groups - the Hungarians in 1956 and the Ugandan Asians more recently - some intimidatingly to mind the case for taking ex-Haitians. The presence in short, 1,500 Haitians already here to remain is no less compelling. Besides, the particular situation is unlikely to be repeated. Canada's new immigration station in Port au Prince and tighter control of all Haitian "visitors" to Canada will be being turned back at the border.

Cheap labor from Haiti and elsewhere, legally or illegally to work permits, represents a separate issue. But humanitarian, in this case, the exploiters are not the ones who should suffer. It is also Montreal employers accepting in their services.

For as long as tempted by wages vastly superior to what they would get in Haiti, they have through three agents to Montreal. Once in the Canadian boundaries they arrive quite legally, but they have entered on false pretences.

The 1,200 are not a drag on the economy; virtually all are working, Father Claude Charpentier refuses to talk. Halloween - the fun - feast which children look forward to more than any other, perhaps with the exception of Christmas. Yet each year there is a tragic list of casualties of the Broome Age, called by the Druids as a feast, and dedicated to the dead by adding to it the Christian belief. Cable in their great halls, near the door, on the night, who were believed to be walking the Earth that night. Lighted candles were placed upon the special food set out for them. The finest of silver dishes were filled with fruits, the best of food and drink the choicest of meats, the richest of wines and the greatest of beer.

It was very natural, with such merchful occasion as it is today, and the faces of the living felt enlivened by the fear of the dead, and although games were played and mischief was done, the spirit of the young folk bobbed for apples, even as some do today, and the fear of ghosts in the moaning voices of the Dead, they seemed to hear in the bleak fall wind which whistled around them.

That is why the feast was celebrated in the Fall: with the coast of winter very near — it was the time of the end of the fruitful life which came to the earth in the spring and which flourished in the sun of summer. The forces of evil were believed to be abroad at this season, and it was a time of veneration of witches riding their broomsticks — of black cats mystically prowling in the darkness.

Environment Time Table

Christian Science Monitor

In his statement on growth and environment, President Ford said his policy is "establishing environmental standards that are realistic and attainable." This reflects not only business interests and Nixon administration policy but also the views of many individual Americans who want to reduce environmental damage but are concerned that instead of challenging without reasonable limits. Mr. Ford's position will probably find support recognizing that America's problems will not be solved overnight from a long history of putting environmental needs in second place or farther down on the list. The Lesson is that protecting the environment should not be regarded merely as a worthy option but as an accepted essential of doing business.

Arabs As Source Of Development Capital

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

H. A. Hampson, president of the Canada Development Corp., says that the CDC is willing to buy shares on the market for Canadians who want to invest. He received as a device for letting small investors take some of the profits from the oil boom in their country, and Mr. Hampson is right to point out that these are large inflation, but not yet large enough to make a public stock company, but in fact the federal government in the early stages of its existence. It is also a way of saving the country from being sold out of share in the Canadian economy. It is doubtful whether the CDC will be successful, but it is worth a try. The CDC's resource is worse in 1974 outside the oil industry because of the tax in by Arab oil-producing countries since they became flush with money. Their reserves, at last estimates of their supposedly secret figures, on hand run several billion.

The CDC wants to venture with Arab investors in Canada, a joint venture with Arab investors in Canada, a joint venture to develop Canadian projects, we would hope, and to invest in it. It is imaginative thinking and it deserves a chance. It is worth trying while it. The undoubtedly will be some Arabs who will be to have too much of it, come from one country.

Nevertheless, the use of some of that Arab money would help if well used, and worthwhile investment like Canada and make for a healthier economic situation.

Ann Landers

'Lunching with Secretary Not Cause for Concern'

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are both in our 30s and we have been married for 16 years. I know he has never been interested in another woman until now.

A few months ago, he started a new job. He has been going to lunch nearly every day with his secretary, who is by her own admission, 10 years younger than he. She told me about it herself, and made a big deal out of the fact that they go Dutch.

I don't give a damn who pays, but I find it upsetting that he is lunching with a woman half his age. He says it is just a convenience, that she really doesn't enjoy it, but I notice they don't go to the neighborhood coffeeshop. Every few days they try an interesting new place.

He can't understand why I am perturbed. I cry myself to sleep at night (quietly, so he won't hear me) and sometimes I cry during the day, around lunchtime.

I've offered him his freedom and he tells me I'm crazy. Am I? Is he?—Harpooned

Dear H.: In the absence of any solid evidence, I think you find a vein of juicy making accusations. He may be completely innocent but if you continue to badger him, he might get mean.

My own hunch is there's nothing going on but lunch and a little flattering of the ego. If one of these days, a waitress is found to ask: "And what will you have tonight, honey?" that'll kill his appetite for lunching out.

Dear Ann Landers: Is anyone living with her? I'm 31, married five years and teach school. I don't mind housework but I see no point to doing things in the conventional manner. For example:

I don't press my towels, bed sheets and pillow cases. I just stack them neatly in the linen closet. I put old linens and rag clothes, wrinkles and all, on when I put the linen on the bed and the towels on the rack.

When I hang shirts on the line, I use less clothespins. Instead of two, it doesn't look very fancy, but who cares?

Some of my friends have insinuated that I'm not a good housekeeper. Would you call me lazy or efficient?—I. Yahn Yeo' Word For It

Dear Word: It's your home and you can do as you please but since you asked for my opinion, I'll give it. Any woman who won't take the time to press her bedsheets and pillowcases and stack them in reasonably orderly fashion has got to be a little lazy. Some towels or sheets look OK too folded, but we run ours.

As for hanging a shirt with two clothespins, that's more than lazy, honey, it's stupid. A good shirt comes back on wire hangers and your shirts stand only half as good a chance of staying up as if you had used two clothespins.

Dear Ann Landers: A girl in our office is so thrilled because she landed a professional man (his wife always introduces her self as "Mrs. Doctor Whatchamacallit."

After I heard her do this for the 10th time I took her aside and told her it was not in good taste. She replied, "It saves a lot of time. Whenever I tell anyone I'm Mrs. Whatsheyoucall they ask me if my husband is the surgeon." Who is right? — No Jealousy, Just Interested

Dear N.J.: You are. But save your breath to cool your soup, honey. Your gal isn't interested in etiquette. She wants everybody to know she married a doctor.

Successful Living

Cheap Boyfriend Causes Unhappiness

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Why does money always make people so unhappy? I have been going steady for a year now and my boy friend is really cheap. We go out occasionally, but most of the time we just sit around the house. He has a good job, but he always complaining of how much he spends every day.

I am an open-minded girl and have a good time, we don't fight or anything like that, but lately I am afraid that money will always come between us.

I come from a fairly well-off family and I am used to the finer luxuries of life. Jodie also comes from a fairly wealthy family — his parents have lovely things, but he's afraid to spend money, even on a movie every day or so.

Do you think that once we are married and he sees how other young people live, he might change his mind? We have talked it over but I really am stymied.

Jackie.

Dear Jackie: I'm guessing that money is his god — and the competition can be tough.

If you are living on a higher plane, if you care about people more than material things, if you are deeply interested in the meaning of life, I would take a dim view of any attempt by you at a life partnership with a man who begrudges every penny.

Don't, for heaven's sake, think that you can marry a man and reform him. It has been tried before with dire results.

Dear Doris: Is it proper for two people in their early 40's, not married (perhaps a hello kiss and good-night kiss in front of the public, whether or not at my home or in a neighbor's yard?

My boy friend (of) always give me a kiss. Frankly, I feel ashamed when he kisses me in front of my mother or elderly people. It's not all that affectionate when we are alone, but most of my female friends think he is.

Embarrassed.

Dear Embarrassed: A good deal depends on how you feel about it. We don't have enough affection in our lives, and that's for sure — yet you are still under the spell of your parent's early, prim conditioning.

I have men friends — and some are married ones — who always get a kiss when they arrive, and so do their wives. If it is an old friend for whom you feel warmth and are willing to express it, the short kiss of greeting need not be misunderstood. At 40, you should be the one in charge. I am not talking about a passionate embrace!

We need touching, hand clasps, other indications of caring. But if you worry about what people think, could you communicate your feeling to your friend?

(Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your wedding? Write to Doris, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope for her reply.)

Baking Your Own Bread Is a Beautiful Idea!

The aroma of fresh home-baked bread never fails to delight the senses. If you've previously tried your hand at bread and it didn't quite turn out, we've two more tasty bread try a few more times and you'll soon get your "regular" bread.

Hearty Wheat Bread

2½ cups white flour three cups brown sugar two tsps. salt
two tbsps. yeast
two cups very hot water ½ cup milk
two tbsps. molasses
three tbsps. honey
½ cup margarine

Combine 2 hours. Mix 2½ cups of flour with sugar, salt and yeast. Add hot water, milk, molasses and margarine. Add to dry ingredients (be sure it's very hot water or it will not warm) and beat two minutes. Add more flour to make a thick batter and beat an additional two minutes. Stir in 2 cups of the remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn out to lightly floured surface and knead until smooth and elastic, about ten minutes. Place in greased bowl; turn. Cover; let rise in warm place (85 degrees) until double in bulk, about one hour. Punch down and divide into four halves. Let rest 10 minutes. Shape into four loaves, let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake 25 minutes at 350.

Rich Loaf

½ cup lukewarm water
two tbsps. sugar
one tbsp. yeast
three cups liquid
two tbsps. salt
six tbsps. sugar
six tbsps. shortening
10 cups flour

Dissolve sugar in water, sprinkle yeast on surface, let stand 10 minutes, add sugar, salt, fat. Stir in two cups flour; beat to form smooth batter. Add liquid, remaining flour and stir into batter. Beat vigorously until mixture is very smooth and very elastic.

Turn dough out; form into a dough. Knead, working in remaining flour, until dough is smooth. Cover and let rise about two hours. Punch down, let rise again until nearly double in bulk. Shape into loaves, let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake 25 minutes at 350.

Rich Loaf

½ cup lukewarm water
one tbsp. yeast
three cups liquid
two tbsps. salt
six tbsps. sugar
six tbsps. shortening
10 cups flour

Dissolve sugar in water, sprinkle yeast on surface, let stand 10 minutes, add sugar, salt, fat. Stir in two cups flour; beat to form smooth batter. Add liquid, remaining flour and stir into batter. Beat vigorously until mixture is very smooth and very elastic.

Turn dough out; form into a dough. Knead, working in remaining flour, until dough is smooth. Cover and let rise until light and doubled in size, 1½ to 1¾ hours. Punch down. Shape into loaves, let rise until light and doubled in size, about one hour. Bake 25 minutes at 400 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes until golden brown. Remove from pans immediately.

No-Knead Holiday Braid

3 to 3½ cups all purpose flour
¼ cup sugar
1½ tsp. salt
one package active dry yeast
one cup milk
¼ cup shortening
one egg
one cup chopped mixed candied fruit
¾ cup raisins

In large mixing bowl, combine 1 cup of flour, sugar, salt and dry yeast. In saucepan, heat milk and shortening until milk is warm. Add candied fruit and raisins. Heat until smooth. Stir. In candied fruit and raisins. Gradually stir in remaining flour to form a stiff batter. Turn into greased 9x5 inch loaf pan. Let rise in warm place until light and doubled in size, about 1½ hours. Bake at 350 degree for 50 to 60 minutes until golden brown. For a spicy Holiday Bread, add ½ teaspoon nutmeg with salt.

Isabel's Bread

two cups warm water
one cup warm milk
¼ cup molasses
¼ cup honey
three tbsps. yeast
¼ cup corn oil
one and one tbsp. salt
three cups stone-ground wholewheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
¼ cup rye flour
½ cup gluten flour
¼ cup bran
two or three more cups of whole wheat flour

Combine. In a large bowl, the water, milk, honey, molasses and yeast. Allow yeast to soften for five minutes, then beginning. Then add the salt and three cups of whole-wheat flour.

Mix well, and continue to add the wheat germ, rye and gluten flour and bran.

Beat for seven minutes with an electric mixer or 100 strokes by hand.

Add the remaining two or three cups of flour slowly, until you've added enough to make a stiff dough.

Sprinkle approximately one cup of white flour on your bread board, and turn dough onto it. Knead until the dough is smooth and elastic. Place it in an oiled bowl, smooth out, then turn. Cover with greased side up. Cover with a clean buttered and let it rise in a warm place (85 degrees) until double in bulk (about one hour). Knead and punch down to original size, and let it rise again until double in bulk.

Knead the dough back down to its original size again, and divide into equal parts — for either three small loaves or two medium-sized ones. You can also make four loaves by dividing the dough in four tall fluted coffee cans.

Let the loaves rise until the dough rounds over the top of the pan. Bake in a preheated oven set at 350 degrees for 40 minutes for four loaves, 50 minutes for three loaves or 60-70 minutes for two loaves.

Turn out on a rack to cool and brush the tops with a little butter.

Dorothy's Bread

5 to 5½ cups flour
¼ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages active dry yeast
1¼ cups milk
¼ cup shortening
2 eggs
1 egg white, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon water
poppy seeds or sesame seeds

In large mixer bowl, combine 2 cups of flour; sugar salt and dry yeast. In saucepan, heat milk and shortening until milk is warm. Add eggs and warm milk to flour mixture. Blend at lowest speed until moistened; beat 2 minutes at medium speed. By hand, stir in remaining four to form a stiff dough. Knead on floured surface until smooth and elastic, about 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl; turn. Cover; let rise in warm place until light and doubled in size, 1 to 1½ hours. Punch down. Shape into 24 balls. Place in greased muffin pans. Cover; let rise until light and doubled in size, about 1 hour. Brush with milk, sprinkle on seeds. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes until golden brown. Remove from pans immediately.

Cheese Roll Loaf

two cups 2% of whole wheat flour
one-third cup sugar
three tsp. salt
two packages active dry yeast
one can (10¾oz.) condensed cream soup
one cup water
¼ cup shortening
3½ to 4-cups all-purpose flour four tbsp. butter or margarine, melted one tsp. dill seed
two cups cheddar cheese
Milk
Sesame seeds

In large mixer bowl, combine 2% flour, sugar salt and dry yeast. Heat soup, water and shortening until warm. Add warm liquid to flour mixture; blend at low speed until moistened; beat three minutes at medium speed. By hand, stir in all purpose flour to form a stiff dough. Knead on floured surface until smooth and elastic, about three minutes. Place in greased bowl; turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, until light and doubled in size, 1 to 1½ hours.

Punch down dough; divide in half. Roll out each portion of dough to floured surface to a 12x9 rectangle. Brush each with two tablespoons melted butter; sprinkle with dill seed and cheese. Starting with 9-inch side, roll up; seal edges. Place seam-side down in well-greased 9x5 inch pans. Cover; let rise in warm place until light and doubled in size, about 1 hour. Brush with milk, sprinkle on sesame seeds. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes until golden brown. Remove from pans immediately.

White Bread

two tsps. sugar
one cup warm water
two tbsps. yeast
six tbsps. brown sugar four tbsps. shortening three tsps. salt three cups milk
two cups boiling water five to six cups flour
one egg

Dissolve the sugar in the warm water. Sprinkle on the yeast, yeast. Let stand until bubbly. Combine all ingredients except flour in a large bowl. Let stand until lukewarm. Add yeast and mix well. Add enough flour to make a stiff dough. Knead 10 minutes. Put in greased bowl and let rise until double. Punch down and divide into four halves. Let rest 10 minutes. Shape into four loaves, let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake 25 minutes at 350.

Healthy Fun!

A perfect example of what the "Y" is all about, Angeles Bell swings her way along the climber in the morning nursery for pre-schoolers. Individual fitness for members of every age through sports and swimming programs, is the YMCA goal.

YMCA Programs Well Underway

Autumn brings the opening of the Belleville YMCA season, and a wide array of creational activities to brighten the winter weeks ahead.

This year there are already 1,837 individuals registered in various programs, an increase over last year's total for the end of September.

More than 40 per cent of them are yearly memberships.

Di Diamandes, executive director of the "Y", says he is especially pleased that the "Outreach" sports activities begun three years ago continue to be popular. Loyalist students doing field work for their behavioral science courses volunteer to staff these volleyball, basketball and gymnastic programs.

Without volunteer assistance and without funds provided by the United Way Appeal, the YMCA could not serve the community as well as it does, because membership would have to be prohibitively high, explains Mr. Diamandes.

Helping pay membership fees for persons unable to afford them is one of the ways United Way money now assists the "Y". Over 100 members have received help from this aid, as well as German exchange students who are given free membership.

In the last fiscal year $23,320 of the total YMCA budget of $102,270 came from the United Way funds. Of the most part this money was used to subsidize the pool program, both "free and paid" periods and instruction. Hydrotherapy and fitness training were also made possible by United Way assistance.

Although the swimming pool provides the main focus for YMCA activities, there are many other programs offered in the complex.

Cross-country ski instruction, which proved to be popular last year, will begin again later this fall. Fitness classes for men, women and a new fitness testing program are part of the YMCA emphasis on physical well-being.

The nursery for pre-school children is also a program with more than 60 boys and girls registered for morning and afternoon sessions.

Unemployment Up

Seasonally-adjusted unemployment in Canada last month increased to 5.8 per cent in September, up from 5.5 per cent in the previous month, while actual unemployment rose 4.5 per cent—the labor force, up from the August figure of 4.4 per cent. Economists consider seasonally-adjusted ratios better indicators of the performance of the economy. The total labor force was 9,649,000 in September, down 101,000 from the August figure. (CP Photo)

Day-care Centres Receive Grants

TORONTO (CP) — Day-care grants for 17 centres in Ontario were announced Tuesday by Ross Brackin, minister of community and social services.

The first 17 grants in the new program to expand Ontario's day-care facilities will total more than $1.4 million and will enable the creation or renovation of eight municipal and seven Indian band centres and two centres for migrant day care, the ministry said in a statement.

Municipal centres in receipt of grants are Kingston, York-Thornhill, Toronto with Lower Dufferin, Bowmanville, Peterborough, Hamilton — Wentworth and Brant County.

The seven Indian bands are Saugeen band, Algoma district; Chippewas of Rama, Simcoe County; Long Lake #5 band, Thunder Bay district; Grassy Narrows band, Kenora district; Six Nations band, Cornwall; Fisher Mentally Retarded.

Also receiving grants are Heron Bay bands and West Bay band, Manitoulin Island.

The two charitable organizations in the first round of approvals are the Easter Seals Association for the Mentally Retarded and the Owen Sound and District Association for the

Trent Traffic Steady

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The volume of traffic on the Trent canal last summer compares favorably with last year's record-setting 217,000 vessels, Leonard Rego, operations superintendent for the Trent Canal, said Tuesday.

Mr. Rego said the season started slow when high springwater levels forced closure of several parts of the 240-mile waterway. Exact figures were not released.

Trudeau Makes Trade Trip

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade will continue efforts to balance American economic influence in Canada, Government sources told news briefing Tuesday that the prime minister's visit to Paris and Brussels is part of a "reemphasis on the Western European relationship."

The trip and later visits to the United Kingdom, Italy, West Germany and the Netherlands are part of Ottawa's policy of "paying increased attention to future activities with countries other than the United States" they said.

This is not intended as anti-Americanism but only to balance American political and economic influence on the country.

The prime minister and Mrs. Trudeau leave Saturday morning for the Canadian Forces base in Lahr, West Germany, and spend Sunday there before and travelling to Paris Monday.

Prince Getting New Job?

MELBOURNE (AP) — The Melbourne Herald says Prince Charles is likely to be appointed the next governor-general of Australia.

The newspaper does not identify its sources but says the prince probably will serve a term of one to two years after the current tenure is about five years of Sir John Kerr, the current governor-general. Sir John, 69, took up his duties this year.

Police Pay

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario and Quebec are paying far too much of more than $200 million from the federal government in compensation for running their own police forces, Solicitor-General George Kerr of Ontario said Tuesday.

"We would like some reimbursement because we, along with Quebec, are the only provinces which maintain our own police forces," said Mr. Kerr in an interview.

Ontario is asking for about $278 million and Quebec is requesting $203 million in compensation payments, Mr. Kerr said.

Hartz Fined

TORONTO (CP) — Hartz Mountain Pet Supplies Ltd. of St. Thomas was fined $15,000 in court Tuesday for fixing the prices of its products.

Evidence in the case showed Hartz had told retailers not to discount Hartz branded items and that it had refused that they would be cut off from distribution if they did.

Use P

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has announced that its parking sign will be replaced starting Jan. 1 with an international sign showing a large black letter P with a circle around it and a slash through it.

The change affects new road signs only, with existing signs changed when they require replacement.

No Spreader

HALTON HILLS, Ont. (CP) — Plans for an environmentalist parade—including a tractor pulling a fully-loaded manure spreader — through Toronto's posh Queen's Park, have been cancelled, a spokesman for the University of Toronto's Pollution Probe said Tuesday.

Bill Johnson, an official of the Group United Against Rural Dumping (GUARD), said Monday the manure spreader would be the grungy final in the parade organized by various Toronto environmental groups.

Halton Hills is just west of Brampton.

New Plant

WOODSTOCK (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. plans to build a multi-million-dollar national parts distribution centre on a 300-acre site here, it was announced Tuesday.

In a joint announcement, Mayor Leslie J. Cook, Reeve Wesley Dew of East Oxford Township and David Collier, president of GM Canada, said construction of the million-square-foot warehouse is expected to begin early in 1975.

But a decision to purchase the land, now held under option, will depend on soil tests scheduled to be finished by the end of October, the announcement said.

The new centre, which would employ about 250 persons, will stock parts that have a high turnover or warranty rate, Mr. Collier said. The warehouse will be the basic supply outlet for eight distribution centres across Canada.

Mr. Collier said at a news conference that the existing national warehouse in Oshawa will become a parts distribution warehouse for GM dealers in Ontario.

Indians Need More Housing

OTTAWA (CP) — Government housing programs for Indians are akin to supply for newer homes than necessary to shelter the country's 300,000 registered Indians, the Commons Indian affairs committee was told Tuesday.

Pierre Lessard, assistant deputy minister for Indian affairs department, said 30,000 new homes for Indians are needed in the next five years.

But only a tenth, or 2,000 houses, will be built in 1974.

Reuter May Resign

TORONTO (CP) — Allan Reuter, Speaker of the Ontario legislature, stated Tuesday that he may resign his post but would not confirm or deny rumors that he had already written a letter of resignation.

"It will be entirely up to the premier (William Davis) when and if there's to be a public announcement," he said in an interview.

Mr. Reuter, 60, a diabetic who suffers from asthma and emphysema, collapsed in the legislature Dec. 21 and was admitted to hospital.

The Conservative Indian affairs critic, Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands), described the figures as "shocking and shattering."

After the meeting, she said she had "no idea in Hell was being done."

Mr. Lessard said the department is still awaiting final approval by the National Indian Brotherhood for a new housing program which will allow Indians to use Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) funds for home construction.

In the meantime, the bulk of Indian housing is paid for through government grants of $18,000 for each new house.

Liberal Ian Watson (Lapp rairie) asked why there had been more than a year's delay in implementing the new agreement with CMHC which would allow Indians the same access to housing funds available to other Canadians.

Mr. Lessard replied that the department had only submitted its findings on the program last summer, and that it would have been premature for the department to go ahead without the brotherhood's approval.

Ford Talks Turkey

KANSAS CITY (AP) — After thinking the Democratic-controlled Congress far too extravagant in economic programs, President Ford set up campaign stops in five states today in behalf of Republican candidates.

After a two-day economic conference on inflation, Ford flew to Kansas City, Mo., for a luncheon speech before returning to the White House early today.

Ford spent Tuesday night in the Kansas City suburb of Mission Hills, where he told a Republican rally that Congress doesn't like his program for federal spending to fight inflation and, if Congress doesn't turn, "I don't see how we're going to get back on the right track."

To an audience of about 9,000 in the Kansas City convention center, Ford said some people were continuing his battle to fight inflation "and I'm going to keep it up whether Congress likes it or not."

"For the life of me, I can't understand why Congress doesn't go along with some tough votes," Ford said.

"In an atmosphere of about nine months ago, Congress passed three months of a 5.5-per-cent pay raise for federal employees. Federal employees didn't would have saved four times as much. I wonder who got over that transaction?"

Ford said Congress has yet to show much appetite for some of his other proposals, "and that's my latest message," and said "I'll leave that for them. Maybe they may be back with some tough votes."

Ford outlined a 10-point program which he said would help fight inflation. It included help Americans. The 10 points:

1. "Bring budgeting back in style. Balance your family budget and expect your government officials to do exactly the same."

2. "Learn how to use credit wisely. Postpone unnecessary borrowing. Wait for interest rates to come down as it they will, and pay down as much as you can, and quickly as you can."

3. "Shop as much as you can — and watch your money grow."

4. "Conserve energy."

5. Let business and labor avoid raising prices or wages more than costs or services absolutely require."

6. "Work better; waste less of both time and materials" on the job.

7. "Buy wisely. Ask for facts about "Oil" for the home and heat and brag about the fact you're a bargain hunter."

8. "Eliminate outmoded regulations that keep costs of goods and services high and enforce regulations that advance efficiency, health and safety."

9. Plant backyard gardens.

10. Avoid "in plugging" programs and the re-use of scrap materials."

11. "Waste less in every way."

12. "Guard your health. One of the worst wastes we have in America is days lost to sickness."

The president's talk to the youthful farm group was broadcast by major television and radio networks. The networks had initially decided Ford's talk was not significantly newsworthy to merit prime-time transmission, but they reversed after the White House said for the time "in the public interest."

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says plans put forward by Robert Andras, federal immigration minister, to cut back on immigration have met with almost universal opposition from other ministers who consider them disenthusiasm.

The newspaper quotes a cabinet source as saying that opposition will surround Mr. Andras's proposal, the effect of which would be to reduce immigration from South America, Asia, the Caribbean and parts of Europe by making more strict the regulations that allow parents, relatives of people already in the country can be sponsored for entry.

However, it says the source for comment.

Mackasey Has No Time for Postal 'Goons'

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey served notice Tuesday that he will be a "stalinist" as well as a sympathetic boss when dealing with employees of the often-beleaguered post office.

Mr. Mackasey told MPs at a Commons transport committee hearing there is a malaise in the post office that can be corrected by improved working conditions, but added there are also tight and wrong ways of resolving employee grievances.

"There is no room in the post office for goons and bandits," he said. "If they choose to act outside the law, they will find I can be tough."

Mr. Mackasey estimated about one per cent of postal employees are a disgrace to the department. The rest have produced one of the best postal services in the world, he said.

The new postmaster-general, who returned to the cabinet just before the July federal election after an 18-month absence, said he is consulting now with getting a fair new collective agreement for about 25,000 postal employees, speeding up grievance handling and increasing the voice of employees in decision-making.

Mr. Jr. said last week's decertification of the Council of Postal Unions, which bargained for both letter carriers and inside postal workers, came at an inopportune time and "Rudy" gabing can begin.

Seeks Larger Quorum

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Party MP Stanley Knowles wants MPs to spend more time in the Commons.

Mr. Knowles, (Winnipeg North Centre), the NDP House leader who is seldom away there from his seat during Commons sittings, introduced a private for the 63-member legislature of members' Mr. Tuesday as An Act to Amend the Senate and the House of Commons.

Under House rules at least 20 members have to be in their seats for Commons business to continue.

Mr. Knowles said outside the house that the existing rule dates to pre-Confederation days when there was a quorum of 40 sittings, introduced a private for the 63-member legislature of Lower Canada.

"It's away out of date," he said.

Stockyards Criticized

STOUFFVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Stens—are about treatment of animals at the Stouffville operation. Stouffville is just north of Toronto.

Mr. Hughes said he has heard of calves brought to auction with their legs tied together and chickens tied in bunches of 12 and put into plastic bags.

Andras, Cabinet Differ On Immigration Barrier

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says plans put forward by Robert Andras, federal immigration minister, to cut back on immigration have met with almost universal opposition from other ministers who consider them disenthusiasm.

The newspaper quotes a cabinet source as saying that opposition will surround Mr. Andras's proposal, the effect of which would be to reduce immigration from South America, Asia, the Caribbean and parts of Europe by making more strict the regulations that allow parents, relatives of people already in the country can be sponsored for entry.

However, it says the source for comment.

Courthouse Basement Most Cluttered in Town

SASKATOON (CP) — The Saskatoon courthouse has one of the most cluttered basements in town.

Clothing, table legs, baseball bats and a variety of other objects are squirreled away in boxes, Automatic fires, part of a roof, pieces of chrome and a portion of a heating system are stacked against the walls.

All these, together with more sinister items like pistols, blood-stained axes and vials containing human tissue, are exhibits from court cases. Their custodian is Orvold Hedgecock, the courthouse registrar, who says disposing of his collection is a major problem.

The exhibits reach his basement after the preliminary hearing of a criminal case or at the start of a civil action. But the end of a trial does not take them off his hands.

None of them are released without a court order. And to get a court order is forthcoming unless appeal procedures have been exhausted, which may take years. If the accused is convicted, he cannot recover personal belongings used as exhibits until he is released from custody.

When the accused is found not guilty by reason of insanity and confined, exhibits are kept until the matter is finally resolved and the accused released.

In all cases, an order for the release of exhibits requires the approval of a solicitor who waived. Sometimes a lawyer has moved away from the area long ago and they remain in the basement indefinitely.

Some items have been there 30 years.

The piece of roofing, five feet by three, dates back to a 1949 dispute between the Kershaw Oak school unit and a construction firm. Neither side appears to be anxious to reclaim it.

The portion of the heating system was required to adjudicate an accounting suit of a fire in a Saskatoon business. The owners appear to have made other heating arrangements.

Donald Hibbert, deputy registrar, recalled a 1967 murder trial in which a chair of the dead body was being used. During the trial, a defence counsel said that the chair be released because it was urgently needed.

Robot Inspects Hulls

SOUTHAMPTON, England (CP) — A submersible robot has been designed to inspect the hulls of ships docked and far away with the need for dry-docking.

The first sea trials of the prototype have been successfully completed beneath the 285,000-ton British Petroleum tanker British Purpose, moored off the west coast of Scotland.

SCAN, as the device is called, SCAN, is controlled and constructed by engineers and scientists at the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority under a research contract placed by Underwater Maintenance Company of Southampton.

The saucer-shaped vehicle, some five feet in diameter, carries two television cameras, lighting equipment and a still camera. Underwater maintenance islands to use it to replace where possible the visual inspections normally carried out on giant tankers in dry-dock.

In operation the vehicle is manoeuvred by divers to its starting position under the hull and concerned all is used to keep it in place against the tanker's bottom plates. Control is then taken over by an operator on a tender or jetty beside the ship.

An Atomic Energy Authority spokesman said recent tests have proved that SCAN handles well even in poor weather conditions and is capable of performing closely-controlled movements over large bad areas.

Former Quebec Politician J.N.Tremblay, Becomes Priest

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Noel Tremblay, former cultural affairs minister of Quebec, has kept a secret from his closest friends.

At the age of 46, he has decided to become a priest and pick up the strands of a vocation first woven with the Redemptorist Order of Brothers in St. Anne de Beaupre and in St. Anne de la Pocatiere, Que.

Renouncing a $30,000 annual salary as special adviser to the Quebec cultural affairs department, former Union Nationale minister moved to Chicoutimi to slip quietly into the anonymous life of a Grand Seminary student.

Since his defeat as a candidate in the October, 1973 election he has refused to be interviewed and transferred all questions to his secretary-supervisor.

Former colleagues were surprised to learn of his plans to change his profession from politician to priest.

"At no time did he mention his decision," said Judge Paul. "We just exchanged reminiscences of our days in the government. We didn't have much chance to talk, but I was very surprised when I found out.

"He talked with my wife and mother and several judges who knew him — he's very popular — and he never said anything."

This made Judge Paul doubt that his friend will actually become a priest.

"I don't know, I should call him, but it's very important," he said. "I think he needs a sabbatical year — not that I think he won't make a good priest. He was one of the best politicians in Quebec, well informed on every problem.

"If he does become a priest, it will be different, but so could he'll make a very good priest."

Mr. Tremblay and Judge Paul have been friends since their days as Progressive Conservative members of the House of Commons.

They had been asked by UN leader Maurice Duplessis to go there to "save Quebec's autonomy," said Judge Paul.

He said Mr. Tremblay called Confederation a "fool's paradise," but always showed respect for both church and political authorities.

Former agriculture minister Clement Vincent said the transition for Mr. Tremblay will be a little another person changing from a politician to family life. "I don't see any problems."

Mr. Vincent also spoke with Mr. Tremblay at Judge Paul's swearing-in ceremony and thought the story was a rumor.

"But if it's confirmed, then I'm not surprised," he said. "He was always a strong Catholic. He spoke to us often about different religious ceremonies he attended and would be seen at church.

"He always defended the church and morality. About others, one could say that he had no morals, but not Mr. Tremblay. It came across."

Oil Companies Seek Formula To Make Profits Palatable

CALGARY (CP) — Canadian oil companies, embarrassed over their apparent soaring profits of last year, are seeking a revised formula for reporting their earnings.

In the face of heavy criticism from consumers and politicians the companies are looking for a way to express their belief that profits, which may appear astronomical to the layman are not greatly high during a period of galloping inflation.

"If inflation is here to stay at the rates we are now experiencing, then we will certainly need a new form of accounting," said a spokesman for the Canadian Petroleum Association.

Many oil companies are believed to be studying implementation of a new practice known as inflation accounting or present-value accounting.

The goal is to remove the distorting effect inflation has on a company's profits. It attempts to report "true profits" by adjusting figures which are due primarily to inflation.

Shell Canada Ltd. became the first Canadian oil company to use inflation accounting last July. In its statement of earnings for the first six months of 1974, Shell published the profits in terms of both standard and inflation accounting.

According to standard accounting, Shell's first-half earnings totalled $73.7 million. Using inflation accounting, the figure was $46 million.

In releasing its two versions, Shell said the effects of inflation include "a significant overstatement of reported earnings when measured on the traditional basis of historical cost."

"This overstatement is a matter of serious concern because it fosters the illusion that industry profits are excessive—an illusion which can precipitate, royalty and regulatory policies that impair the industry's capacity to finance the development of new higher cost energy sources.

The accounting profession at large has not yet decided exactly how inflation accounting should work. But a committee of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants (CICA) is examining the issue and expects to report its findings sometime next year.

William Dolsberg, a member of the committee, said whether inflation accounting will become common in Canadian business depends on whether inflation continues to rise.

He said the accounting profession in the United States realized ways of incorporating inflation in company reports five years ago, but few firms took up the practice.

Other Canadian industries are examining inflation accounting.

The Canadian Pulp and Paper Association has undertaken a formal study in which it will interview and co-ordinate the efforts of its members in an attempt to formulate an industry-wide policy.

Sportsmen Asked To Help

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — The British Columbia fish and wildlife branch is calling on hunters and anglers to make written reports on illegal acts by other sportsmen they see in the field this hunting season.

The new "Observe, Record, Report" program was developed with the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

A branch spokesman explained that unethical hunters are a dangerous minority who can damage the reputation of hunters and deplete wildlife resources.

Newspapers Raise Prices To Meet Higher Costs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

More than half of Canada's 111 daily newspapers have increased their selling prices during the last year to counteract rising costs of production and distribution.

In most provinces, all or a majority of the dailies put up their prices for single-copy sales and for mailed copies to attend sales, home delivery or from 12¢ all three.

The exception was New Brunswick, where only one of four dailies—the French-language l'Evangeline in Moncton—went up. It kept single-copy price at 15 cents but increased annual charge for delivery to $18 from $16 and for mailed copies to $25 from $22.

Publishing companies cited increases in the costs of such elements as newsprint, printer's ink—lifted by oil prices—staff wages and distribution as reasons for their own increases.

In general, they shared the additional revenue with delivery boys and operators of newsstands and sales boxes.

Students Playing Political Games

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A simple play about Charles de Gaulle during the 1961 Algerian insurrection or a Communist worker fights Communists during Kuomintang's invasion of Shanghai in 1927.

These are two characters whose problems are being studied by first-year political science students at Capilano College this year.

The course, a comparative study of the politics of France and China, will revolve around simulation games in which groups of students play roles. Each game centres about 15 players and takes about three hours.

Each side must decide how it wants to use the power it has and each side plays and plans against the other. At the end of the game, positions are compared and a winner is declared.

For people who cannot come to the campus for games, board versions, requiring only two players and a referee, have been developed.

With the games go specially-prepared booklets and color reproduces on the history, culture, government and socialization of each country.

Instructor Sarah Gaspenelli said she hopes the tapes will be shown by school boards throughout the British Columbia power network.

The college also offers an interesting method of learning chemistry.

The course allows students to work at their own speed.

The chemistry course is divided into 19 parts called modules. Students proceed through each module at their own rate and can go on to a test before they can go on to the next.

A workbook for the course has been written by Dr. Penny McCutcheon, and she has recorded tapes for it.

Everything in the course except laboratory work can be done at home. Students are encouraged to go to the college laboratory every week but if that isn't possible during the week for work, laboratory weekends are set.

Both Dr. McCutcheon and Mrs. Gaspenelli said they want to help students who have been left behind.

Transmission Line Study for Prince Edward County

An Ontario Hydro Study team has for some months been examining alternative routes and voltages for the transmission of additional electric power into the County.

Since February, when public meetings were held in your area, the team has gathered and evaluated precise information concerning alternative rights-of-way from the mainland into the County. As a result, Ontario Hydro will recommend to the Minister of Energy for his consideration that a 230,000 volt transmission line be constructed from a point southwest of Napanee to a new transformer station near Picton. Ontario Hydro will further recommend that submarine cable be used to cross the Long Reach.

You are invited to examine the material which has been compiled and to discuss the recommendation and the alternatives with Hydro's representatives at the following information centre:

October 24, 25 and 26
Ministry of Agriculture and Food Building—Napanee
(Please enter from Robert Street)

Open to the public...
9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Thursday and Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Saturday.

Maps and aerial photographs illustrating the alternative rights-of-way, together with background data, will be on display. We hope that you will visit the information centre; however, if that is not convenient and if you have a specific question about the study, please write to:

Board Approves Student Exemptions

Hastings County's most famous school dropout, director of education Eric Rumsave, Tuesday night saw trustees reverse themselves and agree to exemption of students two years before the end of compulsory schooling at 16.

With the inception of county boards in 1999 came compulsory education until 16, a magnificent ideal of hope of early Ontario educators.

But it didn't work.

The ideal was a disaster in practice.

"Certain 14 and 15 year olds can cause so much pain in attendance," said Mr. Rumsave.

Enter himself dropped out legally at 15.

The Ontario government now has a bill before the legislature, that would allow students to quit at 14 or 15.

Hastings County's "still" grant ministry approval to boards to exempt 16-year-olds before the legislation is passed.

Hastings County board agreed to the exemption and set up machinery to safeguard its operation.

A student of 14 or 15 who wishes to leave immediately must get his parents to apply to the director. After personal consultation with the school principal, the director will arrange a meeting of the school attendance councillor, the student, the parents and the principal of the school to discuss the evidence of the parents, the student and the principal and makes final disposition of the case.

If the student is allowed to leave school, his name is carried on the attendance register of the school until June of the year he turns 16. In this way, the board of education continues to receive government grants for the student.

Trustee Earl Hawley of Tweed voted against the motion on the grounds that parents of kids who cannot cope in high school, although the students might be capable and desirous of continuing.

Trustee Hawley says parents want their children working at 14 or 15, when they are capable of much more. They believe they won't be protected, that's my fear," said Mr. Hawley.

Sidney Township:

More Voters, Fewer Polls

By COLIN BEUCE
Staff Reporter

The number of polls in Sidney Township polling booths for the upcoming November election has been reduced by 20 per cent while the number of eligible township voters has increased from 7,600 to 9,400 since the last campaign.

Council Tuesday night reviewed each polling station and clipped five of last year's 25 polls. Council also reduced the advance polls from two to one.

The principal reason for the reduction is that of the 7,681 two years ago only 18 per cent turned out to the polling booths.

The Ontario Municipal Election Act states "where practicable, the number of voters at any one station should not exceed 350."

However, many of the township's 29 remaining polling stations will have to accommodate more than 350 potential voters.

A prime example of small township voter turnout is CFB Trenton — included in township elections for the first time in 1972.

Four polling stations were arranged to handle the base's 1,500 voters. Six voters showed to vote for the deputy reeve's position and the highest number for a councillor totalled seven votes.

This year council has decided to place only two polls at the air station.

"People on the base hope they don't have much to do with township politics," said one councillor.

Also hit in council's reduction are area rural hamlets.

While the council is responsible for placing a polling station in the county Tweedsmore, private establishments with smaller populations are being left as a judgment call between the council and the operator.

At least one nursing home told council it did not have the facilities for a polling station and preferred not to have one and a second will get a station only if it wants one.

The reduction in polls will mean an election savings in the township taxpayer of about $428, said treasurer Hugh Lyons. Council recommended the reduction several weeks ago. This savings is calculated on the revised pay schedule for poll staff and rental authorized by council Tuesday.

In the past, Sidney Township election staff "were about the lowest paid in the area," said Reeve Lloyd Wilman. Deputy Returning Officers (DRO) received $17, poll clerks $15 and the polling place was rented for $17.

Council agreed Tuesday to raise the DRO's pay to $25, poll clerk to $20 and polling place to $30.

Paperwork Increasing

The amount of correspondence and general paperwork handled by Sidney Township is steadily increasing. Discussion of correspondence — largely originating from municipal and provincial governments — takes the major part of council meetings. Reeve Gord Wilman and his township clerk Hugh Lyons answer correspondence to bring only the important pieces to council's attention but council is still left to deal with an average of 25 pieces of correspondence each meeting.

Hazard Designation Termed 'Unrealistic'

TRENTON — Town council has cleared the way for the location of at least one major new industry in Trenton with an agreement with Trenton to rezone an official plan hazard land designation from a place of light-armed land west of Douglas Rd.

The approximate 16-acre parcel, immediately east of the Moore - Business Forms plant, now is partially developed and land which, it is said, cannot be used for industry.

Councillors admit at least one farm, as yet unnamed, has expressed interest in the property.

The official plan amendment was recommended for council's approval Tuesday by the planning board and Trenton Planning Board. Only provincial approval of housing approval now is needed before any public industry-town agreement is signed.

Six objections to the amendment were delivered to the planning board, but by the time it met Tuesday, all had been withdrawn, clearing the way for council's approval.

Three local builders were among the objectors.

Objections restated previous angry claims from Trenton builders and developers that the hazard land designations were unrealistic. At the time the draft zoning bylaw was publicly presented, developers asked for a total revision of designations.

Quinte Planning Board deputy director Frank Sobrans said such a move now is unlikely because of the bulk of the Trent River will be classed by high risk areas. The May-

Official Promises Land Review

TRENTON — Existing official plan hazard land designations in Trenton will soon be divided into high-and low-risk areas by provincial officials, Quinte Planning Board deputy director Frank Sobrans told town council Tuesday.

He said redesignations he expects to complete in conjunction with provincial authorities by mid-January after present boundaries.

Sobrans underestimated accuracies of both boards of the Trent River will be classed by high risk areas. The May-

Sidney to Consider Trenton Funds Request

Sidney Township Council deferred any decision Tuesday concerning a grant to subsidize township children participating in Trenton recreational programs until it has had a chance to discuss the situation with the township recreation committee.

Last month Trenton advised the township that either it contributes to the cost of recreation programs through a municipal grant or the child in question will have to pay over and above normal registration fees — non-resident children.

Based on Trenton statistics, more than 30 per cent of Trenton hockey participants are from Sidney. Also, 40 per cent in figure skating and five per cent in swimming programs. The township's grant to Trenton suggested for the last year, Sidney's contribution to minor hockey in Trenton programs would be $4,000.

Trenton did not announce what surcharges would be levied for the township refused to pay the grant.

The township recreation committee is expected to meet shortly to discuss the situation and make some recommendation to council.

Official Participate

Sidney Township Reeve Gord Wilman and Deputy Reeve Glenn Rogers will attend a Canada Day luncheon hearing in Picton tonight to provide input into briefing paper of feeders lines from the municipal into Prince Edward County. While the suggestion in an Ontario Hydro letter is that the line could possibly be in the form of a submerged cable crossing the county near Long Reach, there is also a possibility it may be routed through Sidney Township on overhead wires. Council made no concerned either way. Approach at Tuesday's council meeting.

Course Preview Offered

A special preview meeting of the Dale Carnegie Course will be held at the Four Seasons Hotel tonight beginning promptly at 8:00 (correct) p.m. Those attending (the public) will be taught a basic memory technique as an introduction to those attending. The Dale Carnegie course is being offered in Belleville by GBQ.

Seminars Planned

A special preview of the XOCET seminars will take place at the Four Seasons Hotel at 11 from at 10 p.m. The eight-week course which is soon to be offered stresses personal development in your life and job.

Hayer Blamed

Picton firefighters were called to 101 Union St. Monday morning when a space heater became overheated. No damage was reported to the brown house owned by Norval Loveder of RR 1, Picton.

Heading for Water

Work is underway on construction of new pipeline which will stretch 1,500 feet into the Bay of Quinte to offset increased pressure on city water supplies. Initial construction phase sees blasting holes being drilled in bedrock at filtration plant for excavation of pumping chamber.

Town Advises Residents To Check Voters List

TRENTON — Voters lists for the upcoming Dec. 7 municipal election will be posted in various public buildings here Friday, town deputy clerk Avien Reeve said today.

The preliminary voters' lists, whose numbers have increased by roughly 200 to 8,383 since the 1972 election, to check the lists for possible inaccuracies or omissions.

Lists are posted in schools, fire halls, parts as polls, the post office, library, police station and town offices.

The deputy clerk said any changes in the list must be made at town offices during business hours. Deadline for changes is Nov. 1 at which time a special form — a clerk's certificate — will be needed to be eligible to vote.

Nov. 1 is the cut-off date for revisions to the present list. Before then, any changes or additions will be added to a supplementary voters' list that will go directly to deputy returning officers (DRO) at each of the town's 10 polls.

On election day if an individual has not yet been placed on either list, the DRO can issue an eligibility document at the poll.

However, Mr. Reeve said prospective voters should check lists now. Election night polls could be busy, he said.

An individual is eligible to vote if he or she is a Canadian citizen or British subject, 18 years of age on or before Dec. 7, and has lived in Trenton during the Sept. 3 to Oct. 8 enumeration period, if a person or spouse is not a town resident, and an owner or tenant of land in Trenton, a vote is possible.

Pensioners Offer Advice To Senior Residents

Social aid schemes have expanded in recent times.

But the increase also means more paperwork for pensioners, many of whom remain unaware of the total benefits to which they're entitled, says H. Glynne Jones.

Mr. Jones is president of Pensioners Concerned, Belleville and district chapter.

The organization aims is spreading the word about its counselling service for aiding the elderly.

Some 8,000 pamphlets now are being distributed to community organizations, social agencies and individuals.

The pamphlet lists the social benefits on which the service offers its advice to the community's elderly.

These range from medicare to income tax to provincial and federal income supplements.

There are about 4,000 members in Belleville, Mr. Jones estimates, many of whom need assistance in filling out forms or obtaining information on the social assistance programs involving the elderly.

"It's amazing the number of people who don't know what they're entitled to," says Mr. Jones.

Proving the point, he says, is the steady succession of callers to the service since it was organized earlier this year with a $2,300 grant from the federal New Horizons program and $900 from the provincial government.

The funding runs out early next year, and the organization already is seeking alternative sources of financing including private foundations, says Mr. Jones.

The information, housed in the United Community Services building at 33 Bridge St., draws its staff from the 10 directors and 11 volunteers who are the Pensioners Concerned working core.

This year, volunteers took a course on income tax statements from local federal taxation officials and assisted visiting home residents and other elderly shut-ins with returns.

The Belleville chapter of Pensioners Concerned was organized two years ago during a campaign seeking municipal tax relief for the elderly.

The organization still seeks relief from local education taxes, free health services and income tax exemptions up to $5,000 for married pensioners.

Pensioners' Aid

Pensioners will find guides to assistance in dealing with social welfare problems in these pamphlets prepared by H. Glynne Jones. He's president of Pensioners Concerned Belleville chapter, which has counselling service for elderly.

Travelogue Films Provide World Tour

The Belleville Kiwanis Club is providing residents with a chance to tour the world without leaving their seats.

The course, through the club's annual Travel and Adventure Series which will include seven films about travel, adventure and explorers' lives are astride in the travelogue field.

Each is a professional production with many years experience in travelling and filming the many beautiful and interesting places around the world.

The man who personally filmed these all-color pictures appears on each to narrate his film.

The first program Greenland: An Odyssey by Jan Gierkey will take place Oct. 17 at Centennial Secondary School. The remaining five films will also be held at Centennial Secondary School for all films set at 8:15 p.m.

They are: Nov. 14, Mountain safari (Skiyers From Canada to Kenya); Dec. 5, Journey to Greenland will be shown while on Jan. 9, Days in Scotland — A Highland Fling by Alan and Irene Pankuchen.

Australia: Jaques by James Fowler will be shown Feb. 6; Innsbruck to Florence by Howard Richard takes place on March 6, while, finally, the last travel series is Nicol Smith's Fiji, Western Samoa and Tonga.

A season ticket for all six travelogues is $8. Money raised goes to help the Belleville Kiwanis Club continue its work on many projects.

Designated Runner A Big Out

Herb Washington, a former sprint champ signed by the A's as a "designated runner," is trapped off first and out in the ninth inning in Los Angeles Sunday. Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey takes the throw from his pitcher. Washington represented the tying run, in the ninth inning, as the A's lost 3-2. (AP Photo)

We've Beaten Ourselves—Ferguson

OAKLAND (AP) — Joe Ferguson opened the gates and Reggie Jackson ran through them.

"I won't run full speed unless money is on the line," said the Oakland A's Jackson, who faced that situation and hustled to first base on a key play in Tuesday night's 3-2 third-game World Series victory over Los Angeles Dodgers.

Jackson, who was a doubtful starter for the series opener last Saturday because of a muscle-straining muscle, logged through most of the pre-game practice.

"There's no money involved in batting practice," he said with a smile.

But with runners on first and third and two out in the third inning, Jackson helped break up a scoreless tie when he chopped a high bouncer in front of home plate.

"When I saw they weren't going to get me, I thought I had a base hit—I thought I'd chopped the ball that high," said Jackson, who estimated he was running first base at two-thirds of his normal speed.

But Ferguson, the Dodgers' catcher who was Saturday's fielding hero with a perfect throw that threw home from right field on a ball hit by Jackson, made an error trying to field the bouncer. The first two unearned A's runs scored on the play.

"I was running fast, had the ball in the webbing of my glove and when I squeezed, it popped out," explained a disconsolate Ferguson.

Ferguson committed another error in the fourth inning—equalling a World Series record for most errors by a catcher in one game.

On that play, a throw from centre fielder Jimmy Wynn skipped to the plate, and Ferguson tried to just dive-sweep after the ball trying to stop it.

"They still haven't really beaten us," added Ferguson, even though the A's hold a 3-1 advantage in games in the best-of-seven series. "We've beaten ourselves. Jim Hunter (the winning pitcher Tuesday night) is good, but he had some luck behind him."

Ferguson and the other Dodgers, plus manager Walter Alston, referred to line drives that were hit right at Oakland players—twice winding up in costly double plays.

When newspaper men suggested the Dodgers hadn't been hitting the ball well, Alston retorted: "You must not have watched the same game I did."

"I just hope they hit as well tomorrow night (tonight)."

"We were hitting some good line shots," said outfielder Bill Buckner, who got the Dodgers on the scoreboard with a home run in the eighth. "I hit a fast ball that was up."

Confident A's in Driver's Seat

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's don't plan on going back to Los Angeles.

"We're a very emotional ballclub and we could start steamrolling," said Reggie Jackson after the A's beat Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 Tuesday night and took a 2-1 lead in the World Series.

The A's, confident and comfortable in Oakland Coliseum, can finish off the National League champions if they win the next two games here, with Ken Holtzman pitching tonight and Vida Blue Thursday night.

"I know we will be facing a couple of 20-game winners," A's manager Alvin Dark said of Andy Messersmith and Don Sutton. "But we've got a couple of 20-game winners, too, in Catfish Hunter and Holtzman, nor Blue won 20 games in 1971, but Dark contended: "I consider them all 20-game winning pitchers."

The A's have cashed in on all the breaks to beat the Dodgers in the first and third games.

"If you make a mistake against a great ball club like ours, you're going to get beat," said Jackson.

Los Angeles catcher Joe Ferguson, the goat of the game with two errors, agreed with Jackson.

"They are definitely a team of opportunity," Ferguson said of the A's.

The first opportunity for Oakland came in the third inning after pitcher Catfish Hunter struck out against Al Downing. Centre fielder Bill North singled sharply to left for his first hit of the series and went to third on Bert Campaneris' ground ball to third baseman Ron Cey.

North's aggressive base running paid off moments later as Sal Bando walked on a 3-2 count. Jackson bounced a ball up in front of the plate and Ferguson muffed it, allowing the first run of the game. Joe Rudi then singled to centre, driving in Campaneris' run and moving Bando and the A's had a 2-0 lead for 25-game winner Hunter.

Downing walked Dick Green leading off the Oakland fourth, and the A's found a way to get him all the way around.

Hunter sacrificed the runner to second and, after North filed to Bill Buckner in left field, Campaneris singled home the A's third run—the one which turned out to be their game-winner.

The Dodgers produced only some runs by Buckner and Willie Crawford in the eighth and ninth innings, but reliable Rollie Fingers preserved Hunter's victory.

Hunter was lifted after giving up Buckner's blast in the eighth.

Left-hander Downing, not as heralded as Hunter, appeared to be a victim of fate.

"I don't think he pitched badly," Los Angeles manager Walter Alston said of Downing, who only won five games in 1972.

But Downing didn't last through the fourth inning.

Loyalist Wins A 'Must' Game

"We needed this win to stay in contention for the playoffs," said Loyalist College soccer coach, Brian Cameron.

The Lancers soccer team remained in good position in the Eastern College Athletic Association Soccer League when they defeated Durham College 3-2 at St. James Whitney School, Tuesday.

The victory gave Loyalist a share of first place with a 10-won lost record and one game left to play.

"We've got one more shot at St. Lawrence, Kingston," added Cameron, "and we have to win there to take first and a playoff spot."

St. Lawrence is tied with Loyalist for first.

The Lancers got two goals from left winger Corie Golee in the first half to hold down a 3-1 lead.

Durham's goal was scored by John McBride early in the game.

In the second half Dan Burgess scored things back up for Durham, but Loyalist's Eldridge Barrows put the Lancers in front to stay with 10 minutes left to play.

Forced Out

Loyalist's Tony Veldstra (14) forces Durham College attacker out of bounds in Tuesday's contest. The Lancers won the game 3-2 to remain in contention in the Eastern Ontario College Athletic Association soccer league.

Surrounded

Wade Brown, Loyalist halfback, found himself in a hotspot Tuesday night in an Eastern Ontario College Athletic Association soccer league game at Sir James Whitney field. Brown was being forced by a Durham halfback from behind and Durham's middie halfback, Mike Asante (3), from the front. Closing in from both sides are more Durham defenders and eyeing Brown carefully from a distance is Durham goalie, Hugh McKee. Brown wasn't long in passing the ball off. Loyalist won the game 3-2 to remain in a first place tie.

Chargers Get Fourth Win

Centennial Secondary School Chargers, from from a Friday night defeat of Quinte Secondary School Wolves, overcame an early 6-0 Trenton High School lead Tuesday and went on to record a well-earned 36-6 home field victory.

It was the fourth win of the season and one setback for the Centennial Juniors who still have a shot at first place.

The win completes its regular schedule on October 25 when Sister Trojans will supply the opposition.

In Trenton, the Senior Chargers were not as fortunate.

Holding a slim 14-12 lead at the half, Centennial saw the Senior Tigers score 21 in the second half to keep their undefeated record intact with a 26-14 win.

In the junior contest, Chargers led halfway early. Forced to punt from their end zone, the home team got a high snap and the ball was up for grabs. Trenton defensive end Paul Sweney fell on the loose ball for the six points. The conversion attempt failed.

Tigers held on to the lead through the first quarter but Chargers began to roll after the break-up ends.

Halfback George Medeiros went up the middle after receiving a pass from quarterback Paul Hipkin, and scored from seven yards out. The try for a two-point conversion on a pass play was no good.

Terry Thompson put Centennial in front, making the seven work for six points from the four-yard line but once again the attempted convert went astray.

In the third quarter, it was Medeiros again. He cracked over from three yards and it 20-6.

A Hipkin pass to fleeting Chris Ratteb set up Chargers' final touchdown. Ratteb gathered in the lead toss for a 30-yard gain and Thompson counted his second marker on a 10-yard burst.

Tigers had little to offer in the way of an attack. Their passing game suffered because of the absence of the injured Steve Peterson. Elsewhere Tigers were hurting for manpower.

Centennial was good on both tries for the extra post while Trenton was one for two. The visitors went into the second half with a 14-13 lead.

Tigers moved in front in the third quarter when their opening game came to life. Alexander and Steve Beecroft took turns lugging the ball to set up at 21 yards. Beecroft crossed the goal line from four yards out and Tigers clicked for a two-point conversion. That made it 21-14. Trenton.

Alexander rambled 66 yards up the middle for his third touchdown of the game to sail it away for Tigers. Rob Oliver booted the extra point to round out the scoring.

2 OMHA Teams On Short End

Belleville Rollins Construction Powers Majors opened their season on somewhat of a sour note Sunday losing their first Ontario Minor Hockey Association contest to Oshawa 14-3.

Tuesday night the locals bounced back, but were still unable to win. This time they bowed to Peterborough 5-4.

When the Kinsmen Major Bantams opened regular season on Sunday they lost to Peterborough 5-4.

Tony Parks and Steve Slaughter each had a goal and an assist for the powerful Sunday night and Tom Quesnel scored the other goal.

Tuesday night it was Tony Parks and Steve Slaughter again.

For the bantams, Ward Morrison, Danny Vance and Gary Frederick each scored once.

Captain's Army

George Clark of Winston, B.C., will again captain Army's hockey team. He scored 47 goals and had 31 assists as last season's cadet hockey captain.

Potvin – Sparks Islanders

Still No Win For Canadiens

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Canadiens can't seem to get on the winning track, even with a change in goalies, a 36-28 advantage in shots and a supposedly weak opponent such as New York Islanders.

The Canadiens, who managed only one in their first two National Hockey League season games, including one against the Islanders, went into Uniondale, N.Y., Tuesday night and spoiled away on the short end of a 4-3 score.

Montreal switched from Ken Dryden to Bunny Larocque and outshot the Islanders by that 36-28 margin, but they were outscored by Denis Potvin's two goals.

Stunned to a 3-0 lead against the Canadiens to catch up who then banged in another three.

In other NHL action, the expansion Washington Capitals earned their first point of the season in their home opener with a 1-1 tie against the surprising Los Angeles Kings and Vancouver Canucks earned their first win of the season with a 5-4 decision over the Blues at St. Louis.

The unbeaten Islanders now lead division 1 with five points in three games while crosstown rival Rangers trail the division with only two points in two games.

St. Louis and the Canucks now share the Division 2 lead while Los Angeles, playing its first four games on the road, leads Division 1 with six points.

"Six points is good for four games on the road," said Kings coach Bob Pulford who takes the club to Toronto for a game against the Maple Leafs, Division 4 leaders, tonight before the Kings finally head home.

Goalie Ron Low stopped 32 shots, including 16 in the third period to preserve the tie for the Capitals who opened before a Washington crowd of 4,926.

At St. Louis, Dennis Kearns and Paulin Bordeleau scored power-play goals midway in the third period to overcome a 4-3 deficit. Jean-Paul Parise and Gary Monahan scored in a shootout trade from Toronto, added another goal to clinch the Vancouver win.

Dennis Ververgaert and Brian Ogilvie of the Blues each scored a goal.

Tonight, winless Boston Bruins visit Chicago Black Hawks, Atlanta Flames meet the Red Wings in Detroit, California Seals visit New York Rangers, Los Angeles is at Toronto and Vancouver opens an 11-game Minnesota North Stars.

Defensive Back In Record Book

TORONTO (CP) — Defensive back Larry Richardson, in his second year with Edmonton Eskimos, made the Canadian Football Football pass record book today.

The 5-foot-10 Richardson, who played high school football in Silver Jaw, Sask., before going to University of Colorado, went 29 consecutive games without scoring a touchdown.

In game 30, last Sunday against British Columbia Lions in Regina, the 1973 Western Football Conference Rookie of the Year scored 12 points on two touchdowns.

He scored both on fumble recoveries—on a 36-yard run in the second quarter and the other on a 42-yard run in the third—by Second Dan Gill, CFL player to collect two touchdowns on fumble recoveries in one game.

Wayne Giardino of Ottawa Rough Riders, Tony Gabriel of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Tyrone Walls of Edmonton Eskimos each scored two touchdowns in one season on receiveries, but not in one game.

Richardson leads the WFC in fumble recoveries after 14 games with four. Mike Widger of Montreal Alouettes tops the Eastern Conference with six.

Meanwhile, fullback George Reed of Saskatchewan is getting close to another record.

Reed, who leads the CFL in rushing this year with 1,333 yards on 307 carries, rushed for 152 yards last Sunday, making it 37 times in his career that he has run the ball more than 100 yards in a game.

He is one away from the professional record of 38, set by Jimmy Brown when he was with Cleveland Browns of the National Football League.

Jackson Draws Warning

OAKLAND (AP) — Outfielder Reggie Jackson of Oakland A's was sharply reprimanded and given a warning by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn Tuesday for his banned white sports writer.

Jackson accosted 33-year-old Murray Olderman of Newspaper Enterprises Association during the team's workout that day and cursed him for an article he wrote in a sports magazine.

The A's outfielder told Olderman he didn't ever want to see him in the Oakland club house again.

Joe Reichler, aide to the commissioner, said Kuhn "may deliberated over the incident and delegated him to speak to the Oakland star.

Reichler did so shortly before Tuesday night's third World Series game against Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I told Jackson that the commissioner wanted him to know that he would not tolerate such conduct and he would get to go on further," Reichler said.

PETER LISKE

Stamps Trade Liske

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders traded veteran quarterback Peter Liske to the British Columbia Lions on Tuesday for backup quarterback Earl Douglas and tight end Henry Sorey.

General manager Gary Hobson said that the Western Football Conference trade included a "future consideration" from the Lions.

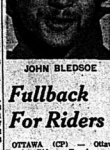
Hobson said the decision to trade Liske, 33, was made "in the best interest of the club and of Peter Liske."

He said the veteran "does not fit into our rebuilding plan."

Hobson would not say whether Douglas or rookie quarterback Joe Pisarcik would be the remaining Calgary starter.

Pisarcik engineered the Stampeders 36-10 upset win Monday over Edmonton Eskimos.

Liske is in his sixth season in the Canadian Football League. He played with Toronto Argonauts and Calgary before spending two seasons in the National Football League with Denver and Philadelphia. He returned to the Stampeders last year.



JOHN BLEDSOE

Fullback For Riders

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders Tuesday announced a Canadian Football League trade that gains them fullback John Bledsoe from Winnipeg Blue Bombers for future, unspecified considerations.

Bledsoe, 31, is hoped will give the Riders the drive up the middle missing from the Ottawa attack since Jim Evenson was sidelined by injuries three weeks ago.

An Ohio State University graduate, Bledsoe picked up 720 rushing yards for the Bombers last year. He is 23 years old, 6-0 and 225 pounds.

Als Name New GM

MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Geary, a 45-year-old former lineman with Calgary Stampeders and Montreal Alouettes, Tuesday was named general manager of the Canadian Football League club here.

Hank Aaron Not Looking For Soft Touch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hank Aaron of the National League's Atlanta Braves said Tuesday he wants to remain in baseball, but not as a "figurehead."

"I want to feel that I am contributing something to the game—making hard decisions, the major league baseball-run king told a news conference.

Aaron, who has been in touch with Milwaukee Brewers, said that he first I feel obligated to talk with Mr. Deshaies," Aaron said. "I want to stay in baseball, but I don't want to be just a token, used because of my name and my name-recognition. I don't to be of no value to a team."

Aaron is completing a $200,000 contract with the Braves.

Mahovlich at Home in WHA

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frank Mahovlich wasted little time in making his presence felt in the World Hockey Association, scoring three goals in Toronto Toros' season opener Tuesday night.

"I think Frank showed the fans that he's happy to be back in Toronto," said coach Billy Harris, whose Toros beat New England Whalers 6-3 before a crowd of 9,361.

In the other season opener, Winnipeg Jets beat the Kansas City Scouts 6-2.

Wrapping up the exhibition schedule, Cleveland Crusaders shut out Michigan Stags 6-0.

Mahovlich, who used to play for Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League and moved in the Toros from Montreal Canadiens, was the most conspicuous of the Toros' newcomers. And Henderson, who moved this year from the Leafs, scored once; centre Wayne Carleton and Tony Featherstone, another convert from the NHL, scored two assists.

Mahovlich scored twice in the first period while Henderson and Bob Leduc added single goals. Mahovlich added his third goal on a power play early in the second period, giving the Toros a 5-0 lead.

Newcomers also were prominent in the Winnipeg victory at Vancouver. Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg from Sweden led the defenceman Heikki Riihiranta from Finland each scored once. Riihiranta, who also assisted on a goal by Norm Beaudin, was impressive on defence along with Lars-Erik Sjoberg of Sweden.

Another Finlander—forward Veli Pekka Ketola—helped set up Riihiranta's goal.

Fincups Whip Petes 7-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Fincups defeated Peterborough Petes 7-4 Tuesday in an Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game marred by 38 penalties.

In the only other game, a power-play goal by Bob Mann at 16:19 mark of the second period gave St. Catharines Black Hawks a 3-3 win over Kitchener Rangers.

At Hamilton, three fights at the same time in the first period resulted in the Fincups collecting three majors and nine minors. Mike Bullock scored two goals for Fincups and Jim Pearson, Peterborough was assessed three majors.

Early in the third period, the Fincups were handed two penalties while the Petes received one major.

Dan Shearer and Archie King each scored twice for the Fincups who led 3-1 after the first period and 5-3 going into the third. King's second goal went into an empty Peterborough net with 4 minute left.

Jack Anderson, on a penalty shot, Glenn Richardson and Dale McCourt also scored for the Fincups.

Pat Price and Ron Chipperfield, Vancouver's highpriced junior recruits, did not figure in the Blazers' goals by Oanda St. Saveur and defenceman Bill Foley.

San Diego Mariners visit Phoenix Roadrunners and Houston Aeros visit Vancouver in tonight's regular-season games.

Lumber Kings Share First with Nationals

PEMBROKE (CP) — Pembroke Nationals 7-3 in the Central Junior Hockey League Lumber Kings pulled into a first-place tie with Pembroke Nationals Tuesday by beating the latter 4-1 after the game ended in a 6-6 deadlock.

The Kings had the edge all night with goals coming at 1:37 of the first period and 9:2 after the second while clutching-and-grabbing kept the scoring down to two in the third.

Joel Labrosiere, Terry Bonin, Bob Norris, Steve Waddington, Bob Ringler, Terry Wozniak and Keith Jonathon scored for the Kings while Loic Prudhomme, Terry Feindel and Gilles Myre scored for the Nats.

It was the only game of the scheduled Friday when Nepean and Rockland were rained out.

The Raiders are in Brockville against the Warriors and Gloucester Rangers travel to Smiths Falls to play the Bears.

Kicking Accurate

Sophomore Danny Kush of Arizona State kicked 49 extra points and six field goals last season.

Junior Wings Win 8-3

DETROIT (CP) — Detroit Dfrion, Junior Wings took a 6-6 lead after two periods and went on to defeat Chatham Maroons 8-3 Tuesday in a Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League game.

Mark Wells and Orest Bodki with two goals each, and Darryl Sittler each scored for Detroit.

Bill Dedmondsmore, Jerry McLean and Bryan Cameron scored for Chatham.

Steve Young, Bob Elenki and Chas Knutson scored for the Maroons.

Goaltender Rick Wakole stopped 33 Detroit shots while Greg Zimmer handled 22 Chatham shots.

A total of 37 penalties were called, Detroit getting 19.

All-Around Star

Penn State President Dr. John W. Oswald captained the Dell'ane University football team as an undergraduate. He also earned letters in basketball and track.

Leads Rushers

The rookie college running records for three years is held by Ed Marinaro of Cornell. He gained 4,715 yards in his career.

Trojans, Irish Are In

There was all sorts of action in Port & Quinte senior football today. In senior Main Trojans thumped Central Hastings (Marmora) 44-0. Nicholson played Queens 2-2 and BCI shutout Albert College 4-0.

The wins and losses were the same at the top of the senior, Moira's defeated Centre Hastings 9-1, Nicholson squashed past Quinte 1-0 and BCI trounced Napanee 5-1.

BCI Wanderers will meet Centre Hastings in a battle for an east division senior playoff berth next week. The Wanderers have their playoff hopes alive with Tuesday's victory, but now are tied for second place in the east with the Hastings team.

Mark Adair was called up from BCI's junior squad to play goal for the Wanderers Tuesday and came up with the shutout over Albert College. He got the scoring he needed from Dave Franklin, Rangazo Mohavedzo, Dave Langman and Peter Crawford.

When the Moira seniors blanked Madoc they assured themselves of at least a tie for first place. This gives Moira a playoff berth in the east division senior hassle. Results of goal scorers were unavailable for this game.

Nicholson seniors picked up their first victory of the season on goals by Lodwig Dabaibi and Nick Hendry. The loss left the Quinte senior Saints winless for the season. Quinte's goaltender was Ray Gill.

The Nicholson juniors meanwhile are burning up the league. They are in first place in the east division with 20 points.

They are assured of a playoff spot regardless of the outcome of next week's game.

Steve Dolan was in goal to record the shutout for the Fighting Irish of Nicholson and Paul Coates was the sharpshooters on the scoresheet.

The loss left Quinte one point behind Nicholson and one point behind the junior Saints is Moira. Next week Moira and Quinte clash for the final playoff spot in the division.

Names of scorers from the Moira-Madoc junior contest are unavailable.

The BCI victory moved the Redgrabs into fourth spot in the league and left Napanee winless for the season.

Doug Shaw had four goals for BCI while teammate Gord Van Vliet had three and two assists. John Hampshire booted the other.

SIGNS CONTRACT

CHICAGO (AP) — Veteran forward Chet Walker ended his holdout Tuesday against Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association, signing a one-year contract for an estimated $300,000. Meanwhile, two other key Chicago players, forward Bob Love and guard Norm Van Lier, remained absent from the club's training camp. Both want to renegotiate existing contracts for pay increases which would give them more than $300,000 each a season.

RESUMES BOXING

N'SELE, airs (AP) — World heavyweight champion George Foreman bared Tuesday for the first time since suffering an eye injury 39 days ago that postponed his title defence against Mohammed Ali. Foreman sparred for two rounds against heavyweight Henry Clark, but the light session provided no indication of how well the healed cut will hold up in the ring against Ali. The fight is now scheduled to take place here Oct. 30.

"We've had a terrific year. We've been making more grocery shipments for Dominion than ever before. Which means the number of customers that shop at Dominion is growing all the time. That's why Dominion is having another Super Warehouse Sale. With specials that are carefully selected to prove to you just how much Dominion really discounts its prices. One reason Dominion can do so is because we've got the largest single grocery retail distribution centre in Canada. Our Ontario warehouse, for example, is bigger than 36 football fields. And in one day, we can ship more groceries than any other chain. So come in and check our Super Warehouse Sale prices right away. You'll be convinced.

Public Groups Protest Charges For School Facility Use

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

BLOOMFIELD — Chairmen of the Prince Edward County Board of Education, Ruth Hall, and Lennox Ad Hoc committee to review which community groups and organizations will be charged after hours use of school facilities.

The decision followed protests by trustees Tuesday night from Picton recreation director Richard Hall and deputations representing several county organizations.

Board members decided in September that community use of the schools was one of the schools' way creating additional costs for caretaking and for "wear and tear" on accommodations and equipment.

A July statement published locally noted: "Faced with extra costs directly related to the use of school accommodations and equipment, the board must make the following decision: either assess these additional costs against all local taxpayers or charge those actually using the accommodations."

"If the board assessed public use costs against all local ratepayers, everyone in the county charged for the benefit of a few and the problem of provincial spending ceilings appears."

Picton recreation director Richard Hall told trustees the primary purpose of any recreational body is to provide recreational programs offering constructive, all ages fitness activities, such as the junior hockey program, beer hockey, on community support. With the cooperation of the school board, these programs can be initiated.

Mr. Hall said a full recreation program has been provided one night weekly at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

At Queen Elizabeth public school in Picton, programs have been cancelled this year, however, because of the new charges.

The recreation director said about 60 persons, including young and adults, took part in volleyball, basketball, and badminton held in three gymnasiums at PECI last spring. This year, plans had been made to use a fourth gym.

Mr. Hall said he had been told the school would not be available on holidays such as Thanksgiving.

Sport chairman Ruth Hart stressed the school would be closed only during Christmas and March breaks. On other holidays facilities would be available if the required costs were paid.

Business administrator E. A. Short said PECI is available for use on weekends if a caretaker is paid.

"We have tried to make the schools available as we can. I can recall only a few requests to use them that were turned down," stated South Marysburgh trustee James Pioneer.

He stressed the need to keep county schools "not like a show case" but clean and tidy to provide students with real pride in the daily use of the buildings.

Mr. Pioneer suggested caretakers no longer wish to work holidays, they would not be available on holidays such as Thanksgiving.

"Do we increase rates for schools all year or restrict their use slightly to keep costs down?" Chairman Hall asked the committee.

Mr. Hall said the recreation programs do not require use of kitchen facilities, equipment such as balls or nets. The programs are offered free of charge to the public.

Spokesman for a Bloomfield parents group, Marion Campbell said she and others in the village were told they would be required to pay $18 nightly for use of a gym at Pinecrest School where they play basketball.

She said the charge seems "quite unfair" as the 12 to 16 players are not a club. Many of the players are involved in school programs as volunteers and one of the school seemed only a fair request.

A representative of the County Whitby square dance club Al MacCormack said the group is organized and has now Year's Eve party held at PECI. If the school is used during the Christmas holidays this year, about 150 dancers will be forced in a new party location.

A United Church men's club, As One That Serves (AOTS) also protested the charge, for use of the school in Bloomfield. Although members agreed to a caretaker's fee they contended the accommodation charge was high. Also, the group wants to use the school for a non-profit fund raising event.

The charges levied by the school board include a caretaker fee of time and a half for hours and double time on Sundays and holidays.

There is also a one percent equipment charge to "wear and tear" and an accommodation charge for wear and tear based on a grouping system.

Trustees agreed many groups will protest the charges and much individual study will be needed in determining who will pay. The ad hoc committee will be available to discuss fees with other county organizations wishing to make representation.

Helping Others

A firefighter's job is helping those in trouble. And this doesn't mean just aiding those involved in fires and other accidents. On Thursday night the Belleville firefighters will raise money for their muscular dystrophy fund by giving a color television away during a bingo game at Ben Bleecker Auditorium starting at 7:45 p.m. Deputy Chief Bob Emerson, left, takes a look at the prize with Fire Captain Bruce Diamond.

Drug Situation Worsening

What is the drug situation in the Southern Ontario area? That is a question asked of the RCMP regularly.

From their point of view, quality natures now being made; it is evident the drug situation is not improving in the least. In fact, is worsening, authorities state.

The RCMP describe the availability of marijuana as taking "absolute". As quality and origin is as varied as the brand names used to market this illicit commodity. The home-grown product that grows here in Ontario, is now available at any time of the year. Plots or patches of marijuana are scattered in tobacco fields, in marshes, in woodlots and anywhere that is not readily accessible and in out of sight. Prices vary from $400 a pound for Columbia Gold to $100 for locally grown or the Jamaican product.

The rapidly increasing trend toward growing marijuana in the area concerns Assistant Commissioner E. R. Lyall, Commanding Officer of the RCMP in the Southern Ontario area. In the same way, is the concerned about the increase in preparing chemical drugs locally throughout the same area. In the early part of the number of local illicit laboratories is on the increase.

Hashish is a stronger derivative of the marijuana plant and it can be generally said that it is in ample supply, though by no means in the local vicinity.

The RCMP drug squads throughout Southern Ontario are aware of their efforts toward the major traffickers, but these efforts have been hampered to curb the flow of cannabis due mostly to the tight restriction of totally unrelated persons engaged in the illicit marketing, growing and importing of the drug. Marijuana traffickers generally are not regarded by Canadian courts with the same seriousness as are traffickers in other illegal drugs such as heroin and methamphetamine. Sentences handed down for marijuana trafficking simply have not acted as a deterrent.

The majority of illicit laboratories operating in Ontario are the manufacture of methamphetamines (Speed; MDA and LSD), manufacture their product for marketing in other parts of Canada and other countries more so than for marketing in Ontario. This situation creates little feedback to authorities here and makes detection more difficult. Some arrests have been made, however.

Concerted efforts of the RCMP drug squads working with a number of foreign agencies have resulted in the export, seizure or heroin importing organizations being prosecuted. The result: street price of heroin in Ontario is up from $75 per bundle of 25 capsules in 1971 to $90 per capsule at present. The concentration of heroin, which used to be in the Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, London, Windsor and Kingston areas.

Cocaine is rapidly becoming the most popular drug of abuse in Ontario. This trend has become quite predominant in the past two years. Importers of this particular drug are not of one organization and operate independently rather than being controlled by a central organization. Contains originates in South America and comes in Canada either direct or even via Europe.

With today's world of rapid transportation and communication methods employed, the crime related are governed only by the imagination of the importer. Distances have shrunk so drastically as a result, each point of origin by importers are quite commonplace.

Some of the importers and major traffickers are highly organized and fall within the term "organized crime". Others are small operators, receiving the contraband through the mail, by freight, or by purchasing it themselves in foreign countries. The profits are enormous as are the risks. On the risk side, not all the risk comes from law enforcement agencies — there are rip-offs from their own people. There's selling substances back out to be cheap and informants are some of the hazards a drug trafficker has to face. Certainly the term "easy money" doesn't apply in the drug trafficking world.

Province Offers Grants

The money is given in the form of forgiveable loans and grants for repairable loans.

The repayment schedule and amounts qualified for is determined on family income and how long the family intends occupying the house after completion.

Reeve Wilmot said once the township staff has all the details, applicants will be handled on a "first come, first served basis".

Former Mayor Gets Post

A former mayor of Belleville, Gerald B. Hyde, will become director of personnel and labor relations for the City of London.

Mr. Hyde, mayor here in 1963 and 1964 and a lifelong resident of the city before moving to St. Thomas, has held a similar position with the City of St. Thomas since 1970.

While in Belleville, Mr. Hyde was an alderman and school board trustee and a commissioner of the recreation department and Public Utilities Commission.

Mr. Hyde was manager of Canada's Frontenac lawn bowling team at the Second World Lawn Bowls Championship in Worthing, England in 1972. He and his wife Peggy have three children.

Council Backs Program

The Ontario Arts Council is again funding the creative artists in the schools program begin last year.

Belleville potter, Audrey Davies, who last year operated in Centennial Secondary School under the program will participate at Queen Victoria School this fall.

Patricia Mertl will demonstrate creative stitchery in Stirling Public School and David Uu will return to Tweedsmuir Public School to poetry workshops.

To date council grants, averaging $600 are awarded directly to the artist. Applications are received by the council after the artist has contacted a school and worked out a program acceptable to both. The council has $240,000 to spend on the program during the 1974-75 school year.

SHORT CRITICISM

The shortest dramatic criticism in theatrical history was that attributed to Walcott Gibbs, writing about the farce Whats. He wrote one word— Ouch.

Unitarian Speaker Here October 18

The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada is an overseas relief and rehabilitation agency with headquarters in Ottawa.

The headquarters and 32 branches, work groups and collection centres across Canada sponsor help projects in 13 countries on three continents. Of these projects 85 per cent concern the welfare of children.

On Thursday, Oct. 18, Dr. Gordon Merrill, USC special advisor for planning and development will explain the project at a public meeting at Corby Public Library at 8 p.m.

The USC is entering its 25th year of service overseas. To continue its work funds are needed and so the annual campaign to obtain these funds started on Sept. 16 with a Christmas target of $2,375,- 000 in money and gifts-in-kind.

Executive director of the group is Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova.

The USC Foster Parent Scheme underwrites effective care of about 80o children in six countries.

The funds raised help provide meals for the hungry children in Asia and Africa and medical care and rehabilitation for handicapped children in Korea and Vietnam. Besides food, clothing medical care and family planning services, the USC budget provides for educational opportunities for children as well as adults.

Dr. Merrill was born and raised in Ontario and served with the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Second World War.

From 1953 to '54 as a member of the Extension Department of the University of Calgary he taught in Korea. Dr. Merrill recently returned from a three-week USC survey in Korea and this puts him in a unique position to compare conditions in that country over a 20-year period.

Break-in Reported

City police report only one incident occurring during the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

This was a break-in into Morch Manufacturing Ltd., on Water St. Police said the break-in occurred some time between Friday at 4:30 p.m. and Monday at 4:30 p.m. when it was discovered by an employee.

Police said entry was gained through breaking a window to a downstairs office and entering through the employee's door.

A secretary's desk was ransacked, causing about $20 damage but no money was taken, police report.

Hunters Cause Concern

PICTON — The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial police report numerous complaints from Prince Edward residents concerning trespassing hunters.

Nine charges have been laid against hunters in the county, eight of them for trespassing.

Many of the complaints originated in Hillier Township although four charges were laid following complaints in the Bloomfield area.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of OPP says most of the offending hunters are out-of-county residents who are crossing farm property without regard for boundaries.

Your Horoscope

By HERMINE RENE ORR

Tuesday, October 17

Aries (March 21-April 19) Nothing will be gained if you antagonize a friend or relative over some trifle. Don't make your mate a scapegoat either, even if you don't see eye-to-eye on the issues.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You are going to be so occupied with a friend as the person who was with you first will be hurt but she won't show it.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You'll not be so productive today as you should. The lack of communication will be one reason why you don't get the most from pleasure and romance. Mind your manners.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If you find yourself in the unpleasant position of being the party of one who dominates, don't show it in a manner that will shock the life out of those around you.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Put on a convincing countenance even though you don't feel very confident. There is no reason to doubt about a position you've taken, on at least another is going to call you a liar.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's best for you in the long run if you take care of your own affairs. Don't meddle in those of others. Your time wherever remains is grudgingly your present wish.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Be careful your generosity isn't exploited out of all proportion to your means. Don't be taken in by a gesture that is genuine but not real enough to cause you to lose your head.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you let too many people in on your plans, there is an ending effect. You'll perform far less efficiently than you're capable of acting.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you know better, you're going to get your fingers burned if you don't curb your suggestions despite your better judgment.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't act a fool out of concern if someone is ill. Be calm. If you're needed, you'll be summoned down. It will cause confusion if you're not there when you're supposed to be.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't be in a decision-making mood today. If you don't depend on another to do something for you, you'll get it done to suit yourself.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You are a bit too sensitive with people you like. This could lead you to believe you're being treated unfairly.

Jupiter Giant Ball Of Liquid Hydrogen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first spacecraft sent to Jupiter has discovered that the distant planet is a giant ball of liquid hydrogen where mammoth storms move violent than tornadoes and last for centuries and years.

Zooming with intense heat and electrical currents, the solar system's largest planet has no detectable surface.

One storm, large enough to swallow the entire earth, has raged for more than 300 years.

Other storms much smaller in size but carrying fast weather phenomenon on earth, move through the planet's atmosphere, circling it in days and months with winds of 300 miles per hour.

These findings emerged from the voyage of Pioneer 10, a small unmanned spacecraft that passed within 81,000 miles of the planet last December. The results were summarized by project scientists.

Pioneer 10 travelled more than 800 million miles on its 21-month journey to become the first spacecraft ever to probe the outer solar system. The scientists spent nine months interpreting data from the spacecraft to fashion explanations for what the probe found.

Some ideas about Jupiter were confirmed by the spacecraft. Other data have lead to new theories about the planet.

"Pioneer 10 is a thrill that has opened up a whole new ballgame in the planetary exploration program," said Dr. Noel W. Hinners, National Aeronautics and Space Administration associate administrator for space science.

"In many ways Jupiter is a planet," said Dr. Dr. John Wolfe, Pioneer 10 project scientist. "In many ways it's a small many scientists that the planet consists of liquid hydrogen surrounding a rocky core at the center of its 86,800-mile diameter body. The liquid turns to gas in the outer 600 miles of the Jupiter's enormous internal shaped features 25,000 miles long, is a swirling mass of clouds that towers five miles above the surrounding clouds.

"The Great Red Spot seems to be a tornadic hurricane in the great extent," said Dr. Andrew Ingersoll of the California Institute of Technology. "Precisely what causes it, however, remains open to debate."

Typewriter Cost Him His Job

TORONTO (CP) — Fred Browning, 77, of Gravenhurst, Ont., lost his job because he tried to sell a typewriter.

He was fired as a commissionaire because he listed his occupation as salesman to a newspaper ad to sell the typewriter.

John Thrasher, commissioner of the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires in Toronto, said in an interview that Browning was fired from the Ontario Hospital in Gravenhurst for breaking a rule that prohibits commissionaires from engaging in commercial activity while on duty.

He said the hospital was "swamped with calls" replying to the advertisement in a Gravenhurst newspaper.

Mr. Browning, a First World War veteran, said he joined the commissionaires in July "to do something constructive."

He said he was living in an abandoned mill van in Orillia and had it moved to Gravenhurst when he got the job.

Browning said he is out "about $125 in the cost of moving in Gravenhurst" and "I've had only $34 in return."

Prison Riots Spark Violence

Irish Force Bolstered

LONDON (AP) — The defence ministry announced today that 800 more troops are being sent to Northern Ireland following prison riots that led to widespread violence.

A spokesman described the troop increase as "a temporary measure for a specific operation." It brings troop strength in Ulster to 13,500.

The announcement came as Prime Minister Harold Wilson met with his cabinet in emergency session to discuss the prison riots.

Merlyn Rees, Britain's secretary for Northern Ireland, flew back from Belfast today and went to 10 Downing St.

Meanwhile women prisoners of Armagh jail who seized the warders and three women guards from them and barred early today after holding them for 14 hours.

Release of the four hostages came after the jail's Roman Catholic and Protestant chaplains had assured the rioters that male prisoners who rioted in other prisons were safe.

The Armagh prison officers were captured Wednesday as violence swept Northern Ireland jails and guerrilla bomb explosions and gunfire erupted in Belfast streets.

The outbreaks were timed to coincide with the British policy of interning suspected terrorists in the sectarian conflict between extremist Protestants and Roman Catholics. Since the fighting flared up in 1969, 1,067 persons have been killed.

At Armagh, guerrilla gunmen opened fire on British troops waiting outside the prison. No casualties were reported. The 180 prisoners inside were known to have links with the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which is waging guerrilla warfare to try to force the British out of mainly-Protestant Ulster and unite it with the predominantly Catholic Irish republic of the south of Ireland.

Hugh Cunningham, the Armagh warden, and three guards were seized as they inspected the women's cells. The rebellious prisoners forced the hostages into an attic of the grim 170-year-old building and erected a barricade of furniture.

"We shall not give up until our rues are safe, and we know they are safe," a spokesman for the Armagh prisoners shouted to reporters.

The hostages were cheered by rumors that rioters in the Crumlin Road near Belfast were killed during a "prison" on the ramparts of the building, attacking guards and setting fire to their quarters. Jerk Mane, which contains about 1,400 male detainees and 200 men either convicted or awaiting trial, was almost destroyed before troops quelled the violence with tear gas and rubber bullets.

Violence flared in the streets of Belfast, some in support of the Irish rioters. A 17-year-old girl was shot and wounded as she waited for a bus in a Roman Catholic district. Troops shot a man they said was throwing a gasoline bomb in another Catholic district. They said they saw a woman drag him away, but it was not known whether he was hurt.

Dozens of vehicles were set afire in the same area, and several buses were blocked. One of several fires elsewhere in the city burned out a large building.

Ford Swears No Deal Made

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, told investigating congressmen today that there was no deal behind his pardon of Richard Nixon. But he acknowledged discussing with a Nixon aide on Sept. 7 possibility that the then - president might be pardoned shortly before resigning.

On the afternoon of that day, Ford said he telephoned Haig and "told him I wanted him to understand that I had no intention of recommending what President Nixon should do about resigning or not resigning, and that nothing we had talked about the previous afternoon should be given any consideration in whatever decision the president might take."

Ford said he had decided that, as a "conservative" he "should endeavor not to do or say anything that would affect his president's tenure in office."

At another point in his five-hour testimony, Ford said:

"At no time after I became president on Aug. 9, 1974, was the subject of a pardon for Richard Nixon raised by the former president or by anyone representing him. Also, at no time on my staff brought up the subject until the day before my first press conference on Aug. 28, 1974. And then, I was advised that question on that subject might be raised by media reporters at the press conference."

Ford went on to detail the considerations involved and steps taken as he moved toward the pardon he announced on Sept. 8.

In this connection, Ford said he received no report from a physician or a psychiatrist that led to his decision.

Meanwhile, Ford's testimony was generally known to me at the time of my pardon decision was based on my own observation of his condition at the time he resigned as president and observations reported to me after that from others who had later seen or talked with him."

Ford said he did believe, and still does, "that prosecution and trial of the former president would have proved a serious threat to his health."

Sirica Prepared to Hear Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Will John Sirica on the witness stand at the Watergate cover-up trial, prosecutors are ready to offer the electronic testimony of the White House tapes of Richard Nixon.

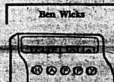
The former White House counsel, John Dean, is expected to be the first prosecution witness.

During his testimony today prosecutors plan to play the tapes of a Sept. 15, 1972, conversation Dean had with Nixon and H. R. Haldeman, one of the cover-up defendants.

The defense sources said an effort might be made to get U.S. District Judge John Sirica to bar playing of tapes. But it is unlikely Sirica will agree to such a request.

Weeks ago, the judge permitted installation of electronic equipment in his second-floor courtroom so that everyone from the jury of nine women and three men to the spectators, could listen to tapes through earphones.

It was on Sept. 15, 1972, that a federal grand jury indicted seven men on conspiracy, burglary and wiretapping charges resulting from the June 17, 1972,



Jaworski Says Nixon Guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski has told the Wall Street Journal that evidence already public and still to come at the Watergate trial will conclusively show former president Richard Nixon guilty of "obstructing justice."

"The evidence will show he's guilty, just as much as a guilty plea," Jaworski said in an interview reported from Washington in The Journal on Wednesday.

A transcript of the conversation prepared by the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee during its impeachment investigation says Nixon told Dean, in part:

"But the way you, you've handled it, it seems to me has been very skilful . . .

Nixon was referring to the fact that no one higher in the administration or campaign organization than Dean had been implicated in the Watergate.

Jaworski also indicated there were straws other than obstructing justice in which a case could be made against Nixon.

He said President Ford's pardon of Nixon, and its timing, will not affect the amount of information about Watergate that finally becomes public.

"A pardon isn't just a beautiful document to frame and hang on the wall. You have offered a pardon only because it is believed you can be charged and convicted. You accept it only if you want to be cleared," he said.

The Journal said Jaworski, after leaving office shortly after 11 months as special prosecutor, declined to say whether he would have brought Nixon to trial had Ford not pardoned the former president.

Immigration Policy Won't Discriminate

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will retain the "universal and non-discriminatory immigration practices it now follows when a new Immigration Act proposal is released next year, Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday.

He made the statement in the Commons when questioned about reports that Immigration Minister Robert Andras wants the cabinet to approve tougher restrictions to keep immigrants from entering the country.

Mr. Trudeau said the government will not discriminate against immigrants on the basis of race or the countries they come from.

Reports published earlier Wednesday said Mr. Andras had run into resistance from cabinet colleagues by proposing restrictions that would reduce immigration from South America, Asia, the Caribbean and parts of Europe.

The reports said the proposals, making it tougher for relatives of immigrants to enter the country, were put forward because of high inflation and unemployment in Canada.

Plumptre Receives Mandate

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said Wednesday he plans to increase the power of the food prices review board.

He gave no details, but told reporters outside the Commons that he was "looking forward to even increasing the mandate" of the year-old review board.

Currently, the board has power to report on food price trends, analyze price changes and recommend action to governments or businesses when it feels price increases are unwarranted.

Mr. Ouellet made the statement following reports that Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board, would resign if the board's powers were reduced.

In the motion-opening throne speech, the government deleted references to the board's power to recommend action in government to "any section" of industry in keep the board in operation. The board was to have run out of existence at the end of this year.

Fear Public Rebellion

Seat Belts Stay Optional

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario cabinet decided Wednesday not to make the use of seat belts in automobiles mandatory.

The decision was announced after a cabinet meeting by Transportation Minister John Rhodes, who said the public would rebel against any law forcing people to use the belts.

The government has had difficulty evolving a policy on belts. It announced in March that after months of consultation it intended to make the use of seat belts compulsory. This followed federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde's announcement after a federal-provincial conference in February that all provincial health ministers had agreed to try to bring in provincial laws.

But Premier William Davis said in March that enforcement of a belt law would be a problem. Ontario would rely on "a form of moral persuasion," he said, with most people using seat belts if they knew it was illegal not to use them.

Mr. Rhodes said in May that under a bill to be introduced in the legislature, persons who failed to use seat belts would be penalized.

Mr. Davis later said the government would only give "consideration" to making the use of belts mandatory.

Mr. Rhodes had said in February that laws making the use of seat belts compulsory would reduce traffic deaths by 15 per cent, keeping about 700 lives a year and cutting medical costs by about $400 million a year.

Federal officials had hoped Ontario would go ahead with the law because the probable decrease in traffic deaths would have provided other provinces to have similar laws enacted.

Mr. Rhodes said he hopes new and more comfortable seat belts will prompt people to use them voluntarily.

Objections to their compulsory use have been of two types, he said. Many felt that would be an infringement on their individual freedom while others complained that the belts were uncomfortable.

Plan Outlined

Hydro Outlines Proposed Line

PICTON — An Ontario Hydro study team Wednesday night presented its recommendation for a 230,000 volt transmission line to provide additional power to Prince Edward County to a meeting of municipal officials at a meeting in the Armoury Mall.

The 95-million power corridor will cross Lake Ontario near Carrying Place, where it joins Lennox to Napanee transmission line to Hydro's reformer site near Elmbrook is 34.5 miles.

Steel towers are recommended for 32.1 miles of this distance. Eight poles 90 feet high with a 600-foot span are proposed for 1.3 miles to the point where the line will cross Lemoine Beach by submarine cable. Length of the underwater cable is 3,500 feet.

Ontario Hydro is prepared to make its recommendation for the route to energy minister Darcy McKeough and a report should be completed by the end of the year.

Robert Murray, senior right-of-way planning engineer, told the minister may approve the recommended route or call a public hearing.

"We are making a recommendation, not just a decision," he stressed in his welcomed public opinion.

An Information Centre opened to the public at the Armoury Mall and will be staffed from 9 a.m., to 9 p.m. Friday and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

In Napanee, a similar service will be provided from the ministry of agriculture and food building from Thursday, Oct. 24 through Saturday Oct. 26.

Maps and aerial photographs illustrating the alternative right-of-way, together with background data, will be displayed.

Norman Manning, Ontario Hydro Public Relations Officer, Eastern Region, says the total estimated cost of the Hydro is $4,126,000. This does not include cost of the Elmbrook transformer station.

The recommended route affects 36 properties, some of which may be multiple holdings.

Once Ontario Hydro establishes the centre line notice of expropriation can be sent out. This usually occurs about three months after approval of the recommended route.

It is estimated about 30 months will pass before the line would be in service if approved.

Donald Fraser of Ontario Hydro's property division explained how land is acquired for high-voltage transmission lines.

"The new policy is extremely flexible," he remarked.

A pamphlet outlining the policy states, "All landowners affected by Hydro's need to expand facilities have rights granted and in Ontario they... The Expropriations Act. This legislation is designed to safeguard owners' rights and secure them fair compensation."

"At every step along the way, owners will be kept fully informed — told everything they wish to know about what particular rights are needed why Hydro needs them and the safeguards provided for them under expropriation. The various choices available to an owner will be explained, along with details of the compensation he can expect to be paid."

Compensation depends greatly on whether Ontario Hydro is buying full ownership of the needed land or just an ongoing perpetual easement. Usually, the owner receives only a fair cash offer.

He can sell the required property outright to Hydro for a lump sum payment reflecting full market and other values. He can sell a perpetual easement for a lump sum payment based on a standard formula, or sell a perpetual easement in return for an annual payment adjusted each year.

If a property owner decides to seek greater compensation he may ask his case be considered by the board of negotiations, an informal organization set up by the Ontario government to help in bargaining.

Fewer CFB Trenton Flights Sign of Belt-tightening

By AL EARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — CFB Trenton has experienced an extra in its operating since Defence Minister James Richardson recently revealed his ministry's intention to see that Canada's armed forces live within their estimated 1974-75, $3.5-billion budget.

At CFB Trenton, spending reductions, other than those already instituted, have not been required from either the base Host or Air Transport Command.

Capt. Rob Burks, base information officer, said Wednesday, cost-cutting measures have already begun.

In mid-September one of three regularly weekly Boeing 707 flights to Europe was dropped. Next week, one weekly cross-Canada flight will also axed.

In addition, some training flights have been curtailed as have the number of flying hours per aircraft. Exercises CFB Trenton aircraft participate with Mobile Command have been decreased.

Capt. Burks said the decrease in use of aircraft allows for a two-fold saving. Less maintenance will be required, thus freeing ground crews for other work. Fuel costs, which have increased 60 per cent in the last year, will fall.

As a by-product, in what he called a "snowball effect", he said the measures will partly lessen the load on base personnel, now short-handed and overworked in some areas.

Measures now underway here will dovetail into any action the federal government will take.

Capt. Burks said he did not foresee any staff cuts at CFB Trenton as a result of federal measures. Staff will be decreased by attrition and through limitations placed on recruitment, he said.

Reductions will take place in future, but only in certain, still unspecified, areas.

"This is not a forever reduction, but a means of protecting people who are in now, and giving them a living wage," he said.

Any dollar savings would be channelled into the areas of higher salaries for servicemen and, provided new equipment, part of an armed forces modernization program, he said.

"In order to live within the budget, what money would normally be funnelled into recruiting would go towards capital equipment," Capt. Burks said.

He added that to keep highly-trained and skilled men using new equipment, more money will have to be spent in wages.

The armed forces now spend 67 per cent of their budget on personnel. Another 11 per cent is applied to capital expenditures with the remainder going towards operating costs.

Defence department estimated expenditures for the 1974-75 fiscal year are $3.5-billion, some 10 per cent of the total federal government budget.

Any budget reduction applied to CFB Trenton operations will be known after Defence Minister Richardson's staff completes formal studies.

An examination of Canada's overseas commitments, both with NATO and the United Nations, is forthcoming.

Murray to Consider Trenton Fund Request

Trenton will have to stand in line when it comes to Murray Township council dishing out tax dollars for unexpected recreation costs.

Council Wednesday night instructed clerk Ken Rose to write a letter to Trenton advising that Murray is committed to give money to Frankford and Brighton for the use of their arenas, and council requires more time to study this third request for financial contributions.

Reeve Harry Lafferty said "Frankford has been at us for a year."

There is no projection yet for the 1974 Trenton recreation deficit, but Murray Township's share for 1973 is $2,500. This breaks down to $1,000 for hockey, $700 for swimming, and $800 for figure skating.

A hundred and eighty-three people from Murray Township play hockey in the Trenton arena.

Murray councillor J. Stanley Down said "the more you pay, the more you are asked for. There is no guarantee, no control. Eight dollars is not exorbitant. Let those that use the arena pay for it."

Reeve Lafferty said that the best way to make sure funds are being properly administered is to have anyone from Murray Township sitting on the Trenton recreation committee.

Clerk Ken Rose had earlier suggested a joint committee, and he indicated that it would be a palatable suggestion to Trenton Council for Murray Township to have representation on the committee.

The clerk explained that the money is not designed to supplement the recreation program, but operating costs had increased and Trenton says it is operating in the red.

The arena and pool at a deficit.

Speed Change Sought

Increasing the speed limit on a road running by Pine Acres, a subdivision north of Belleville, will provide a means for greater safety, to school students, Murray Township council was told last night.

Lock Rd., on which school students must get off and on school buses, has a speed limit of 50 mph. By raising it five or more miles per hour, school bus operators will be able to keep their flashing red lights, stopping vehicles from two directions.

There have been two near misses of youngsters using the bus service, so an OPP constable advised the bus operator to ask Murray Township council to ask Queen's Park for permission to change the speed limit.

It is a policy of the school board responsible for hiring the bus service for Pine Acres that the residential area itself be not served for pickup or delivery of the students.

Therefore, councillor William Ellis will be talking to some of the local residents to see if they want the speed limit increased. If they do, Township clerk Ken Rose is accordingly with the provincial ministry to make the change.

Flower Rejects Another Term

AMELIASBURGH — Ameliasburgh Township school trustee George Flower announced he will not seek re-election this fall for personal reasons.

A member of the Prince Edward County Board of Education for the last six years, Mr. Flower served as chairman in 1971.

He was formerly secretary-treasurer of the Ameliasburgh Township School Area for four years and secretary-treasurer of SS Number 6, Ameliasburgh for 25 years.

The Drug Scene

An example of official condoning of mind-bending substances — in short, drugs — that can have a contributory influence where crime is concerned, is the prospect of lower penalties for marijuana and hash-ish offences.

And just as Ottawa is moving in this direction there is word from the United States of new evidence that cannabis (the generic term for these substances) lowers resistance to disease, causes chemical imbalances in the body, and is tied to birth defects.

Further, a Congressional committee in Washington was told recently that the country is plagued with a marijuana epidemic that is threatening to make walking zombies of the country's youth. And no mention of the growing number of adult users in all walks of life.

Is drug use linked to crime? There is no question of it. We recall the case of a young man employed at the local gas plant in Belleville who was charged with the knife slaying of another student. The accused said he was high on marijuana at the time.

Here in Belleville, chief Douglas Crosbie says that there is no serious problem with hard drugs such as heroin the overall charge rate for drug offences is up slightly. Significantly, he believes there is a relationship between some cases of petty crime like break-ins, and drug usage. He cited the arrest at the railroad station of a youth who was heading for Toronto to pick up a supply. He was wanted on a break-in charge.

Whether harsh penalties are the answer is questionable. But neither is the other extreme of turning a blind eye to the problem — a desirable thing. Drugs are a part of the contemporary lifestyle of thousands, but society will do well if it continues to work vigorously for its elimination, and the pursuit of happiness through abstinence and old-time virtues.

Aid Programs

The continuing plight of the hungry and starving of this world is reflected by increased emphasis on aid programs by the so-called "have" nations.

At the same time we are told that the world supply of food today is sufficient for only 26 days.

Of course the well-off lands will continue to eat in abundance, while the others will continue to go hungry and many will die.

Aid must continue, naturally, to those in need. But at the same time there has to be more emphasis on family planning programs, so as to limit population in the poorer nations. Communications, such as better road and rail links, and trading opportunities must be improved; too often we hear of supplies rotting on docksides or at marshalling points inland, for want of the means of moving them to where they are needed.

Here in Canada, where few go hungry, and many eat to excess, at the risk of ill-health, there should be a growing consciousness of the needs of the less fortunate. There are many creditable aid programs to which we can contribute.

Where Were They ?

An unsigned letter from a reader who confesses to be "lonely and discouraged," is skeptical of the plight of many an elderly person.

Help for her had been promised. by a local women's group, once she left hospital. There was to be a weekly visit, assistance in obtaining pills, that sort of thing. But there was only one visit — and what she describes as "a lot of runaround about my pills."

Again, there was an opportunity to go to church, but a promised ride never materialized.

We can all be forgetful, even neglectful and uncaring. Life's many personal problems interest her. Let's not forget those in need though, and especially if some commitment to help has been made.

Whatever It's Called It's Still Inflation

Now The Economists Are Urging Money Be 'Recycled'

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The world's economists who talk a lot, write even more and can never solve any economic or financial crisis, have come up with a new jargon word in their sublime profession.

The word is "recycling" already familiar to us for its wide and understandable usage in the environmental sciences where it means the reuse of materials which would otherwise add to the growing waste of resources in our world.

But the economists are using "recycling" by reference to the huge cash reserves the oil-producing countries are building up from the escalated oil prices and the ways in which these funds can be moved around the world's banking and industrial systems.

Accepting and distributing tens of billions of dollars a year at one time is a new and confusing experience claim world bankers.

But we are also told "recycling" all that cash, a lot of it yours and mine incidentally, shouldn't be too great a problem. As a layman in these matters like most of you readers, I wouldn't think so either.

If a wealthy Arab came to the front door of your home and wanted to buy you out for the going rate, or better, are you "recycling" your cash dollars by going to the bank, or just making a large deposit.

What we should all know about is the potential for even more inflationary effect that these vast transfers of Western money paid to the oil-producing countries for their fuel, will continue to have on our economies.

You will remember the oil prices started to climb after a year ago when the world's oil-producing countries, most of them otherwise poor nations in the Middle East, suddenly started to hike the price of this vital energy commodity.

The move made through OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries), was largely a political one, to make available the money needed by underdeveloped countries. Iran, Venezuela. Their rulers are now billionaires directly or indirectly from the vastly increased earnings from oil.

And for those of us in the industrialized world here and in Western Europe and Japan, the most inflationary trend was given its major assist last fall and has continued to do so, from the huge increases in the price of oil.

UN-MUSICAL RIDE

More Inflation Ahead For Britons

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The people of Britain, faced with their country's worst economic crisis in times of 40 years, have in effect voted for more inflation.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson called the second election of 1974 because his Labor Party was hampered by its minority position in the House of Commons and the party was before the July 8 Canadian election.

Wilson, like Mr. Trudeau, had no good answer to inflation.

In both cases, the political leaders turned that short-coming to their advantage by emphasizing their opponents' solutions to their opponents' anti-inflation programs would decrease.

Both succeeded at the polls — by surprise in effect that the election isn't such a bad thing after all. British Labourites persuaded voters that an economic slump is the greatest danger, while Canada's Liberals persuaded us that our economic performance is not been as bad as that of other countries so there's nothing to worry about.

In contrast, the political leaders of West Germany (where inflation is half the Canadian rate), Japan, the United States and other leading industrial nations are treating superinflation as the biggest hangar facing the world. They have rejected the idea of appeasement and the easy reliance on the printing presses for money.

This fundamental difference approach to Canada's and British virtually alone of the side of tolerance of inflation.

The Labor Party has made the already slim chances that the Conservative industrialist leader will be able to employ common policies to combat inflation and to combat the trade union excesses—the exorbitant price of crude oil that has been at the top of the Arab-dominated producers' cartel.

The result could well be a combination of the dangers that Canada shares—runaway inflation and serious recession, together.

The recent British election has given the Canadian election that if they are returned to Washington at all, must make the Ford administration unsoapy as the Democratic congressional elections approach.

Will American voters, too, concentrate on their immediate short-term comfort and convenience, and dismiss all the long-term alarm about the meaningless despite President Gerald Ford's call for self-sacrifice?

British voters, obviously, wanted a government that will not interfere with wage increases, regardless of whether those increases are matched by offset by price hikes.

The Conservative report published just before the recent election showed that the British standard of living would not exceed earlier this year, despite personally higher wages and salaries.

Another report showed that capital spending by industry is rising by 7.5 per cent this year, but will increase by half that rate next year.

That means that Britons, even under a majority Labor government, are unlikely to expect the recession they want against.

Wilson Starts Out On 'Helluva Job'

Montreal Gazette

Harold Wilson like Sir Winston Churchill has a gift for the political pratfall byword at a time of crisis, the simple phrase that will stick in the craw of the moment and unite leader and people in the task that faces them. Churchill's "blood, sweat and tears," and "we will fight them on the beaches" encouraging calls to arms, were the stuff of wartime oratory. Wilson's "I inherit a temporarily challenging "it will be a helluva job" certainly not capitalize, but in Britain's present peacetime plight, the task of the moment, perhaps needed from contemporary leadership.

The martial diction of war would be more grandiloquent in peacetime, though that is what some people in Britain and Canada have come to expect when they bemoaned the lack of a Churchillian leader to pull them through the present dismal penury and upheaval.

Wilson's task for people and his circumstances better than Churchill's. Then the whole country was in a tedious, intricate business of wheeling, negotiating and compromising for home and international relations that will somehow ease Britain through two stagnant economic years of a possible three. Wilson predicts that the country will be able to start to recover in 1976. That is to assume it up, for both prime ministers and country.

For although the February and October elections constitute together a great comeback by Mr. Wilson and his party, the second ballot has not lodged him in power as firmly as he could desire without Liberal-Party defections could rob him of his narrow overall majority.

The "social contract" between government and labor on which he is counting for the immediate short understanding between the Labor Party and the unions. Will the unions really restrain their wage demands in the interests of the state as say British attempt to curb ruinous inflation, in return for government-backed legislation and restraint on prices?

Davis' Fighting Spirit Emerges

By DON O'HEARN

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — There have been some strangely uncharacteristic fighting words coming from Premier Davis recently.

The premier has twice mentioned the possibility of an election.

And then he has declared he will be intimidated by the Civil Service Association of Ontario.

In these and other efforts there has been a touch of bitterness which has not been familiar to the premier and with this a question as to whether he may be selecting such a permanent change in style.

The chances would seem to be that he is.

We can assume that every politician has his personal boiling point. Certainly Mr. Davis has been under strong pressures.

His trip to Italy was a strenuous experience physically and got a lot of criticism as a political junket.

Then the CSAO campaign has been on since.

It has been keyed directly against the premier and some of its top lieutenants have personally strong.

It must be bitter medicine to hear on radio or read in an advertisement that "Bill Davis Is A Chocoholic."

It is enough to make anyone mad and the premier is probably showing real anger.

Any such change would probably react to the premier's advantage in the end.

To a good many supporters and observers he has had not to show enough fight.

On the odd occasion in the House he has been known around particularly when speaking politically.

But most of the time he has tended to come across as cool and logical and lacking in fire.

The public probably doesn't want to see roaring demagogues in its politicians.

But also it almost certainly wants some life in them. And if Premier Davis is moving towards this it should be to his benefit.

Mufflers-Ones You Wear-Are Back

Watertown Times

The age-old muffler, with a new look and feel, is back in the set thing on the fashion scene for young men and girls.

Common sense making long, chilling mufflers are sparking trends, some of them stretching as long as nine or 10 feet, to wear around the neck, over coats or jackets. And, some cons with matching knitted caps, mittens or gloves, as less.

Ah, the old is often new — if one lives long enough.

Those of us middle-aged (and beyond) still recall the mufflers of childhood days. Mothers did not buy them in chic fashion shops. She, or a grandmother or aunt, often knitted them from medium-heavy wool yarn.

Young boys and girls did not get out of the house on a bitter cold or snowy morning without tying the muffler securely around the neck. If it was just single thickness, it was permissible to tuck the muffler around the back underneath the coat collar. But if it was snowing, it was only good sense to place it on the outside of the collar so snow wouldn't get down the back.

And it was a good thing those home-knit mufflers were really warm. Children had to walk to school from several miles. There was no warm automobile in which to travel in comfort.

In later years, after the muffler was knitted from many kind of scrap in this type of garb, Collegians, both men and women, wore long, multi-colored striped mufflers in school colors. Not only was it fun for them to do, but these scarves are pretty good while attending a football game in the fall of the year.

Will the cowing next? Will spats for men return to style?

Hospital Employee Loses His Job

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Bob Sanders, NDP candidate in the federal election is a confirmed socialist, professional social worker and an exceptional human being.

Many people in the area, as a result of his professional ability and simple human concern have had their lives enriched or their personal situation improved.

Intolerant of criticism, both of his own and others' actions, not much to be desired when it comes to such matters as common sense and public relations. By dismissing a man who has demonstrated his competence and concern for his fellows over the past six years, they have maintained their miserable record.

Mr. Sanders lived dangerously as he practised his profession but the courage, the sense of purpose and persistence on which he believed were worth being mistreated or passed over with less than sterling merit, earned him the enmity of those in high places.

Many workers have good reason to be grateful to Bob Sanders. The fact that so many ways a lot of people have to survive as a result of his help. His even stood pickets duty with people who were protesting working conditions at the hospital. Many other professional social workers do you know who would do such a thing?

Dr. Reg. Anderson, Mr. Sanders immediate superior was "shocked" when he heard of the dismissal. This, in itself, speaks volumes for the situation that exists at the hospital.

John Diefenbaker Remains Active Parliamentarian in His 80th Year

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa - Watching him as he lounges there lolling back in his captain's chair in his tiny two-room suite of the Centre Block, snorting and shaking that famous forelock, and laughing and slapping his knee, you cannot believe that John Diefenbaker is in his 80th year.

There he is still assiduously enjoying every minute of his busy political life.

He looks indestructible. Age erodes that striking face as it it were worn granite. The figure, disciplined by moderation in everything except activity, is lithe and lean and handsomely draped by an excellent tailor.

At the moment he is very busy holding abeyance behind all university students who have come to Parliament Hill for the opening of the session with MP backbenchers. They will get to see only this legend-in-his-own-time and no one else.

There are 25 of them, representing every province, but there is room to staff only 10 of them at a time in money Dief's astounding collection of Sir John A MacDonalds memorabilia including the original letter of the first Prime Minister, from Madame Tussaud's in the House, now staring down on the fascinating students from atop a corner bookcase.

Dief, anything himself hugely, is performing from behind a desk piled inches deep with mail which also overflows by the bag from all across the country. And what a performance!

He is denouncing "that dictator Trudeau," the Prime Minister he charges with "stifling Parliament so that now it is a secretary operated by his own formulas."

Trudeau removed the heart of Parliament, says Dief, when he took away the power of every government spending except in a fragmentary way in various Parliamentary committees. The Liberal majority is control "makes sure that nothing is decided and nothing done."

"How," he thunders, "as much as $16 billion can — and has — been whisked through the House, unexamined, between eight and midnight.

"In the Parliaments of Prime Ministers King, St. Laurent, and myself, the Auditor General would have exploded if it came out that the government was spending something approaching a half billion dollars in capital plants yearly by the offices of cabinet ministers and boss civil servants.

"But Trudeau times are together different times, so he can spend hundreds of thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money on his cars, offices and homes, and it's a skeleton in the closet that no one but the extravagant students what he terms the British Columbia Indians, the great Grand Chief of Conservative Indians, Mr. Diefenbaker.

"Probably then already too big for his boots."

Dief grinned, the student-interns laughed, and he said, "You can't blame me for a crippler like that would do to a speech, to a sitting of the House, and to Harold Wilson."

Because petroleum prices have increased so have those of petroleum-related products, products like fertilizer in which, by thousands of packaged, consumer forms, the Arabs have gone up in price about 400 per cent in the distribution and retailing systems supplying them to us.

When the very prosperous banks tell us they are worried about the "recycling" of all that Arab, Asian and Latin American — mostly Middle East — investments in our economies, I would call that a strictly academic, even artificial concern.

The real crisis is the ongoing inflation this new dependence of wealth creates and perpetuates.

Principal Urges New Sidewalks

Plan for sidewalks should be a matter of city policy when arterial or collector roads are being considered for construction or reconstruction.

That is the feeling of the traffic and light committee which this week passed such a recommendation for consideration of city council.

The question arose as result of a request by R.E. Pyatt, principal of Prince Charles Public School, who drew attention to what was referred to as a dangerous situation which might well result in the serious injury of a child.

Mr. Pyatt said approximately 80 students from his school live west of Sidney St. in the West Moira, Tripp, Elgin and Pepper streets area. The person that the children follow must then cross the road on the shoulder of the road. He noted there are no sidewalks west of Sidney street, on West Moira or on the west side of Sidney st.

There is a school crossing guard at Our Lady of Fatima School, but Mr. Pyatt said there is the problem of getting children safely to the school crossing point.

Mr. Pyatt was told there is no way further sidewalk could be considered for this year's construction. Efforts will be made, however, to keep cleared this winter from road shoulders so children do not have to walk on the roadway.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey agreed that something had to be done so that children could get to school safely.

"We allowed low rental family housing (in the Elgin Street area) and now we have other problems," she noted.

In making his motion for sidewalk plans for all arterial or collector roads being considered for construction, Ald. Norman Paul Russell noted that only a year ago Sidney St. was rebuilt.

"And here we are now talking of sidewalk for the west side of Sidney St.," he said.

There is a sidewalk now on the east side of Sidney south of Moira St. but until traffic lights are installed at Moira and Sidney children are unable to get safely across the street.

Council Plans Active Season

The Quinte Arts Council has a full slate of activities in Belleville to round out the year.

There's the Theatre Guild's production of Lovers which started Oct. 9 at the Pinnacle Playhouse and runs until Oct. 12 and then again from Oct. 16-19.

On Oct. 27 the Canadian Forces Air Transport Command Band will give a concert at Centennial Secondary School at 8 p.m. The director of music is Capt. Kenneth Moore and is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Belleville.

On Oct. 28, the Kingston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Alexander Brott with pianist Jeffrey Siegel, pianist, will appear at Centennial Secondary School. All seats are reserved and are $3 with half price for student and senior citizens.

At Carlton Public Library on Oct. 30 Kim Ondaatje, an internationally-known painter and printmaker recently involved in research and collection of quit doctors will give a lecture. From now until Oct. 26 at the Library local artist Albert Elliot has a display of his paintings.

The first two days in November will see the Quinte Arts Council sponsoring an art mart for the many talented local artists and craftsmen at the Belleville Place.

This will be on Friday, Nov. 1 from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. and on Saturday, Nov. 2 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Toronto Workshop Productions will present In Lois Years a Centennial Secondary School on Nov. 21. This will be a dramatization of Barry Broadfoot's best-selling book on the lives of women of Canada's Last Frontier. It will run for three months in Toronto.

The play presents a commentary on Canadian's depression years with comedy, drama and music.

Former Moderator Visits Belleville

Robert McClure, former United Church moderator and noted medical missionary, visits Belleville Sunday.

Dr. McClure, who practised his vocation in China, India and the Middle East before being appointed United Church moderator in the late 1960s, has just returned from a two-year mission in East Malaysia.

Dr. McClure, who will speak at the morning service at Bridge St. United Church,

He will also be guest speaker of Holloway St. United Church at 8 p.m.

The Holloway St. event will be a rally of the approximately 40 churches in the Belleville Presbytery of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties and will be conducted by Rev. George Richardson, president of the United Church's Bay of Quinte Conference.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance in the 24-hour period ending 8 a.m. Thursday.

Car Lands on Roof

TWEED (Special) — A Tweed mother and her son escaped injury this week afternoon when their car went down a 15-foot embankment and rolled onto its roof.

Provincial police said Mrs. Margaret Kreed, 45, was eastbound on the Weslemkoon Rd. 25 miles north of Madoc Tuesday when the shoulder of the road gave way pulling the car down the embankment.

Police said the roadway had recently been graded with a ridge of gravel left in the middle of the road. Mrs. Kreed was trying to stay to the right of the gravel ridge when the accident occurred. The Kreed car received $600 damage.

Dropouts Have Little Effect On Hastings School Enrolment

Although turned off solicitants are still dropping out of school, their departure hasn't had a significant effect on enrolment statistics so far this year.

In fact, the Hastings County Board of Education picked up 36 extra high school students between Sept. 19 and Sept. 30, the date official counts were taken.

Enrolment in the county's eight secondary schools now is 8,912 up 82 from the forecast enrolment of 8,830.

Elementaryy school enrolment is also higher than expected. The forecast called for 13,300 but the Sept. 30 count showed 13,977.

The Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board also found more students on its hands than it expected. The projections called for an enrolment of 4,008, but actual enrolment is 4,030. Most of the increase occured in kindergarten, a trend noted across the province. More youngsters are turning up in kindergarten than provincial forecasts predicted, balancing the steady decrease in the numbers in the senior elementary school grades.

Why an obscure law about our working conditions means a harder life for you.

The Davis government has passed a law that dictates the terms of our employment as public employees.

It's oppressive and unfair. It denies us all kinds of rights that other workers have. It keeps us behind.

But it affects you, too.

Low pay and unfair conditions cause low morale. They lead to high staff turnover and understaffing. They deter good people from becoming government employees.

So your public services suffer. Important services, from maintaining roads to staffing community colleges.

All because of this law, CECBA (Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act).

It denies us a say in many things that are usually the subject of collective bargaining.

Like promotions. Job classifications. Pension funds. Lay-offs. And many others.

We're just not allowed to negotiate on these matters, as other workers are.

So the Davis administration, as the government, has made sure the odds are in their favour as employers.

We suffer. And in the long run, so do you.

If you think that's wrong, help our fight to change this law.

Write your MPP or the Premier.

Tell them life's hard enough already.

MONTREAL (CP) — Some witnesses at a Quebec health construction union inquiry have complained "it's a bit as if we'll be blind" and have asked for police protection and permission to carry firearms.

Tourists Spreading Disease

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. W. Harding le Riche said Wednesday that increased international travel has resulted in a return and growth of diseases Canada thought it had conquered.

Dr. le Riche, head of the epidemiology and biostatistics department at the University of Toronto school of hygiene, said such diseases include tuberculosis, cholera, typhoid and paratyphoid.

Speaking to the Ontario Public Health Association's annual conference, the doctor said he does not oppose immigration, but that he is concerned about the number of immigrants and long-term visitors who have been flooding the country.

"I get worried about the numbers, not who they are or where they come from," he said.

Dr. le Riche said Canada lacks the medical, social and natural resources to handle a swelling population.

"Health departments must "wake up" and "realize that communicable disease still exist and are known."

"And as political and administrative situations deteriorate, epidemic diseases will increase as they are increasing now. Even if some of us have our heads in the sand and hope that the problems will go away."

Drugs May Become Bargain

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario health ministry official believes that the province's free drug program for the needy could result in lower-priced drugs for everyone.

Dr. Allan Dyer, chief of drugs and therapeutics, said the government's insistence that it will pay only for the lowest-priced drugs of an interchangeable group might result in druggists looking for bargains from pharmaceutical companies.

Diet Drinkers' Problem

OTTAWA (CP) — Alcoholism among natives, a serious problem, may be rooted in poor diet mixed with stress, researchers conclude in a recent study.

Jerry McLeod, a Saskatchewan Roland Stanley Clark, chairman of the Gordon College psychology department at Washam, Mass., say the best way to reduce alcoholism among natives is to improve diet, provide vitamin supplements and reduce stress.

The researchers, writing in the October issue of Canadian Welfare magazine, say that one estimate indicates there are 10,000 problem drinkers among the 70,000 Indians and Metis in Saskatchewan.

Canadian Welfare is published by the Canadian Council on Social Development in Ottawa.

Most native people suffer from a low blood sugar condition resulting from poor diet, they say. Almost all alcoholics also had this disorder.

The article says that "craving for alcohol is in large part the reaction of the body to its low sugar condition."

Must Develop Policy

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta government should develop its own science and research policy instead of leaving it to Ottawa, says the new president of University of Calgary, William Cochrane, said: "It's really important for Alberta to develop its own policy and make it known to the universities."

Arabs Buying Alberta

CALGARY (CP) — The executive committee of the Alberta department of agriculture was told Tuesday the family farm of southern Alberta is being threatened by increasing foreign ownership of farm land.

Farmers in the Drumheller region, 90 miles northeast of here, told the committee the situation may be leading to a type of landlord-tenant farmer relationship.

Ron Leonhardt, chairman of the municipal district of Starland, said Alberta farmers are selling land for $900 per acre to Americans, who sell the land to Arabs for $1,000 an acre.

The land is only worth $300 per acre as farm land, meaning Starland municipal district, that any local buyer who wants to farm in the area is priced out of the market.

Hutterite colonies have also reduced the amount of available farm land and contributed to the price squeeze on family farmers, he said.

There are two Hutterite colonies, or communal farms, in the Starland municipal district.

Rockcliffe Park Has Disputed Origin

ROCKCLIFFE PARK, Ont. (CP) — Everyone knows this Ottawa suburb. It's the city's northeastern residential enclave of tree-shaded streets, wide, well-watered lawns and impressive houses. Ottawa's answer to Montreal's Westmount, Toronto's Forest Hill and the secluded sections of other cities that have become known as domains of the wealthy.

The origin of its name is disputed.

Some historians say it came from a British general called Rockcliffe, although there is a dearth of information on such a man. Even the 60-volume British Dictionary of National Biographies doesn't mention him.

A more probable explanation is the barren landscape on which the village was originally built. The name Rockcliffe is mentioned in local documents dating back to 1837.

The village's 3,325 residents have a distinctive and separate identity among the 300,000-plus citizens of Ottawa despite the growth of the capital area. It includes a number of foreign embassies and Stornoway, official home of the leader of the Opposition.

Rockcliffe Park has its own council and school system.

The village's beginnings were humble. Originally known as McKay's Bush, it was an area where residents of Bytown, as Ottawa was then called, could pasture their cattle for a fee of $1 a month.

Ironically, a man bearing the same surname was largely influential in the eventual banishment of the cattle from McKay's Bush.

Thomas McKay, a stilted mason, arrived from Scotland during the depression that followed the Napoleonic wars and settled in Montreal, where he became a contractor.

Because of his experience in building the Lachine canal, he was able to tender successfully to build the first eight locks in the Rideau canal in Ottawa.

McKay was lucky. He had based his tender on the expectation that building materials would have to be hauled some distance to the site. But when he arrived, he found rock and other materials near at hand.

With the resulting profit, he contracted to build other parts of the canal, bought a large tract of land including Rockcliffe and moved his family to Ottawa.

McKay built his "castle," Rideau Hall, just outside the boundaries of the present Rockcliffe Park village. Duncan McNab, son of a former inspector general in Ceylon, began building a large manor in the area.

McNab died before he had completed his house but it later was finished and became known as Rockcliffe Manor House.

Mrs. McKay moved to Rockcliffe Manor some years after her husband's death when she yielded to government requests to buy Rideau Hall as a residence for the country's governors-general.

The presence of these two large residences influenced other families of wealth to establish in the village. Today the rocky character of the land that many have given Rockcliffe its name has disappeared from sight under the modifying hands of the landscapers.

Remote Russian Town Boasts Western Flair

VOLOGDA, Soviet Union (Reuter) — Loud and fast music thunders from a live band in the corner. Nattily dressed and long-haired couples gyrate precariously on platform shoes.

It could be in the West or in Moscow. But this is the Seagull Restaurant in Vologda, a remote town in the Russian north.

Like anywhere else in the Soviet Union, much areas are fast catching up on the good things in life.

Vologda, a town of 200,000 inhabitants, small by Soviet standards, lies 300 miles directly north of Moscow, deep in the vast expanses of the northern forests, called taiga.

Founded in 1147 as a trading centre for furs and wood, the ancient town is largely undiscovered by the outside world, both Soviet and foreign.

But as the Vologhanyn (Russian for Vologda-dwellers) show by their fashionable dress, such as locally-produced and audaciously flared blue jeans, the outside world does not pass them by.

They are proud of their town, and they want to put it high on the Soviet tourist itinerary.

The first step has been the superb restoration of the town's 17th-century Kremlin. The St. Sophia Cathedral with its priceless collection of frescoes and icons, has been renewed in dazzling white, and the Kremlin's bell-tower equally white, can be seen for miles around.

"We're hoping that once people find out about Vologda, they'll start flocking in," said one young volunteer restorer. "Most of all we'd like foreigners to come along, as we could do with some foreign currency for our work."

But not only the Kremlin has been refurbished to give the town a fresh look. All the low-profile 19th-century buildings that make up the nucleus of the town, long an administrative centre for its region, have been brightly restored.

Mostly they have become light blue and soft brown but a daring yellow of a brightness never seen in Moscow has obviously caught the town-planners' imagination.

A symbol of the attraction the town soon hopes to present for visitors is a huge 2,000-seat theatre going up near the centre, planned to open in November.

Asked how the town council hoped to fill a building that size, one Vologhanin said with some pride: "With a theatre like that, we should even get Muslim Magomayev (the Soviet Union's most popular singer) to come and sing for us. And then, just think how many people would come to Vologda."

Apart from the relatively few enthusiasts of ancient Russian architecture who visit Vologda during its short summer, spring and autumn see scores of hunters passing through the town's river port on their way to the rich hunting grounds of the Taiga.

Every day while the river is unfrozen, two paddle steamers chug sedately downstream towards the north. The only other way to get into that forests is by light plane, or by zarya, hovercraft-like boats which are considered by many to be too hectic and cramped.

Standing on the Kremlin's bell-tower is one the guide will expose your film if you try to photograph because strategically important rollers bearing works feature the skyline—a visitor can see that where Vologda ends, forest begins, stretching almost uninterrupted, by human settlement north to Archangel.

Needs Help for the Job Ahead

Dear Ann Landers: My sister was widowed at the age of 32. Her husband left her with two sons. One suffered a brain injury at birth and had to be hospitalized when he was five. The other boy is slightly retarded, but the doctors say he can stay in regular schools for a while at least. That boy is now also

Successful Living

Teen-ager 'Miserable' Parents Won't Listen

My parents never listen to my reasonings and when I ask to go somewhere, they always say "No." I'm 18 and they don't trust me at all.

I can't even go outside without their asking where I'm going and why. I feel caged in! I think I can take care of myself. Talking to them won't help because they just say "no" anyway.

Please help me—I feel like running away and sometimes I feel like committing suicide.

I know everyone has problems with their parents, but they don't have it as bad as I do. — DEAD CAGED IN

DEAR CAGED IN:

You can say that again—that part about people having trouble with their parents. Understand? You care about them, but at times you simply hate them. Did it ever occur to you that it is normal to feel two ways about people?

Do you suppose they feel those two ways too? They care because—about you, from away back (which makes them worry) to the safety when you go out). But they have long habits of controlling you. They tell themselves it is up to them to protect you.

They would protect you better if they helped you to learn, gradually, how to get on with others your age, by meeting your friends and encouraging you to go out with them.

In a very brief five years you will be all grown up. In two you will be able to vote. Show them this column and ask for some communication as well as for some trust for the girl they raised.

DEAR DORIS:

Please send me some hints on how to have a homewarming party. For example, what that are considered good luck when moving in.

I enclose 25 cents and a stamped envelope. The party will be a surprise for my aunt. —Two Cousins.

DEAR COUSINS:

You will find a heap of helps in my leaflet about "Throwing a Housewarming—Or Just Any Party". When to throw it, who to ask, what to do, food to serve, drinks, gifts. The leaflet is as big as a boy.

Good luck (ahem)! Well, could you produce a cricket on the hearth? That is an old addie. Then of course, there's that thought about a horseshoe over the front door. If you can find one. Otherwise, I am just out of superstitious ideas for housewarmings. The best luck is to have a couple of pieces like you and your cousin, who love your aunt enough to go to all that trouble and expense.

Recently, I heard of a man who wanted a house-blessing ceremony when he moved into a newly built house; and his priest obliged. I thought that was a lovely thought.

DEAR DORIS:

Has some of which these fragmentary lines are an excerpt may be somewhat incorrectly remembered: "Call of feathers rot in last year's nest. The winged brood flown thence new dwellings seek . . . They chatter and chirp and never rest . . . Not what we are, but what we hope to be best."

This poem has a wonderful psychological impact. I believe, and I want to make copies of it for friends if I can get it to its entirety.

Lillian.

DEAR LILLIAN:

"Psychological impact" is right. I wonder who can fill in the words we haven't got? In the library is a lost cause, almost, when we have neither author nor first line.

(Longer, fuller replies went to readers who sent self-addressed envelopes.)

Ace Finds Missing Persons

TORONTO (CP) — Andrew Foster is the city's ace missing persons specialist.

For the last 15 years, Mrs. Foster hasn't just been the head of the Red Cross Inquiry Services in Toronto, she's been the whole inquiry service.

Working alone, she has been able to trace the location of hundreds of missing persons living in Canada.

The inquiries come mainly from sister Red Cross organizations in other countries.

Her search telephone directories and speak to superintendents of apartment buildings trying to get clues," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Foster does not regard it unusual that people who have not been in touch with each other for nearly 30 years should suddenly try to re-establish contact.

She said that inquiries from overseas Red Cross organizations arise when they discover from Canadian immigration offices that a missing person has come to this country.

Mrs. Foster estimates she can trace about 30 per cent of the missing persons she is asked to find.

Make Your Home Accident-Proof

Accidents kill more children between the ages of one and 14 than any disease.

A frightening statistic, made more painful by the realization that these are deaths that could have been prevented. These are deaths that, unwillingly, parents have let happen.

Even more frightening is the fact that these parents very probably believed that they had already taken all necessary precautions.

Too often a parent is obsessed with one particular area of danger that looms so large that others are ignored. Locking up the medicine chest, and forgetting about the lawn mower on the stairs, an adult can go on blithely thinking that the home is accident-proof — until the inevitable fall.

If you are the sort of person who worries about one or two specific dangers, you may very likely be neglecting other just as important areas. Happily, this all-too-common failing is one that can be compensated for with a handy check list to prod the memory.

You can adapt the following suggestions to your home and family situation.

Lawn equipment being stored for the winter should be in a place declared off-limits to little children. The hoes, rakes, and shovels are best hung on the wall with the sharp sides facing inward. Chemical pesticides and fertilizers should be labelled "poison" and kept in a high cupboard or garage shelf well out of reach. Hoses and ropes, which are snaky, should be wound and tied securely.

* * *

Poison-proof your home today, by labelling all containers of chemicals, bleaches, kerosene and cleaning fluids with the word and symbol for poison (a skull and crossbones is usual). Teach your children what poison means, and stress the importance of "not touching".

But don't expect too much of your children, especially young ones. Toddlers have been known to drink from whole bottles of kerosene, not bothered at all by the fact it's terrible as it seems.

Don't rely on anything other than your knowledge that poisons are completely out of reach or in a locked cupboard.

Better the trouble of fishing with a key yourself than the ever-present fear that a baby might open the door.

Medicine is not candy, and should never be called that in order to persuade a small child to swallow syrup or pills. A bottle of 30 children's aspirins (sweet tasting to make them more palatable) can kill a child.

If you have a medicine shelf in the bathroom, make sure it can not be reached by a child climbing on the vanity top, sink or toilet. Be certain that vials of pills have the "safety caps," which need adult strength to be opened, and never leave them in a bedside table or kitchen without a lid.

Today, check your house for accident areas. Does the light in the basement work? Is the railing secure? Could a child slip on a loose piece of stair covering? Could the iron fall off that shelf? Are the matches hidden? Are hunting knives and guns in a locked cupboard? Are there any places a child could lock himself into and not be able to get out?

* * *

What a safety-conscious parent has to do is effectively remove dangers from the home, is to think like a curious, uninformed child. If you can go through your house with that idea in mind, you'll have taken the important first step in preventing accidents.

What Would We Do Without Them?

Can you imagine the community without the Red Cross, the Victorian Order of Nurses, and the St. John Ambulance Association? Neither can we, and I doubt if you can either. We'd have a community without the Red Cross swimming and water safety program of the Royal Life Saving Society, no emergency blood and bone marrow typing program, not to mention the actual marrow bone cure and yes and post natal supervision provided by the V.O.N. There are pretty vital services that we receive without financial assistance from you through the United Way Campaign. Therefore, to you, these agencies can do their marvelous work. Many Depend on VON

The home care given by the Victorian Order of Nurses is one of the most essential services assisted by United Way funds.

Although the amount of money is only a small proportion of the VON's total income (in 1973 the United Way donation was $8,750 out of the yearly income of $127,1077, it plays an important part. The money is available for subsidies when patients have an income higher than the means test are still unable to afford the cost of a visit.

In August the cost of a VON call was adjusted to $6.75, all or part paid by the patient or by provincial and municipal agencies.

Belleville is the head office for the three-county area (since May the Hastings - Prince Edward district has enlarged to include North Cumberland County) serviced by the Quinte Branch of the VON. There are now sub-offices in Picton, Bancroft, Trenton, Campbellford, Brighton and Cobourg.

The expanded district requires a larger staff, at present 11 full-time nurses, three half-time nurses and 18 relief nurses. In the past month the VON made 2,009 visits to patients needing care ranging from insulin injections to dressing changes.

In the Belleville district alone, more than 900 visits are made each month.

The post-operative assistance provided by the VON clears hospital beds of patients who don't need constant attention, and gives support to elderly or disabled person who could not otherwise continue living at home.

MELROSE W.I.

Melrose Women's Institute members met recently at the Tyendinaga Township Council meeting in conjunction with their program on citizenship.

Lois McMechan, president of the group, was appointed delegate to the area convention to be held in Cobourg November 14.

MARMORA W.I.

The October meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held at the home of Phyllis Caverly.

President Wanda Carman opened the meeting and roll call was answered by naming "A hobby for retirement years".

The president will be the delegate to the Trent Valley Area Zone Conference, November 14 -15 in Cobourg. Ella Potts will be the alternate delegate.

A paper was given by Mrs. Caverly, convenor for Education and Cultural Activities. Education by the whole act of changing attitudes in a person by learning; she explained Education does not mean just knowing facts but being able to apply the facts in daily living.

The Motto for the meeting was "One who ceases to learn ceases to live."

A contest on "nuts" was won by Bessie Tinsdill.

Lunch was served by the hostess and her committee.

Presentation of the Loyalist Night Class Art Awards were made at the Tweed Senior Public School recently.

ACT AWARDS

The eight classes held by Loyalist College during the winter made it possible for the area artists taking the art course to hold an art show in the Hungerford Township Hall last July. A silver collection from this art show was used to purchase awards for the Grade 8 students of 1973-74 with the two top grade 8s being chosen for their most artistic potential in that year, by their Grade 8 teacher Gary Smith.

Merrett Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Price and David Vance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Art Vance received awards. They each received a trophy suitably engraved and a pen also engraved for their achievements.

Hundreds of guests were welcomed at the door by auxiliary president Marguerite Wessels and administrator Glen Whitehead.

Jean Kilburn convened the bake sale assisted by Pearl Holmes. The adjuvant room craft sale was convened by adjuvant Dorothy Kerr and the craft room sale by Sharry Moyer.

Colleen Parry convened the draw ticket sale and Helen Moore was co-convener.

Lillian Hurley was ticket convener for the tea room.

Convener of the tea room was Helen McLaren assisted by Jean Locklin.

Daisy Bongard, Kay Hall, Maude Kay and Joanna Harnden were hostesses.

Ticket takers were Barth Atkins Ethel Green, Eleanor Copelin and Leah Prentic. At the tea, Wynn Reed, Jean Lennox, Violett Bull, Laura MacDonald, Nellie Ketcheson and Annis Dickens also assisted.

Mini Is Fini

Britain's gift to the world of women's fashions, the mini skirt, is finally gone—after lowering bear hip-level heights for 10 years.

The last stitch in this here line-dropping event was sewn by one of the biggest firms of chain stores in the country, C and A.

A spokesman for the company, which four years ago sold thousands of minis each day, said: "There will be no more minis when present stocks have gone. They just don't sell nowadays."

The firm was just about the last of the major holdouts. Most of the other big department stores and fashion chains had dropped the mini for longer lengths at least two years ago.

The mini was introduced in the early 1960s, largely by fashion designer Mary Quant. For the last three years, many designers have given up (or down) on the mini, although a lot of leggy girls kept wearing them.

Hitch-hikers Won't Give Up Cheap, Interesting Travel

VICTORIA (CP) — Young people who hitch the roads leading into and out of Victoria this summer trying to hitch a ride up-island or into the city, won't give up their cheap, easy and interesting way of travel despite warnings it may be dangerous—even murderous.

Hitch-hikers interviewed on the road agree that a warning of the dangers of thumb tripping by British Columbia Attorney-General Alex Macdonald is something to consider, but not a deterrent to hitch-hiking.

The warning came after police pleas for help in solving the sex killings of young women whose bodies were found in various parts of the province during the last few years. Some had been picked up as they hitch-hiked on B.C. highways.

"I think it's kind of like leading up everything you own," said Lisa McMillan, 18, of Regina.

"If you're always going to be paranoid about things like this, then you're really not going to have much of a life."

She and a friend, Janice Orr, 17, also from Regina, hitchhiked coastal stood thumbs out at the entrance to the Trans-Canada Highway on the edge of Victoria. In between, they'd catch a ride to Long Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island—some 120 miles up-island.

Both had heard of the murder and Mr. Macdonald's warning.

"We heard a lot of people talking about it in Regina when we stayed at in Vancouver, but it didn't seem to really bother me," said Lisa.

Both girls had had occasional invitations out for dinner or a drink from men who gave them rides, "but most people are really friendly and they stop for you because they probably hitched themselves sometime," said Janice.

"I guess I hitch because it's cheap and you get to know an area better and meet more people. A bus or a train is boring and always the same, but hitching is always different."

Mary Stanley, 22, of Vernon, a student at the University of B.C. in Vancouver, hadn't heard of the warning or the murders, but said she wouldn't give up hitch-hiking.

She said it's easier to get rides when she hitchhikes alone or with another girl, but added that nothing "really bad" had ever happened to her while hitch-hiking.

"Sure, I've had some guys say some stupid things to me, but if you're not expecting that to happen at least once, then you shouldn't be hitching. My parents still be really worried when they hear about those murders, but sure, I'll keep on hitching. It's the only way to go."

Her main reason for travelling by thumb is simple: "I got bus sick."

U.S. Annexation of Canada Story Line of Rohmer Novel

BY BRIAN McWATTERS
The Canadian Press

Intrigue, the annexation of the first page, an account of a secret-door conversation Oct. 6, 1981, between the President of the United States and the prime minister of Canada.

The president demands that the Parliament of Canada agree by 8 p.m. the next day to settle aboriginal rights holding up completion of natural gas pipelines, grant the U.S. full access to Arctic island natural gas with no reversion in future Canadian needs, and begin construction as soon as possible on a transportation system from the Arctic deposits to the U.S.

The president, a Texas banking re-election and resembling somewhat a desperate Lyndon B. Johnson, proclaims at 9 p.m. Oct. 7 that at the moment military personnel have been ordered to land at all major Canadian centres to oversee the economic annexation of the country.

Canadian author Richard Rohmer relies on his background of military matters, natural resources, and economic and foreign affairs to stimulate feelings of nationalism, patriotism and defiance in his fourth novel, Exxoneration.

Elaborately, and with meticulous attention to detail and credibility, author Rohmer unfolds a reordering tactic timed to take place simultaneously in specific locations as fallible as Hockey Night In Canada.

Less than two hours later, by Pierre de Gaspe, is in complete control of the negotiations held on the Neutral French islands of St. Pierre at Miquelon in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Not gaining what was originally intended and embarrassing the U.S., the president is succeeded by David Dennis, a former mayor of Detroit and America's first Jewish leader.

With the presence of annexation having subsided, Mr. de Gaspe convinces the prime minister of a need to control the vertically-integrated, Imperial Oil Ltd., the Canadian subsidiary of the Exxon Corporation, through a take-over bid, on Exxon financed through his host of a relationship between her and the prime minister is a nice touch.

Instead of simply introducing the corrupt, powermad unprincipled U.S. senator, Mr. Rohmer might have considered paying more attention to his CIA connections and the activities of that agency as well as the lobbying for support against the bid.

President Dennis has an irritating little guy attitude and there's an overworked, clichéd, totally blissed bodyguard.

But in author Rohmer's credit, the introduction of the powerful oil figure and his "wild-card" influence supply the burst of color needed for a well-thought-out conclusion.

Exxoneration, Richard Rohmer, 212 pages, $8.95; McClelland and Stewart.

Drinking Shocks Brain

VANCOUVER (CP) — Drinking busts cause changes in the brain similar to those which result from electric shock treatment, says a researcher at the University of British Columbia.

Psychology professor John Pfeil says repeated drinking episodes produce changes in the brain's activity which indicate a gradually increasing susceptibility to convulsions.

Doctors know that withdrawal of alcohol from a long-term heavy drinker can result in epileptic convulsions and even death.

But Mr. Pfeil found even a single intoxicating dose measurably increases an individual's susceptibility to seizure.

The changes are cumulative and parallel the development of alcoholic dependence, he said.

Mr. Pfeil fed rats intoxicating doses of alcohol, then tested an electroencephalogram (EEG) their responses to mild electric shocks to the brain.

He said the research indicates the alcohol had the same effect as the shocks.

Alcohol is an anti-convulsant but during the recovery period after alcohol is withdrawn, an individual is more susceptible to convulsions, he said.

"We suspect that at least some of the symptoms of the common hangover are the subjective expression of an individual's increased susceptibility to seizures following alcohol metabolism," he said.

Thus it seemed to be the withdrawal of alcohol more than its use that caused the brain changes.

Mr. Pfeil said it is possible to measure increased susceptibility even when there are no physical symptoms, and it may be possible to identify individuals likely to develop serious alcohol dependence.

Even electric shocks too weak to produce an effect at first eventually produced convulsions if repeated at intervals of a few hours or days. The minimum shock necessary to produce convulsions became smaller and smaller, a phenomenon called kindling.

In a kindled rat the effect of even a single dose of alcohol is easily measured, said Mr. Pfeil.

"In terms of the withdrawal syndrome, the epileptic response is exactly the same in animals as in humans," he said.

Mr. Pfeil emphasized that there is more to alcoholism than physical dependence.

A person may start drinking for complex psychological reasons, but because he develops a physical dependence, he gets sick when he tries to stop drinking. This increases the psychological dependence, he said.

Mr. Pfeil said doctors should be aware of the kindling effect, and criticized the widespread use of shock therapy in mental hospitals.

Shock treatment might leave the patient permanently susceptible to alcohol withdrawal and also to withdrawal from barbiturates and some tranquillizers.

Many hospitals have abandoned shock therapy because of doubts about its usefulness, but some still use it routinely, said Mr. Pfeil.

Super-rats Attract Brazilian Vigilance

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Brazil's maritime authorities are redoubling their vigilance against a dreaded new enemy — super-rat.

The country is already waging a serious war against ordinary rats, yesterday blamed for an estimated 300 deaths, 2,000 Brazil's ports to check unwanted visitors and make sure there are large tin shields on the vessels' hawsers to thwart clandestine entry.

Asked whether super-rat could reach Brazil, one health officer said: "If it depends on the health ministry, no. But you can never be sure of how this powerful new species develops."

The campaign is spurred by a new outbreak of the bubonic plague, the dreaded Black Death of the Middle Ages, which rats tend to spread.

In the state of Bahia, north of Rio de Janeiro, five people died recently and about 40 other cases of the plague were reported.

Rats spread other deadly diseases, including typhus and typhus. They also attack humans directly. In the northeastern state of Pernambuco, two babies were killed by a horde of rodents which gnawed their beards.

Recently agricultural laborers in Bahia refused to go to work on the coast plantations for fear of being attacked by rats.

In southern Parana state the rodents attacked cornfields and destroyed 20 per cent of a forest project.

Health authorities said they cannot undertake a frontal attack against rats throughout the country because of the high cost.

Local authorities have launched attacks in various cities, issuing battle bulletins with body counts.

In the federal capital of Brasilia the local health department announced 30,000 rats killed in a month.

In Rio de Janeiro the poor, crowded favelas, or shanty towns, with their filthy conditions and piles of refuse, prove a "mecca for the rodent.

When the inhabitants of one large shanty town were removed and the slum destroyed, descendants of hungry rats invaded the apartments and enclosures of Rio's most exclusive quarters.

Trenton Officials Divided On Future Political Course

TRENTON — Veteran councillory George Greer and Edward Patrick have been defeated by Robert Wannamaker, who has confirmed that he intends to run for re-election in the upcoming Dec. 2 battle for city council. In a survey re-vealed here Wednesday, only one council member, John Bean, has indicated he will not be up for re-election in December. Councillor Bean has been elected by acclamation to represent the Ward 2 location.

Nominations for the seven council seats will be received during the Nov. 2-23 nomination period.

Mayor Patrick said: "Well, frankly he is fed up, mulling it over" and assessing what his work with council is doing to his dentist's practice and young family.

Asked if his intentions will be made public shortly, he said he is "still leaning towards no". He added he has not reached the time needed for council business.

Councillor Bean said personal interests in other enterprises and frustration with provincial and federal government involvement in municipal decision-making are two factors in his decision not to run.

Canadian Pacific Railway merchandise department head Edward Todd announced his candidacy for a second consecutive term this week.

Veteran of nine years — seven years as a council member, he said he will be running on his experience: "I have no axes to grind. There are no issues at stake."

Incumbent George Greer, a postal clerk, has served his sixth year, and fourth term, if re-elected.

Robert Wannamaker said Wednesday his decision to stand for re-election was made several months ago.

The councillor, a Dunstar Packaging Ltd. general accountant, was moved into a council seat Jan. 1, 1974, after the resignation of Mayor Dunbar Sinclair.

Councillor Patrick was elected mayor by fellow council members. The vacated seat was filled by Mr. Wannamaker, making the recipient of the seventh largest number of votes among the 11 candidates for councillor in 1972.

Mohawks Seek Advice

By HARRY MULRALL
Staff Reporter

TYENDINAGA — The elected council of the Quinte Mohawks is seeking legal advice in the running dispute with opponents on the reserve.

Chief William Brant says he and other members of council will confer with a lawyer in Toronto Friday on the situation. Last night's scheduled interruptions of council meetings by Mohawks have been continued to end for more than a month.

The chief, meantime, postponed for one week a council meeting that was scheduled for Wednesday night. The action was greeted by the other confrontation between opposing factions.

Council's opponents earlier had threatened to once again halt the meeting, which has been interrupted or delayed by hawks who claim they have abandoned elected reserve government by common consent.

The blunt hostility now one member of the opposing group evidently forcibly removed from the council chamber, by reserve police. Later, council members signed a controversial lease with the Canada Cement LaFarge corporation for the original cause of the disputes in the district.

Cliff Maracle, chemistry consultant and spokesman for council's opponents, said Wednesday hostilities are to continue, protests at any future meetings.

The protesters were objecting to "having their rights being trampled on" and when Mohawks "get mad they stay mad".

"Things won't quieten down — not with our people. Once the people get riled they're not going to back down from anyone."

His said letters had been sent to reserve police officers Richard Brant and Tom Maracle offer their version of incident in the council chamber.

"We told them another incident wouldn't be put up with and that they should be the victims of people who are residents of the reserve also," said Mr. Maracle.

Cyclist Hurt In Crash

SMITHFIELD — A Smith field cyclist Carl Deboer, 14, of 49 Wall St., residing in Trenton hospital today in good condition with injuries to his left knee and face after his bike was in collision with a school bus near Westwood.

Brighton provincial police said the boy lost control of his bicycle and was in collision with a Northcourt bus driven by George Chamber 57, of RR 4 Brighton. The boy was travelling south of Wall St. in Smithfield, a hamlet six miles west of Trenton.

The Big Hoist

Weighing more than 80 tons, last, giant section of cement kiln at former Canada Cement Lafarge Co. Point Anne plant is hoisted in place for export Wednesday. Part of equipment from the now-abandoned plant which has been bought by Dominican Republic company, it will later be shipped down the Bay of Quinte.

Shriners Express Concern Over Image to Public

Shriners are a spirited group.

But the public may only appreciate one side of their exuberant approach — when the Shriners parade in fez, hats with fan-filled insert.

How well known is the basic work of the organization which has raised — and spent — millions for crippled youngsters.

Nonetheless, Shriners should have no doubt about the true intent of their organization.

"It's not the fez. It's not the fun. It's not the fraternalism," said John Lazenby, Belleville Shrine Club president. "It's first and foremost crippled children."

Mr. Lazenby was chairman by a banquet at the club stage to extend the appreciation of Shriners to others in the community who had assisted with crippled children during the year.

Organizations given presentations were the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund; Belleville Minor Hockey Association — which helps with the Shriners' power parramount; CFB Trenton, which stages an annual air display, including plane rides,for crippled youngsters.

Homebuilder Predicts Major Policy Changes

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The provincial government will make major changes in housing industry policy announcements within the "year or at least one election" that is 20 per cent speculation tax — says Don Ward, a 25 Catharines builder and chairman of the Ontario council of HUDAC, a national association of home builders.

Mr. Ward, speaking at a meeting of the Quinte Home Builders' Association Wednesday said Don Irvine, the province's minister of housing will make a "major housing statement within the week" but declined to be specific.

Mr. Ward said his information was gathered from meetings between the province and HUDAC.

He said the province will also come out with legislation within the year providing for a "mandatory warranty and insurance scheme for homes".

He said this announcement would originate with minister of consumer and commercial relations, John Clement.

"The province is looking at the numbers game," said Mr. Ward. "They're asking how many units they want constructed this year and builder/suppliers are in a position to have some changes to provincial legislation because we are the ones who will have to keep the government forecast."

Later, in an interview Mr. Ward was reluctant to divulge what forms the anticipated provincial announcements will take.

He said in the case of the 20 per cent speculation tax, that percentage would not be lowered but probably some of the areas it affects would be exempted.

"I think the provincial politicians are realizing the housing industry is a difficult place to get votes and they're trying to get out of it," added he said.

In the meantime, Mr. Ward proposed that government take more measures with municipalities which are reluctant to encourage housing growth.

"If a municipality seems to be taking a no-growth attitude when provincial planners feel the area should be growing say five per cent annually, provincial officials in that municipality should be reduced."

On the other side of the coin, if municipalities exceed the growth rates provincial planners deem satisfactory, "those municipalities should receive a bonus," said Mr. Ward.

In connection with municipalities moving slowly on building approvals, Mr. Ward said the holdup is no longer building what he or the consumer wants — "but what the municipality wants — right down to the color of shingles on the roof."

There's more to life for some people than just single family homes, he said. "It's a matter of preference as some people want to live in a semi-detached, condominium or townhouse development.

"We should be building what the market demands," he said.

HUDAC members build 25 per cent of the houses in Ontario, which constitutes 40 per cent of the Canadian housing industry.

With this in mind, Mr. Ward told members of the Quinte Home Builders the quickest assistance is close enough to get the province moving in providing leadership for the housing industry.

Builder Urges:

Stress Home Value Not Interest Rate

The Quinte Home Builders Association Wednesday was told to take the emphasis off mortgage interest rates and place it on product quality when trying to sell homes.

Don Ward, Ontario Council chairman for HUDAC — national association of home builders — said: "We're not the prisoners of interest rates. We're in the business of selling homes."

He said customers can be sold with this change of approach by not emphasizing how much the house will cost in interest rate but how much it will be worth in future years as market values continue to appreciate.

"This worst investment a potentials home owner can make is wait until next year when the interest rate may or may not drop," he said.

"The 11-per-cent interest rates aren't our problem," he said. "Our (salesman) problem is we're afraid of the rate and if we're afraid what can we expect of a potential buyer?

"Every year we've been facing interest rates," said Mr. Ward. "Our business is not selling rates but homes."

Bay's Commercial Fishermen Becoming a Vanishing Breed

By CASH MARAFFY
Staff Reporter

Commercial fishing in the Bay of Quinte, long-renowned for its yield of pike, perch and freshwater fisheries, is on the way out.

That is the word of Jack Alyea, manager of Bay of Quinte Fisheries Ltd., on the shore of the Bay Bridge at Belleville.

There are two main reason: "We have the fish in the Bay, but we don't have the fishermen," and he adds that restrictions on commercial fishing have had a serious effect on the traditional Quinte-area boat

More Women Join Area Workforce

More women than men registered for work with Canada Manpower in Belleville during September.

Inflation, prompting women to become second wage earners, may be one factor in the increase, surmises Jim White, Manpower office manager.

During the last month, 894 women were listed for jobs compared with 743 in August. In September there were 525 men female registered.

September also sees the end of school holidays, thus freeing more women for employment, said Mr. White. Registrations also increase when word circulates that industries are hiring.

"But inflation is also bringing some women out for work, in my opinion," said the manager.

Age group with the most registrations — 225 — was 25-44 years.

A total of 1,779 men and women were listed for jobs during September compared with 1,843 in August. This included 885 men compared to 1,190 in August. The August total included students seeking summer work.

The Belleville area economy remains generally steady with new industry helping stimulate activity, said Mr. White.

Home construction, depressed by tight money, showed a negligible increase.

During September, 308 men and women were placed in jobs through Manpower. Placements in casual jobs totalled 55.

It Won't Happen Again Vows General Manager

So the Bobcats have lost a Metro Junior B Hockey League game.

Who said they'd go through the season undefeated?

Only one of the 24 teams in the two-division league can boast an undefeated record in the early going. And Bramalea, leader in the Central Division, is not altogether un-tarnished. That team has four wins and a tie in five starts.

"SNIPE" MATTHEWS

What's bothering Bobcats' general manager Jim (Snipe) Matthews, it is the way his troops went about taking their first taste of defeat.

"We just stopped checking," explains the manager.

And the GM points out that when Pickering Panthers are supplying the opposition, that shortcoming can be fatal.

It can be fatal. And it was, Sunday, in Pickering.

As a result of that setback, Bobcats are now second in the scramble for the top rung in the Eastern Division.

Only three points separate the top four teams. Panthers have eight points; Cats, seven; Markham, six and Kingston, five.

While Snipe is not looking for excuses for the Sunday defeat, he does admit the team missed regulars Scott Samis, Robbie Foster, Paul King, Curt McClean and Harry MacDonald.

The absence of those five skaters had to hurt.

Foster, the team captain, was sidelined by a shoulder injury. Samis is still out of the lineup while recovering from an 18-stitch cut in the chin. The word on McLean is the forward twisted an ankle while playing tennis.

Snipe couldn't explain the absence of King and MacDonald.

Samis is expected to rejoin the team October 22 for a road trip to Markham.

Foster, a proven two-way performer who makes things happen while he's on patrol, should be back for Friday night's home game with Whitby.

"If anyone says Friday, it won't be us," promises Matthews.

And he's looking forward to Pickering's first visit to Memorial Arena, October 31.

"They (Panthers) will see a different team when they come down here," he vows.

It's a long season.

The general manager obviously is taking steps to make sure it is a successful one.

SLICES — Napanee's Vern Amey, a competent performer with Bobcats last season, has been working out with the club this week. The defenceman will see some action, Friday.

Before the start of Friday's match, the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Peewee A champions, Belleville SACO will be introduced at centre ice.

September's Bobcat Bluelino Club lucky number will be announced between periods. The prize money is $200.

October's lucky number will become $200 richer between periods of the October 25 game.

According to the Oshawa Times, Pickering Panthers' coach Sherry Bassin is aiming to have his club take part in the Canada Winter Games, in Alberta, come February.

Apparently, the Metro League's top team in February will take part in a playoff at Thunder Bay for the right to represent Ontario.

The three Trenton players with Pickering, Tom Manley, Bill Glover and Tim Manley, each scored a goal in that 9-5 defeat of Bobcats.

Evelyn Bryant, publicity convenor for the Belleville Minor Hockey Association passes along word that the house league schedules open Saturday.

Convenors of each section will pass on more information to team representatives.

Admission prices for Ontario Minor Hockey Association games this season are $1 for adults and 50 cents, children.

Those youngsters under 12 who are accompanied by an adult will be admitted free.

Season tickets are available at a cost of $15 each. Children and students get a $7.50 rate.

The feature race at Sunday's regular Frontenac Downs card in Kingston will be the Gerrard Walsh Memorial Invitational Pace.

Prima Blossom, Arts and Battles, Ruby Parker, Leland Creed and Jimmy Bing are five of the eight starters.

Special presentations will be made to the owner of each horse in the Gerrard Walsh Memorial. The awards will be made on behalf of Kawartha Downs, Rideau Carlton, Quinte Raceway, Connaught Park, Kingston Horsemen's Driving Club, and Frontenac Downs.

Harness racing fans from the Quinte area will be admitted free, Sunday.

Stirling, Madoc Winners

Mike Jackson's goal in overtime gave Stirling the championship in the Hastings County Elementary Schools junior soccer tournament at Sir James Whitney School, Wednesday.

The goal broke a scoreless tie as Stirling nipped College St. School of Trenton 1-0 in the boys' final.

Madoc Township captured the girls' title for the second year in a row, edging Tyendinaga 1-0 in the final on a goal by Mary Courneyea.

Three Belleville schools, Sir John A. MacDonald, Bayview and Hillcrest were represented in the boys' event, Hamilton rounded out by the six-team list.

Frankford and Belleville Bayview joined Madoc Township and Tyendinaga in the girls' section.

Stanley Structures On Scoring Rampage

Stanley Structures, top team in the Greg Noon Hockey League during the 1973-74 season when the club was sponsored by Mead Johnson, piled up 23 goals in a Wednesday night win over Canadian Durasia.

Al Wood prevented Vern Whalen from recording a shutout when he connected for the losers' only goal.

Ray Summers led the Stanley shooters with six goals and three assists. Ron Fuller fired two goals and earned four helpers while Wayne Stanner was good for three and three. Bob Windyka also clicked for three goals with Ted Rowland adding two. Frank Wiles, Ross Herrington, Bob Harrington, Pete Quackenbush, Charlie Rowbotham and Wayne McGeachy had the others.

The winners pulled into a tie for first place with Yardmen. Each team has two wins in as many league starts.

In Wednesday's other match, Checkwarps Foods hit the win column after a pair of setbacks.

Joe Scanlan supplied shutout goaltending as the team topped Canadian Carpet 5-0.

Paul Fleming fired three goals and Grant Sage connected for a pair. Al Walker

Juveniles Lose 5-3

OSHAWA — An Oshawa goal in the final minute of play spoiled an opening game bid for points by Belleville's BMHA Juvenile A1 Flyers, who wound up on the short end of a 5-3 score here Wednesday night.

Rick Growden, Richard Reid, and Roger Chapman scored for Belleville, while Don Thompson and Jeff Gorman adequately split the goaltending chores.

Oshawa led 1-0 after the opening period, and the two teams went into the final 20 minutes tied 1-1.

The Chase Is On

During much of Tuesday's Bay of Quinte high school football junior match at Centennial Secondary School, Trenton High School defenders were in pursuit of Chargers' quarter back Paul Hipkin. In the top photo, two Trenton Tiger defenders attempt to head the ball carrier off and at the left, THS defensive end Paul Coveney has the elusive quarterback lined up. Chargers brought their season record to 4-1 with a 36-6 win.

A's One Away From the Title

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's have Lot Angeles Dodgers where they want them — one game from the National League baseball champs tonight with Vida Blue's left-handed mitt.

"I'd be disappointed if we don't end it tonight," said Oakland Sal Bando after the A's took a commanding 3-1 lead in the 1974 World Series with a 3-2 victory Wednesday night.

With Don Sutton on the mound, the Dodgers aren't dead yet, but it may be just a matter of time. Even if they don't win tonight, history is on the A's' side. Rarely has a team come back from a 3-1 deficit to win a World Series.

GENE TENACE

It's only happened three times — 1958 and 1960 — before.

"We'd like to win tonight, but if we don't, we'll go on down to Los Angeles and finish it," said Bando.

The A's hold the upper hand in this wacky series despite the brutal streak a couple of the Jose been common with the team for some time now.

The latest episode involves Gene Tenace, a smallish player who was lifted from the lineup by Oakland owner Charles O. Finley prior to Wednesday night's game, Tenace's reaction ranged from humiliation to rage. He branded the A's eccentric owner inhumane.

"Finley is trying to bury me," said Tenace, a World Series hero just two year ago. "He treats me as just another number. I'd like to be treated as a man."

Tenace, who had played first base for the first three games of this World Series, found out about the lineup change after a team meeting during which Finley gave a pep talk.

"I had to be told by coach Bobby Winkles," said Tenace, still simmering in the clubhouse a few minutes after Wednesday night's victory. "Neither Finley nor (manager Alvin) Dark would tell me. I felt humiliated."

While Tenace burned, Finley kept the rest of the A's smoldering with his pre-game meeting. He read some inflammatory remarks from Los Angeles star Bill Buckner that appeared in a local newspaper. Buckner, who batted .300 this season, had three good ballplayers and Gar. Maddox to worry about, Finley said. "I told them to go out and prove that he's wrong."

The A's did just that — and got excellent performances from some of baseball's most Buckner-and-turned inferior to the Dodger talent.

Vida Blue, a pitch-hitter who had been in a terrible batting slump, hit a two-run single in a four-run sixth inning that broke the game open. Dick Green knocked in a run and made some spectacular defensive plays at second base. And Ken Holtzman and Rollie Fingers, two pitchers that Buckner says "wouldn't mind having on his team, silenced the usually noisy Los Angeles bats.

Holtzman not only dominated the Dodgers most of the time he was in them, but also hit a home run, something the A's have had a long time doing lately.

Talking about his drive off Andy Messersmith that gave the A's a 1-0 lead in the third inning, Holtzman said: "They got behind me and I was looking for a fastball — and I got it."

The euphoria felt by his home run was quickly dampened by the Dodgers in the next inning. They took a 2-1 lead over Oakland's 19-game winner on a two-run triple by Bill Russell.

Bill North led off the Oakland seventh with a walk and moved to second when Messersmith threw wild past first attempting to pick him off.

Bando drove in the tying run with a fly ball, looping single in right field.

Then Messersmith walked Reggie Jackson and got into more trouble when Joe Rudi sacrificed the runners along. Messersmith then issued an intentional walk to Claudell Washington, who was starting in place of Tenace, and the bases were loaded for the A's.

Holt was announced as the pinch-hitter for Ray Fosse to do quite a streak of recent frustration. Before the World Series, Holt had gone hitless in 25 appearances as a pinch-hitter. He came through in Saturday's first game, however, and then came through again Wednesday night with a clean base hit to right that gave the A's a 4-3 lead.

"I was just trying to hit the ball hard somewhere," Holt said emphatically. "I got a changeup inside. I don't think I managed it that far in."

Green then grounded into a forceout and Washington came home with the A's fourth run of the inning.

Jimmy Wynn, leader of the Dodgers' long-ball offence this season, walked with two out in the eighth and Steve Garvey singled to left. Dark wasted little time in calling in Fingers.

Fingers struck out Joe Ferguson for the last out of the inning, but then put the Dodgers down with the help of a dazzling double play started by Green.

Finley Gets Into the Act — Again

OAKLAND (AP) — Owner-barber O. Finley delivered a pre-talk Wednesday night, quoting Bill Buckner, before Oakland A's went out and beat Los Angeles in the fourth game of the World Series.

"Buckner said we have three good ball players and the other 21 are no-good losers," Finley said after the 5-3 victory over Buckner and the Dodgers.

"I told them to go out and prove that he's wrong."

"Did the talk inspire us?" Reggie Jackson said later. "We don't have to prove anything."

Sal Bando was asked what he got out of the pre-game meeting called by Finley, and he replied: "Five dollars and a shave."

Finley read one paragraph from a newspaper story quoting outfielder Buckner as saying, "the A's have only a couple of players who could make our club," at the clubhouse meeting.

"He didn't talk long, but long enough to make his point," said three-hitter Gene Tenace, who was benched.

Finley changed pitching strategy by benching Tenace and starting Claudell Washington in left field for the second straight game. And Ken Holtzman got his first World Series start, also was announced at the meeting. Finley had held a pre-game ceremony with manager Alvin Dark and the coaches before the game.

"The change was made to get Tenace left-handed hitter in the lineup," Finley said, explaining why Dark said, explaining why three-hitter Gene Tenace was to the bench.

Washington contributed two hits to the victory, and team captain Bando said later: "I worked out well and that's what counts."

Ed Giacomin – Victimized

Rangers' Breaks Are All Bad

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There must have been a time during Wednesday night's 5-5 tie when New York Rangers goalie Ed Giacomin wondered what was going on. Three of California Seals' goals were put into the net New York defenceman and another goal—which actually entered the cage—was disallowed.

That's the way New York's National Hockey League season has been going. In Toronto Saturday night, the defence was more of a hindrance than a help in the Rangers' 7-3 loss, and the same was true Wednesday.

"Bad breaks—that's the only explanation I can give," said defenceman Gilles Marotte, who deflected Joey Johnston's shot into the Rangers' cage just nine seconds after setting up a second-period goal by Pete Stemkowski which gave New York a 3-1 lead.

In other NHL games Wednesday, Chicago Black Hawks picked up their first win of the season with a 4-0 decision over Boston Bruins, and Detroit Red Wings beat Atlanta Flames 4-3. Toronto Maple Leafs earned a 3-3 tie against Los Angeles Kings and Minnesota North Stars did the same against Vancouver Canucks.

Two of the California scores came during a three-goal, Golden Second period. Stan Weir scored at 5:35 of the period, but 39 seconds later, defenceman Rod Selling tipped the puck into the net in an effort to stop John Stewart's pass.

With the score tied 4-4 late in the third period, Giacomin had made a save on Al MacAdam, but Brad Park's momentum carried him into the net with the puck under his body. Only Steve Vickers' tip-in with 1:12 remaining salvaged the tie—and Giacomin's sanity.

Jean Ratelle and Dale Rolfe counted other goals for New York, while Stewart had another for the Seals.

At Chicago, centre Stan Mikita scored two goals and assisted on another by Cliff Koroll to lead the Hawks over the Bruins who remained winless after three games.

Goalie Tony Esposito stopped 29 shots to record his 47th career NHL shutout.

At Minnesota, Cesare Maniago allowed only a first-period goal despite facing 43 Canuck shots while Vancouver's rugged forechecking performance allowed Minnesota 30 shots.

Lou Nanne of the North Stars slammed in a rebound past Vancouver goalie Gary Smith at 12:23 of the final period to lift Minnesota to a tie and keep the club even on the year with a 3-3-1 mark.

Aeros Greet Old Buddy McLeod

Houston Aeros, the defending champions of the World Hockey Association, showed goalie Jim McLeod what he's missing tonight when they don't raise him at all.

McLeod left the Aeros after a dispute during the off season and moved to Vancouver where he landed goal Wednesday night for the Blazers against Aeros.

The Aeros pelted McLeod with 26 shots on the way to a 6-3 victory over the Blazers. It was the other WHA game, besides Roadrunners opening their first season in the league with an 8-3win over San Diego Mariners.

Jon Graham, a second-year pro from Denver University, recorded his first WHA shutout by stopping 30 Vancouver shots. Mark Howe, Larry Lund, Jim Harris, Frank Hughes, Murray Hall and Gord Labossiere provided the Houston scoring.

It took Houston only 69 seconds to score its first goal of the season, with Howe beating McLeod while the Aeros were shorthanded.

Houston scored in the last minute of the opening period when Lund capitalized on a Harrison Headed For Leafs ?

EDMONTON (CP) - - Centre Jim Harrison of Edmonton Oilers walked out of practice Wednesday, leading to speculation the World Hockey Association club may not have him in the lineup for its opening game Friday night in Toronto.

Harrison, a member of Team Canada '74, threw his stick into the stands before walking out.

He told a reporter: "I'm not talking to you."

Harrison and his agent, lawyer Allan Eagleson of Toronto, have been attempting to have an existing contract terminated. Both have said they hope he can rejoin Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League if no new agreement is reached.

The contract expires after next season.

Lengthy Match Won by Chris

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chris Evert outlasted Rosemary Casals 6-2, 6-7, 6-4 in a quarter-final match in a $100,000 women's tennis tournament Wednesday night.

Virginia Wade won her first-round match from Julie Heldman despite playing with an injured back.

The match between Miss Evert, top-seeded in the tournament, and Miss Casals lasted more than two hours and featured a series of long rallies, including one that lasted 46 shots.

Miss Evert, who won at 4-1, 15-30, down some stairs Tuesday but was able to play after undergoing treatment on her back.

Teams Stage Wild Night in AHL

By LLOYD JOHNSTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

If Bill McMurtry is sincerely concerned about violence in the game, he might broadcast his sermons over the American Hockey League.

The Toronto lawyer, commissioned recently to inquire into violence in amateur hockey in Ontario, produced a report that created considerable controversy.

It opened a can of insects that writhed from the minors to professional hockey's top echelon—the National League.

At one time, the AHL was considered a stepping stone to the NHL. But the Central Hockey League usurped that role and perhaps is a fit league for brawlers, their league wasn't specifically mentioned in McMurtry's report. AHL players ignored the recommendation.

Take for example Wednesday night's games.

At Richmond, where Hershey Bears trumpeted 6-4, the referee handed out 106 minutes in penalties. Trailing 5-1 in the wake of a third period fight between the Bears' Paul McIntosh and Robins' Don McLean.

In another game at Norfolk, Va., Springfield Kings and Virginia Red Wings staggered off the ice with the score tied 4-4.

The players' energy was dissipated in the second period, particularly, when the penalty total reached 86 minutes. There were 10 majors, six minors, one double minor and two game misconducts—all the consequence of fighting.

Meanwhile, Nova Scotia Voyageurs were up to their old tricks.

The Voyageurs jumped to a 3-0 lead, let Syracuse Eagles gain a little hope with a comeback spurt and then pulled out a 5-4 victory on Gordon McTavish's breakaway goal with six minutes remaining.

Philly Fans Snub Bell

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A record-low 720 fans turned out at 90,000-seat JFK Stadium on a rainy night in Philadelphia for a World Football League game. The hapless Bell responded by trailing all the way and losing again.

Shreveport Steamer thumped 30-22 Wednesday night with quarterback D. C. Nobles throwing to Rick Eber for touchdown passes of 37 and 39 yards, the second one scoring the winning points.

"I don't know if it was the World Series, the weather or what," said Philadelphia rumner John Land. "But that's the smallest crowd that I can ever remember playing in front of."

Shreveport rusher Jim Nance, who gained 104 yards in the game against 105 for Land, echoed the disappointment.

"Hell, I wrestled in front of more people than that at Indiana High School and that was indoors," said Nance.

Bruins' Vadnais, Orr Have Mikita Boiling

STAN MIKITA

CHICAGO (AP) — Boston Bruins' Ted Green, still recovering from Chicago Black Hawks.

The Hawks, led by fallen to capitalize on three Chicago penalties in the first period, Wednesday night in bowing 4-0 to the Black Hawks.

Veteran centre Stan Mikita scored two goals for Chicago and was holding mad in the dressing room as he displayed a large welt near the rib cage after a wild third period. Mikita accused Boston defenceman Carol Vadnais of using his stick as a weapon.

"The whole game turned around in the first few minutes when we were shorthanded with three penalties and Boston couldn't score," Chicago coach Billy Reay said.

"Unfortunately the game was marred by the cheap shot Bobby Orr took against Stan Mikita.

"A player like Orr has too much class to do what he did.

"You don't go up to another player and hit him from behind. He should have known better."

"But what really bothered me was getting hit in the manner I did by Bobby Orr," said Mikita. Orr refused to talk to writers in the Boston dressing room.

Smiths Falls — Rally Capital

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Twelve hundred miles from now, Walter Boyce and Stewart Gray will be exhausted, physically and mentally drained by an event that will have made Canadian motorsports history when it ends.

Boyce, the Canadian rally champion for five consecutive years, takes his factory-backed Toyota Celica off the starting ramp in this eastern Ontario town today in the Rally of the Rideau Lakes. Sewart, from Englund, is his navigator, filling in for regular Dave Woods, sidelined as rally-master for the event.

Hot on their heels, at one-minute intervals, will be the cream of world rally drivers, including the powerful Fiat factory team.

Fifth in the eight-event 1974 series that began in Sweden last February and ends in Corsica in December, the rally will end early Saturday and the winner should be declared by 9 a.m. that day. In the interim, the 64 entries from seven countries will have covered some of the roughest backroads and logging trails this region 50 miles southwest of Ottawa can offer—every corner and hill hand-picked by Woods.

It is the first time the nine-year-old event has been granted world status by the International Automobile Federation, governing body of racing and rallying.

Smith Falls bills itself as the "rally capital of Canada," a title it deserves. Hardly anyone in the town is not involved in some part of the event, even if it is only providing a bed or a hot meal.

It's this kind of spirit that puts the town of 10,000 people on the motorsports map beside such exotic names as Portugal, Kenya and Finland, where some of the other world championship rallies are held.

Shaw Fortunate Paper Plentiful

LONDON (CP) — James Agate, a critic with a limited admiration for George Bernard Shaw's output as a dramatist, once wrote that his plays were the price we paid for his prefaces.

The protest Irishman left voluminous evidence by which posterity can judge his varied talents as a playwright, music and drama critic, polemicist, philosopher, economist and self-assisted authority on virtually every subject of importance before his death in 1950 at the age of 94.

The greater part of this life work now has been published by Shaffer Hand in seven volumes of plays and prefaces, two of autobiography and two of letters.

He may have been lucky to live in an age when paper was plentiful. Two London journals, long since defunct, The Star and The World, allowed him 2,500 words a week, which he supplied with no apparent difficulty.

The plays and prefaces rate as the definitive edition, authorized by the residual beneficiaries of the Shaw estate—the British Museum, National Gallery of Ireland and Royal Academy of Dramatic Art.

It is faithful to his idiosyncrasies of punctuation and spelling, his refusal to use the apostrophe because he considered it a blot on the printed page and his preference for the archaic "shew" instead of "show."

The plays include not only such well-known works as Pygmalion, Saint Joan and Major Barbara but others that have barely seen the light of day such as an early Passion Play, The Chances, The Gaoler's Wife and She Would Not If She Could, three days before his 94th birthday. There were 51 of them in all.

The old iconoclast's stamina was typified in the preface to Unfinished Fables, completed in 1948:

"As I have now entered my 93rd year, my fault must be expect more from me than a few crumbs dropped from the literary loaves I distributed in my prime, than a few speculations as to what may happen in the next million light years that are troubling me in the queer second-wind that follows second childhood."

"Life is no brief candle to me," he once wrote. "It is a sort of splendid torch which I have got hold of for the moment."

Popular Vocalist Returns to Ottawa

OTTAWA — Ivan Rebroff returns to the National Arts Centre Opera stage Monday, Oct. 21, at 8:30 p.m.

Berlin-born to Russian parents, Ivan Rebroff is a giant of a man in more ways than one. The bearded basso who at 6'6", has been acclaimed worldwide by the critics and public alike for his extraordinary vocal range of almost five octaves. Specifically, his magnificent voice stretches from a low A, three ledger lines below the bass clef, to a high E, three ledger lines above the treble clef.

Son of an engineer and a non-professional singing mother, Ivan studied violin but later concentrated on voice instruction at Hamburg's Higher School of Music. In order to pay for his studies, the student-singer toured the German provinces with a musical group billed as Cossacks of the Black Sea.

For his opera debut in Frankfurt in 1958, Rebroff sang the role of Don Basilio in The Barber of Seville. In 1966, he wrote Russian lyrics to Liza's Theme for the motion picture Doctor Zhivago, and made a recording of it. The first 100,000 copies were sold in seven weeks.

Rebroff's international career was launched in 1970. He completed a successful tour of South Africa and recorded an album sung in Afrikaans. He then performed in New York, Newport and the Bahamas. He first appeared in Canada in 1972.

He presently has his own television show in Germany, which receives high ratings in all German-speaking countries in Europe.

BIRTHS

SHORTALL — Peter and Kathy (nee Bowerman) are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Sarah Charlene, a beautiful 6 lbs., 13 ozs., born at 2:10 p.m. (EDT), Wednesday, Oct. 23, 1974 at 9 a.m. at Belleville General Hospital.

IN MEMORIAM

CLAPP — In loving memory of a dear husband, Charles, who passed away Oct. 17th, 1971.

Oh! I miss my husband dearly,
Miss him more than words can say,
And those who think of him today,
Please say a prayer for him.
The years may pass,
The months may fly,
But the love for him that we bestowed,
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by daughter Dolores and husband Omie Mumford.

CLAPP — In loving memory of my dear husband, Charles, who passed away Oct. 17, 1971.

What we would give if we could only
Call Dad,
Just to the sound of his voice,
To hear your voice and see your smile,
To sit and talk with you awhile.
To tell you all the things we've done,
Perhaps it was just as well,
We never could have said goodbye,
We'll see you some day by and by,
We assure for you to bless,
Dad, there's a great void,
Which others are missing,
Sadly missed and remembered by daughter Marjorie and family.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Edith J. Wood like to thank the many friends for their kindness to their friend, flowers and remembrances during the many acts of kindness she received at the Belleville General Hospital, Dr. Ross and Dr. Bell, to the staff of Hastings Manor for their kind and efficient care, to Rev. Ford and Rev. Sweetman for their comforting words, to Mrs. Bowerman for her thoughtfulness, to all who remembered her. We sincerely thank the Royal Canadian Legion Br. 99 for their floral tribute.
Ross and Mary, Lindsay and Lois.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to my friends and neighbours for flowers, cards and visits during my stay in Belleville General Hospital, to Dr. Ross, Dr. Bell, Dr. Dowsley, Dr. Dow, Dr. Dowsley, Dr. Dow, Dr. Dowsley, Dr. Dow

Your Horoscope

By Stanley Coben

Friday, October 18

Aries (March 21-April 20) Don't expend largest share of energy on work. You don't think of the same person.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Be careful. Don't be drawn into a situation you can't get out of through the actions of an ex-friend.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) It will be easier for you today to say what's on your mind if something you are dreading. Don't make decisions on selfish facts.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You'll be liable to think it late at night. Don't add any extra frustrations for goofing off. Posts will be valid but you'll convince yourself they are.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 23) You are prone to rely too heavily upon Lady Luck. Remember she's quite fickle and could be favoring someone other than yourself.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are somewhat negligent regarding family matters you are supposed to be attending to. Who will perform them if you don't?

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It will require mental discipline to keep your mind from wandering away from topics that it should be riveted upon.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be a little choosey today. Don't expect that everything you buy will be used productively by a stingy budget director who hates to spend money.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Every place you go today, check before you leave to be sure you haven't forgotten your car keys, papers, purse or whatever.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If retelling a tale told you by another, check and add any extra frustrating in order to make it sound more appealing and interesting than it is.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's time you trim some of your unnecessary outside expenses a trifle. Your budget is getting a little too fragile.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) A goal you are now going for will not be won through effort alone. It's going to take some well-timed help from others.

Deleted, deleted, deleted," swore South, "expletive, expletive! I squeeze them and I really fall for a second-class swindle."

Seven notrump was a mighty good contract. If hearts broke better than 5-1 South would have had 13 top tricks. It was he worked on perfect three-suit squeeze.

He won the spade lead with his king, played two rounds of hearting and began to unwind when West showed out and after considerable slow play came down to a three-card ending. He held a heart, a club and a high diamond, which he led. West sitting in front of dummy had to discard down to a high spade and one club whereupon the eight of spades was thrown from dummy to dummy's ace and jack of clubs.

East, sitting in back of dummy, had to hold a high heart and hence had to unguard his queen of clubs.

Unfortunately for poor South, West had discarded the four of spades on the second heart; played the 10 of spades when the suit was next led; discarded the jack of spades and hung on to the nine.

South knew that one of East's last two cards was a heart. He finally decided that the other one was the nine of spades so South took the club finesse and went down two tricks.

THE CHRD System

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	1 N
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	?

You, South, hold:
♠ A K 8 4 2 ♥ 10 7 6 ♦ K Q 8 7 ♣ Q 8 7

What do you do now?

A—Bid four spades. Take the simple Blackwood route to at least slam.

TODAY'S QUESTION
You bid four notrump and he shows two aces. You bid five notrump and he shows one king. What do you do now?

Plan Development

L'ANSE AUX MEADOWS, Nfld. (CP) — A five-year development plan has been announced for the L'Anse aux Meadows National Park by Parks Canada. The park, located on the tip of Great Northern Peninsula, is the only authenticated Norse settlement site yet discovered in North America. It was discovered in 1960 and has been described as one of the most remarkable archeological discoveries of the century.

To Your Good Health

Low Voltage Heart Not so Serious

By G. C. HOSTERON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is meant by a "low voltage heart"? I had what was diagnosed as a mild angina pectoris, and the lab technician mailed the E. K. G. made the remark about my heart.—R.R.

Well, you know what an electrocardiogram (EKG) is. There are, in every fit heart, short, electrical currents. (In nerves, too, of course. And in the brain.)

If there has been a heart attack, and the heart muscle damaged, there will be changes in the EKG tracing—the wavy line on the graph paper. Other changes can be identified like, wise.

"Low voltage" implies that the amplitude of the ups and downs on the graph is less than normal, and that indicates that the electric currents are, or conceivably lower voltage.

This lower voltage can occur with low thyroid activity; with chemical changes in the blood, or as part of a normal condition, whereas muscular activity of various sorts is reduced.

I would not take the expression "low voltage" too seriously or as implying serious heart disease.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: World psyllium seed be safe to take in orange juice or milk about three times a week? The doctors have told me not to eat figs or strawberries. Cereal is also off weight but feel the bowel may need a suitable amount for it. I have taken psyllium in the past and it worked excellently.—G.L.

Your thinking is on the right track. Foods with hard seeds can be irritating to the diverticulum pocket. So can a few other foods. Psyllium seed is a soft, absorbent material and can provide you with bulk for the bowel without causing irritation.

Bulk, it has been established, helps when you have diverticulosis. An idea held in the past that a low residue diet was necessary has been disproved.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: After reading your article that touching the floor without bending the knees isn't dangerous, I wanted to tell you I have been doing this almost every day for about 45 years. I am now 70½ years old. Not only touching the floor but I still walk across the floor about 10 feet with my palms flat on the floor, and without bending my knees. I have a job yet, it is not harmful. I am a mother of four, have 13 grandchildren. That's how I keep fit.—Mrs. H.K.

How do you mean, that's the way you keep fit? By the exercise, or by having 13 grandchildren? Either way, congratulations and thanks for writing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband suffered from itchy, bleeding hemorrhoids until a friend told him to try using pads (such as wunga's sanitary napkins) or a clean handkerchief dampened with witch hazel. Preferable use at bedtime, fasten in place against the hemorrhoids all night.

This friend said they worked for him, and they worked for my husband in two weeks and less than a pint of witch hazel. He has had no more trouble and it has been five months.—Mrs. F.Z.

That is one of many systems used to relieve the symptoms of hemorrhoids. Others use ointments; still, a hot bath; apply warm compresses to the area.

None of them correct or change the basic condition; they relieve symptoms. Pads soaked in witch hazel are available as Tucks, and a bit more convenient than your friend's method.

WATCH THE RABBITS

Naturalists say dry weather is approaching when you see rabbits playing in the open.

Niagara Falls Surreys Too Slow for Traffic

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Visitors to the falls better scurry if they want a ride on a surrey with a fringe on top.

The popular horse-drawn vehicles are under a lingering death sentence, passed more than two years ago by the Niagara Parks Commission (NPC) which convicted them of slowing down traffic in the park.

The NPC originally told the 13 licensed surrey operators in May, 1972, that their licences would be revoked at the end of the year.

After some public reaction, the commission agreed to renew existing licences on a year-to-year basis, however, no new licences would be issued and a transfer would not be permitted if an owner or driver decided to retire.

Since then, the number of carriages operating has shrunk to six and the oldest driver, 79-year-old Herb Wiltshire, has announced that he will pack it in at the end of this season. Some of the other drivers are over 70 and the antique vehicles have been around as long as most Niagara Falls residents can remember.

Thousands of honeymooners and families have enjoyed their first glimpse of the falls from the seat of a surrey. For many, it is the first horse-drawn ride they have experienced.

The year the NPC first announced it was going to ban the buggies it introduced a fleet of viewmobiles to carry visitors through the park. The gas-driven minitrains pull up to 48 passengers in two cars while a guide with a microphone sits in the back and describes the scenic highlights.

A viewmobile ride costs $1, 50 cents for a child. Adults pay $3 on the surreys and children ride free. The buggies can carry a maximum of five passengers and make five or six trips a day.

Surrey drivers deny responsibility for traffic congestion in the park and note that the viewmobiles also travel at slow speeds and make frequent stops.

"It's the people trying to park their cars along the side of the parkway that tie things up," said Mr. Wiltshire, who has driven surreys for 14 years.

"One guy stops to park and about 60 or 70 cars have lined up before he's finished. Removing the wagons from the park won't improve the traffic at all."

He started driving when he was pensioned off from the local Dynamold of Canada Ltd. plant.

"It has been like a vacation for me every summer driving through the park. Everyone should have a little job to work at after retirement."

Hacky, the horse that pulls his surrey, is also near retirement at 18.

"They might get another year out of him if they're lucky," Mr. Wiltshire said.

Surrey owners have to acquire four licences—a $12 permit and $1 driver's licence from the city and another $25 permit and $10 driver's licence from the NPC. In addition, there is compulsory $100,000 liability insurance costing $60 a season.

Assuming the owner already has a surrey, which costs $1,200 to $1,400, a good horse costs about $600.

Suitable horses are hard to find. Most can't start in the park until they are 10 years old, when they are calmer and more accustomed to traffic. Hacky was one of the last to come off the milk route of a Thorold, Ont., dairy.

Since the carriages are no longer made, wagons that have been taken off the road have to be stripped for spare parts.

Added to these problems is the expense of feeding and shoeing the horses.

An NPC official said recently the commission is considering a plan to open up the park considerably and relieve it of its traffic problems.

Parking would be banned on the section of parkway passing the falls and it would be made a one-way route with a huge parking lot at the top of the hill, from which tourists would be transported to the falls by viewmobile or possibly monorail system.

If the plan is implemented, the official said, the NPC may relax its restrictions on the surreys.

But by that time there may be no more surreys around.

Brucellosis Vaccine Could Hurt Farmers

OTTAWA (CP) — Farmers were advised Wednesday to have their own government quarantine programs rather than attempt to fight the cattle disease brucellosis with vaccine.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said the government continues to believe the disease should be controlled by testing and quarantine programs — to keep animals pure for export.

Brucellosis, a bacterial disease in cattle which affects reproductive systems and causes abortion in pregnant cows, has broken out in a number of southeastern Ontario herds. Al- so Lawrence (PC—North umberland—Durham) asked the minister if the government planned to reintroduce a vaccination program to help farmers fight the outbreak.

Mr. Whelan replied that the disease is not widespread, and that while there was no law against using vaccine, the agriculture department did not encourage its use.

Traces of vaccine show up in blood samples and may be mistaken for the disease itself when breeders attempt to sell heifers or cows for export, he said.

But there is any evidence of the disease, "some countries just will not accept the cattle and that could be a damaging thing to a breeder."

Indian Housing Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Wednesday he is confident of "fairly significant headway" in improving the housing conditions of Indians.

A Commons committee was told Tuesday by Pierre Lasnier, assistant deputy minister for Indian affairs, there is need for 30,000 new Indian homes during the next five years. He said 2,- 500 would be built in 1974.

Lalonde Checks Insulin Hoarding

OTTAWA (CP) — Insulin supplies continue to be plentiful and the government is investigating reports of hoarding, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said in the Commons Wednesday.

He said government officials will confer with representatives of the drug industry and the Canadian Diabetic Association on complaints by the association that hoarding of beef pancreases might lead to shortages and higher prices for insulin.

Insulin medication used in the treatment of diabetes, is manufactured from beef pancreases.

Mr. Lalonde said a preliminary investigation revealed no evidence that meat packers are hoarding beef pancreases to drive up the cost of insulin.

A health department statement said officials at Connaught Laboratories Ltd., the major insulin manufacturer in Canada, "have indicated some concern about long-range prospects for insulin supply."

But there is no immediate shortage and no evidence of hoarding, the statement said.

The association has warned that insulin prices could increase by 10 per cent because of higher production costs.

The statement said most packers have not been allowed to export beef pancreases for the last two years.

Dr. Albert Fisher, president of the association, told the association, said on the weekend that packing companies are hoarding supplies of animal pancreas, and that the price of the drug is likely to increase.

Appeal Fails to Save Milk Subsidy

PALMERSTON, Ont. (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Wednesday the federal government's five-cents-a-quart subsidy on bottled milk will be withdrawn despite an eleventh-hour appeal for its retention by the Ontario branch of the Canadian Association of Consumers (CAC).

"If anything further is done to assist people in low-income groups, it will be done through the social services," he said in an interview. These have been substantially increased by the federal government.

The subsidy, initiated in September, 1973, is scheduled to come off in Ontario at the rate of three cents a quart Oct. 21, with the balance removed Feb. 1.

The CAC had asked either that it be retained or removed at a rate of one cent a month.

Producers say removal of the subsidy will bring an across-the-board increase of six cents a quart at the retail level Oct. 21, and an additional four cents a quart Feb. 1.

Mr. Whelan, who also spoke to about 100 persons at a meeting of the Southwestern Ontario Lamb Producers Association, said:

"There is nothing stopping the provincial governments from providing a bottled milk subsidy if they want to get into it."

"Field (bottled) milk is in the provincial field. Our field is industrial milk."

Industrial milk is used in the manufacture of butter, cheese, skim milk powder and other milk products.

Richardson Insists Forces Staying at 78,500... This Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson left little room for doubt Thursday that the Canadian armed forces will be reduced by more than an hour of questioning before the commons defence committee and later by reporters, the minister could give no indication of the size of the inflation-hurt forces after next April 1.

He did say they would not be smaller than 78,500 — about 2,500 under strength—in the 1974-75 fiscal year ending March 30 and that no bases will be closed in that time.

But the size and ranking of the forces after that would be determined by a number of cabinet decisions.

The minister reiterated recent remarks that because no cash has been allowed to fall in efforts to live approximately within the federal budget "Canadians, they are overworked and some tasks must be reduced."

He said the cabinet is studying which of those tasks will be dropped and should make a decision shortly.

Meanwhile, the minister said the five-year plan of financing, under which the defence budget would grow seven per cent a year, has been killed by inflation.

Mr. Richardson, who announced the plan last year as a new era for the forces, said he must ask the treasury board for more than seven per cent.

He said the forces in the current fiscal year will spend about $100 million more than originally budgeted. But still it was necessary to cut $100 million more than 100 Metro policemen have asked for an independent investigation of citizen complaints against police.

In a brief to lawyer Arthur Maloney's one-man review of the province's police complaints bureau, the association noted that the policemen want an independent system to arbitrate police grievances. The association said it feels police should have that right.

Whelan 'Dead As Eggs'

Lorne Whelan

OTTAWA (CP) — The parliamentary inquiry into egg marketing began Thursday with Progressive Conservative James McGrath charging that Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan covered up the rotten egg scandal for political reasons.

Mr. McGrath (St. John's East), the Tory consumer affairs critic, said Mr. Whelan is responsible for the production of an estimated 36 million eggs left to rot in improper storage by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA).

The "cover-up" was done to help restore rural votes in the July 8 federal election, Mr. McGrath said in the Commons.

His charges came as the House approved a motion to set up a 14-member special committee to look into egg marketing. It will report to Parliament by Dec. 31.

Mr. Whelan, he said, realized early in January that millions of eggs bought at support by CEMA to protect egg farmers against a price drop, were rotting.

It was impossible to "conceal the stench" of the rotten egg in one, however, and the minister now was, by political terms, "dead as these 36 million eggs."

Pets Compete For Food

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — S. H. Wilson, assistant dean, Michigan State University college of agriculture, said Thursday that household pets' competition with man for food produced in this country is small.

Mr. Wilson, professor of horticulture, said he considers dogs and cats self-indulgent excesses in a continent of affluence in a world of hunger.

He said the food bill for the 20 million cats and dogs in the United States is $2.1 billion a year.

Metro Police Undergo Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — The province will hold a public inquiry into findings and reports of alleged brutality by Metropolitan Toronto police, C. G. Rick, chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto Board of Police Commissioners, announced Thursday.

Mr. Rick said he will meet with Solicitor-General George Kerr early today to discuss terms of reference and other details of how the inquiry will be conducted.

Mr. Kerr said later he agreed to the inquiry after Mr. Rick had asked for it.

Mr. Rick made the announcement after the five-man board met for an hour in a closed session and voted unanimously in favor of the inquiry.

"We knew something had to be done," he said. "The integrity and respect of the Metro police force must be sustained."

Police Chief Harold Adamson attended the meeting but was not available for comment.

Toronto newspapers have published a series of stories quoting individuals as saying they suffered severe mishandling by police. Some stories said lie-detector tests indicated the complainants were telling the truth regarding specific parts of their complaints.

Mr. Kerr said details to be worked out today include who will conduct the inquiry and whether it will be held under provisions of the Public Inquiries Act or the Police Act.

A public inquiry is "basically the same as a royal commission," he said.

Mr. Rick said he will recommend that the inquiry be conducted separately from one scheduled to be held into allegations of guard brutality at the Don Jail there.

That inquiry is to begin Nov. 6 before Judge Barry Shapiro of county court.

In still another related development Thursday, the Canadian Civil Liberties Association said

Lie-detector Supports Accusations

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail quotes a 19-year-old Toronto youth, who is facing a variety of charges, as saying he was viciously beaten twice by police during a five-day period in August.

The newspaper quotes the youth, whose parents have requested that his name be withheld, as saying that in the first incident police knocked him out in an alley by kicking him and breaking his nose and then left him there unconscious.

Five days later, the newspaper quotes the youth as saying, he was taken to a police station as a suspect in a breaking. There, he was stripped, beaten and forced to stand naked before an air conditioner while detectives poured cold water on him.

The newspaper says polygraph (lie-detector) tests given to the youth showed he was telling the truth in reply to questions dealing with specific parts of his allegations.

Nixon Could Testify At Watergate Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon, already a witness at the Watergate cover-up trial through his taped conversations, may be well enough soon to testify in person, his lawyer says.

"It's our concept. Low on gas but high on price."

Meanwhile, the electronic testimony continued today with a recording whose contents have never been disclosed.

Nixon's lawyer, Herbert Miller, told U.S. District Judge John Sirica Thursday that Nixon may be able to come before the judge in three weeks and "no longer raise the health issue."

Miller said that he will have a prognosis on Nixon's health in that time and that he is sure it will be favorable."

In San Clemente, Calif., however, Nixon's spokesman, former White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler, said the former chief executive is "not very well" and that his left leg still is swollen with phlebitis.

Ziegler also said that Nixon's spirits are sagging as he waits to hear whether he will be called to testify at the trial of his former aides.

Nixon was subpoenaed by John Ehrlichman, his former domestic counsellor and a defendant at the criminal conspiracy trial along with H. R. Haldeman, John Mitchell, Kenneth Parkinson and Robert Mardian.

With former presidential counsel John Dean on the witness stand for the third day, prosecutors planned to play a recording of March 21, 1973, when Dean apparently had his first substantive Watergate discussion with Nixon.

Cigarette Prices Threatened by Crop Failures

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., Toronto, says a worldwide shortage of flue-cured tobacco may cause another price increase if Canadian cigarettes.

R. H. Hawkes said the price of a 25-cigarette package would go up one cent if the wholesale price of the 1974 Canadian tobacco crop rises to 94 cents a pound.

The 1973 crop sold for an average price of 79 to 80 cents a pound and the 1972 crop sold for an average 77 cents a pound.

Mr. Hawkes said in an interview that the deciding factor in this year's wholesale buying will be the demand from the export market. Crop failures and early frosts in many parts of the world have resulted in a tobacco shortage likely to last a number of years.

Ontario tobacco auctions, scheduled to open Oct. 28, may not open by that date by growers if manufacturers do not sign an agreement guaranteeing a minimum floor price.

Paul Pare, president of Imasco Ltd., Montreal, and president of the Tobacco Manufacturers' Council, said the issue is a one-cent-per pound export incentive to be paid to growers.

He said the incentive was originally negotiated to encourage exports when there was an oversupply of tobacco for the domestic market.

But the worldwide shortage had made the incentive unnecessary because of the ready market for any excess over domestic requirements.

The manufacturers have agreed to continue paying the incentive and Mr. Pare says all are concerned over what the marketing board intends to do with $1.5 million currently in the trust fund.

NDP Teacher Scores Upset in Byelection

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — George Samis, a 31-year-old Cornwall school teacher, swept the provincial Stormont riding for the New Democratic Party Thursday in a byelection victory applauded by leader Stephen Lewis as an "overwhelming anti-government sentiment."

With all 132 polls reporting, the unofficial count showed Mr. Samis with a 2,605-vote plurality over Progressive Conservative candidate Guy Leger, a Cornwall alderman. Liberal Paul Rouleau, a 24-year-old Cornwall lawyer, finished a distant third.

The riding had been held until recently by the Conservatives and the latest leaves the 117-seat legislature with 76 seats for the Conservatives, 29 for the Liberals, 20 for the NDP and one seat vacant.

Mr. Lewis noted the reversal of results from the 1971 general election, which former Conservative minister Vera Guindon won handily.

Mr. Guindon resigned the seat this summer to contest the federal election, losing to Liberal Ed Lumley by more than 5,600 votes.

It was the first time the NDP ever won the riding. Mr. Guindon had held it since winning the 1958 election.

It was the third consecutive byelection loss by the ruling Conservatives since the 1971 election. They also lost to the Liberals in Huron and Toronto-St. George.

Davis Visits Israel

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis announced Thursday he will visit Israel for a week early next year.

Mr. Davis, who will be the first Ontario premier to visit Israel, made the announcement in a speech to the Canada-Israel Chamber of Commerce.

He said he hopes to discuss the Israeli government let the Ontario Urban Transit Development Corp. expand private trade and broaden communication between the two governments.

Mr. Davis recently returned from a 10-day trip to Italy.

Games Lower Crime

MONTREAL (CP) — City police would like to see more games between Canada-Russia hockey games. During the recent opening match at Quebec City, "the city (Montreal) was like a ghost town between 8 p.m. and 11 p.m." because everyone was glued to the television set, Police Chief Jean Lapointe said. The three hours dropped below average.

Alignment Changed

Resort Owners Win Fight with Province

GILMOUR — Central Ontario tourist councils have made their point with the provincial government and have achieved the alignment they want rather than the one the province wanted to impose on them.

Vern McMurray, of Gilmour, president of the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Council, complains that tourism minister Claude Bennett wanted to amalgamate the province's 20 tourist councils into 10. "This would have put us into an eastern region, and we have nothing in common with them."

They draw their tourists from Quebec and the New England states, we get ours from New York and the Midwest. It just didn't make sense," he said.

In an effort to encourage the proposed change, the province offered some financial inducement, but "it just wasn't good enough," Mr. McMurray said. "There were too many strings attached."

After year-long negotiations, the the province finally capitulated last week and agreed to the councils' alignment: Highlands of Hastings, Quinte's Isle, Great Pine Ridge, Kawartha Lakes, Lake Simcoe, Land o'Lakes, and probably, Haliburton Highlands.

The grouping is based on one accepted by the province for Toronto, Grey-Bruce and Muskoka counties and involves an administration union only, with each council retaining its individual identity.

At the last meeting of the Highlands of Hastings council, the Maple Mountain project in the Stirling-Marmora area was described and discussed.

It was agreed that a similar project on the 200,000 acres of Crown Land in northeastern Hastings and Lennox and Addington would have great tourist potential.

The area is well serviced with access roads and has a good variety of lakes, rivers and many high hills for winter activities. The council will bring this to the attention of the ministry of tourism.

The meeting was told that the government's attention is asked to reconsider establishing a haven for incorrigible boys and girls at Little Cashel Lake, to be known as Boys Harbour, Inc. It was felt it would be a detriment to the locality as the forest is cottagers in the area.

Voters List Monday

Belleville residents will be able to learn on Monday whether their names are on the voters' list for the December 2 municipal election.

City Clerk Earl Dafoe says voters' lists for each polling area will be posted following which non-listed voters will have until Nov. 1 to make changes to ensure their name is placed on the supplementary list.

So far only Mayor Robin Jeffrey has publically announced her candidacy to run for re-election, but the campaign pace is expected to quicken by the time the official nomination period opens on Nov. 7. The nomination period closes at 5 p.m. Nov. 12.

Car, Bus Collide

TWEED — A Herschel Township woman underwent surgery to the nose at Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston Thursday following a car-bus collision at the junction of Highway 62 and the Ridge Rd. about 2 miles north of Belleville.

Grace M. Hudson, 20, suffered severe facial lacerations and injury to her left hand in the 8 a.m. crash. Her small, foreign car was a write-off. She was taken to Belleville General Hospital and immediately transferred to Kingston.

Mrs. Hudson's vehicle was bound on Highway 62 when her car collided with a school bus driven by Florence E. Woodbeck, 33, of RR 2, Stirling. The bus with about 22 elementary and secondary school students was also proceeding west on the Ridge Rd. None of the students were injured and damage to the right rear corner of the bus was estimated at $800.

Trustee Steps Down

One of Hastings' County's 17 trustees has announced that he will step down this December. Robertson Collins, separate school representative for Belleville on the public school board, said at the regular board meeting Tuesday night that he would not run for re-election. Mr. Collins has served as a trustee on various boards for more than 12 years, and has been with the Hastings county board since its inception in 1969.

Pet of the Week

Pierre, a small white poodle, was shaking with fear when he was photographed on arrival at Quinte Animal Shelter. The five-year-old pet had to be placed for adoption by his owner because of allergies.

Pierre is intelligent, gentle, housebroken and had all his shot and is anxious to find a loving home again. The shelter also has a female poodle of the same size and color available for adoption.

World Poor Aided By USC Activities

For 20 years the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada has been helping the needy overseas.

And Thursday evening at Gorby Public Library, Dr. Gordon Merrill, recently appointed USC special advisor for planning and development spoke to a small audience about the role of the organization.

His slide presentation centred around the work of the Ottawa - based organization in Korea, a country from which Dr. Merrill recently returned after a three-week survey there.

Dr. Merrill also was in Korea from 1953 to 54 where he taught as a member of the extension department of the University of California.

The USC, he continues, its work overseas, started its annual campaign to raise funds Sept. 18 with a Christmas target of $3,275,000.

In this area the USC is sponsored by the Unitarian Fellowship.

To cut costs and ensure that as much money as possible of that raised is used to its best advantage, he said USC advertising is kept low-keyed even to the point of having inexpensive pamphlets and using both sides of papers in many cases for news letters.

An example of where your money donated to the USC fund goes is explained in a brochure that mentions that four cents goes towards a cup of milk for a child in India and Bangladesh and that for only a day helps to sponsor a needy boy or girl under the USC foster parent scheme already underwriting effective care of about 800 children in six countries.

Strike Averted, Workers Accept New Bata Offer

By AL ZABAS
Intelligencer Reporter

FRANKFORD — Strike action was averted at Bata Industries Ltd. footwear plants in Picton, Batawa and Campbellford Thursday when Boot and Shoe Workers Union members voted 54 per cent in favor of accepting a an 18-mo year contract.

Results of the vote by 700 of 889 Local 713, 760 and 464 workers were released in Frankford in Picton that the strike could legally start at 12:01 a.m.

Local 713 president Tom Middleton said Thursday the vote could have gone either way and the remaining 139 workers turned out.

He said in fact the issue that turned the tide was the company's agreement to withdraw its demand for a seven-day work week in specific areas of the plant's operation.

Key issues during the five-month contract talks were the seven-day work, pay rates for time during machinery breakdowns, and wage increases.

The old contract expired Oct. 4. The Oct. 12 legal strike date was set following receipt by the union of a no-board conciliation report from the Company.

Company wage offers were released by the union for the first time Thursday. The new two-year contract will be retroactive to Oct. 4.

Hourly rated workers, whose rates now range between $3.25 and $3.58 an hour will receive a 30 per cent hike in pay an hour (whichever is greater) increase each year of the contract.

Spare operators — those able to switch to various jobs equally well — are in for similar increases.

Piece workers broken down in nine classifications — will receive basic wage increases of 35-cents an hour in the first year and 30 cents an hour in the second. Present rates range from $3.13 to $3.57 an hour. Piece work rates also are increased.

An across-the-board cost-of-living allowance of 25 cents an hour over two years has been made. Shift premium improvements have been made in vacations and pay benefits have increased slightly.

Mr. Middleton said the company originally had been drawn by Bata in their second offer, would be dropped primarily to the Monopior workers, a synthetic material used in the company's ladies boot manufacturing division.

The new agreement gives workers their basic wage rate two hours after machinery breaks down. Previously, the company had offered to pay the provincial minimum wages.

Strike Off

Bata Industries Ltd. employee Ludwig Nogueira (right) drops her ballot into the box under the eyes of Local 713 Boot and Shoe Union scrutineers Louise Middleton in Frankford Thursday. The strike action at Bata was averted by a 54 per cent vote in favor of accepting a new two-year contract. Almost 92 per cent of Bata's workers in Picton, Batawa and Campbellford turned out to vote.

Supervisor Wants SWEEP Changes

PICTON — If Project SWEEP (Students Working for Environmental Renovation Program) is approved for the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority next year, a longer working period and higher wages are needed, says David Matthies, supervisor. Work this year, began in mid-May and ended August 30.

Mr. Matthies, in his report of Project SWEEP's 1974 activities to Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority, states the rising cost of university and college education necessitates increased remuneration. Wages paid this year to 76 students employed under Project SWEEP totalled $55,416.

"It is realized that the wage scale and working time be scaled down by Queen's Park, but thought and discussion are needed to see if a minimum of working period is definitely needed for post - secondary students" he asserted in a written report to the PERCA.

Mr. Matthies said work projects this year were "a vast improvement" over the past three years. Projects were more constructive and meaningful for both the crews and the Authority. A total of 17 laborers, two foremen, two technical advisors, one secretary and a senior supervisor were employed in this region in the 1974 SWEEP program.

Mr. Matthies suggested a slow crew structure should be supplied if Project SWEEP is approved next year. For maximum efficiency he proposed three foremen with a supervisor heading the structure. Three crews could accomplish more work and leave fewer workers unemployed.

"With a program of this size, more vehicles are desperately needed," commented the supervisor.

He added a minimum of four vehicles — two stake trucks and two pickup trucks — should be available.

Rare Collectables Up For Auction

PICTON — An antique auction, believed to rank among the most outstanding held in Prince Edward, opened Friday in Hangar 5 at Loch Sloy Industrial Park.

Sale items are from the estate of the late Leslie and Phillina DeGroff of Bloomfield. The couple operated a hardware store in the village for many years and Mrs. DeGroff was keenly interested in the collection of antiques.

A preview of the antiques to be auctioned was offered Thursday and attracted collectors and antique buffs from throughout the Quinte area. The sale opened at 10 a.m. Saturday and will resume Saturday at 10 a.m. for its final day. Auctioneer is Creighton Carr of Picton.

One of the most unusual items offered in the sale is a Swiss Music Box with Sublime Harmony picnic bells in the base. This rarity was manufactured by G. Baker Troll and Company, Geneva, and is believed to date to about 1880.

Another unique sale item is a 22-year-old beaded opera cape owned by Mr. DeGroff's grandmother, a Mrs. Crippin who was a resident of the Consecon area.

A history of this sheet states it was hand made with each stitch or crocheting handdone with the jets attached.

"This opera cape is perhaps the only one in existence today . . ." says a written statement signed by John Ashby, owner of the estate.

The sale also features a large collection of china, furniture, books, old records and oil lamps. Among the glassware is a collection of 100 goblets.

The Swiss Music Box, considered one of the most unusual items in this outstanding antique sale is a table and with a smaller table on top and picnic bells under glass, hence it does not look like a music "box." The two women studying it are Mrs. Wilfred LaPorte of Belleville and Mrs. Lance Davers of Picton. (Mrs. LaPorte's wearing glasses).

Bikes Present Problem

PICTON — The problem of motor bike riders on the slopes of Macaulay Mountain was reviewed by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority this week in conjunction with regulations for use of the conservation area.

The PERCA has suggested executive council rules should specify no motorized vehicles should be operated in a conservation area except under the authority of a permit issued by the secretary-treasurer and in a designated area of the site.

It was noted trail bikes had been run up the ski slopes at Macaulay Mountain and a 14-year-old this year operated a four-wheeled vehicle there.

Supervisor of the PERCA Ian Balsillie said the youth chased two older women off a path and later pursued children near the dam. When stopped by the supervisor, the youth said he was on public property.

Mr. Balsillie added, "The police would rather have him here than on the highway."

Century-Old Mill Wheel Donated to County Museum

CONSECON — A century-old water wheel, salvaged from Consecon Creek during construction of a dam by Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority, will be donated to Ameliasburgh museum.

Museum curator Harry Bisdee joined a work crew Thursday morning at the Baldwin Mill as preparations were made to remove the Little Giant wheel weighing about two tons.

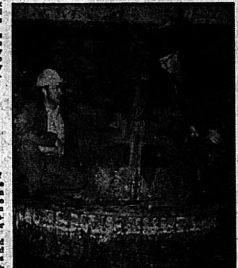
Manufactured at an iron works at Glenora, about five miles east of Picton, the wheel is 101 years old.

Mr. Bisdee, discussing this new museum artifact, confirms it probably will be the first water wheel on display in a Prince Edward County museum.

He traced the history of Consecon's Mill, noting the first was a large stone structure that burned. It was replaced by the present Baldwin Mill.

The first mill operator was a Mr. Saylor who later transferred the business to a nephew, Adam Burr. In the years that followed the mill was run by Clayton French, Royden James, then the Baldwin family. It has now been sold to Ed Syrotiuc.

Ameliasburgh Township will pay the cost of salvaging the water wheel for its museum.



Big Move

The Little Giant water wheel at the Baldwin Mill Consecon, is prepared for removal to Ameliasburgh township museum. Show atop the wheel are a workmen and Ameliasburgh museum curator Harry Bisdee (glasses, corve-ails). The wheel was salvaged during construction of a dam at Consecon Creek.

Barn, House Gutted In Ameliasburg Fires

The Ameliasburgh fire department had a busy night Thursday with firefighters returning from one fire and fighting another one already underway.

At about 4:45 p.m. Thursday the fire department was called to the property of Klaus Werkhoven on Huff's Island Road to fight a barn fire.

Ameliasburgh fire chief Roger Flower said there were six children playing in the barn, a two-storey one, at the time. Mr. Flower said the children — all under 10-years-old — told him they had smelled smoke but had gone on playing. Then they noticed smoke coming from between the bales of hay in the barn and alerted their mother, who was working behind the house.

She then contacted her husband who was at another barn a t a mile and a half away. Werkhoven was taken to Belleville General Hospital in shock and later released.

When firefighters arrived — four trucks and 22 men — they had high winds in contend with.

By 7:45 p.m. Chief Flower said the crews were ready to be released and prepared for another fire, leaving one truck behind.

A total of 1,200 bales of hay were lost in the barn. Chief Flower said he believes spontaneous combustion was the cause of the fire which caused an estimated $8,000 damages to the barn, hay and machinery.

Signs To Go

The city fathers are finally getting around to doing something about overhead signs.

A few of us remember the Belleville of almost a decade ago when the Chamber of Commerce presented ideas for a new downtown, complete with "a magic circle" traffic route, improved parking, a new dawn for pedestrians and shoppers — and, among other aesthetic improvements, an end to the hodge-podge of overhead signs.

The plan was unveiled with some fanfare at a film showing in the Hotel Quinte and there was a definite feeling that Belleville was on the move.

All this, incidentally, before The Mall, The Four Seasons and a small host of other new commercial and industrial undertakings began to appear around the city.

There was talk also of a Norwich Plan undertaking downtown, after the fashion of merchants in the English city of that name. In short, a facelift, with little more required in the way of raw materials than a lick of fresh paint.

Well, a number of merchants have done something of the kind in the interim. And of course there has been a fire or two, but by and large the downtown looks brighter and more attractive than it did back in 1965-66.

And now, at last, it looks as if there will be a by-law soon which will ban those overhanging signs.

Building Standards

The sign by-law, as was pointed out recently, is one of three "priorities" set by council for consideration this fall, the other being housing and minimum building standards.

It is a timely enough subject, and it is one which Citizens Bureau member William Hockley discussed before a Belleville Rotary Club audience recently.

Mr. Hockley cited a long list of faulty workmanship which he said he had uncovered through citizen complaints and personal observation, including an inspection tour he said he had made in the company of the chief inspector of the Ontario Housing Corporation.

Among the faults encountered were installation of 20-inch blocks where the plans had called for 12-inch blocks, gables which had not been stressed, poor paintwork, even a sloping floor.

Mr. Hockley contends that inspection is inadequate. "Everyone just shrugs his shoulders," he told the Rotarians.

By way of confirmation of the complaints, he said the bureau had recovered for people who were out of pocket as a result just under $20,000. In the case of one new home the bureau had to have the builder do some $6,000 worth of repairs before the owners moved in.

Those who buy older homes, whether in town or country, may expect problems from time to time. But when new homes, either before or after completion, manifest shoddy workmanship which in turn is allowed to pass official inspection, then it is time for remedial action.

Attention to minimum building standards is a step in the right direction.

Consumer Voice

Sliding with Food Prices Review Board chairman Beryl Plumptre has not been our practice. Quite the opposite in fact. However, if Mrs. Plumptre is one of the few official voices on behalf of the hard-pressed consumer these days then there are times when such support is justified. As when she said she would resign if Ottawa attempts to limit her power to recommend action on food prices. Even as the politicians talk about cutting costs and curbing inflation, prices continue to rise. There is too much talk and too little action of the kind that poses any prospect of relief for consumers. Mrs. Plumptre should hang in there.

Britain's Shaky Economics

Wilson Continues Along Path Of Socialist Doctrine

By JOHN D. HARRIOT

Canadian News Services

Britain's Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson is now in office at the head of Labor governments with razor-thin majorities in Parliament. Like his third one, the first came after the 1964 national election and the second from last February's inconclusive election.

Wilson's style, especially his near-defeat a decade ago, Mr. Wilson has performed somewhat with a slim majority. The reason is his falsehood or continued from earlier post-war Labor governments in the middle 1960s moved Britain even further along the path of the welfare state started by Labor when it defeated Tory Winston Churchill in 1945 at the end of the long lease of Labor's long policy of democratic socialism. Its last major effort it was easier for Harold Wilson to do what he considered necessary before the appearance of the next parliament.

So it would appear does Mr. Wilson, whose first premiership as prime minister during the post-parliamentary appeal has accompanied most of the time.

Because he lacks the big majority he anticipated it was through measures which could be carried in the House of Commons with the position of the Liberal party when voting comes on critical economic measures and of the Scottish Nationalists, nine sits at Westminster, when the future of the North Sea oil and gas is at stake.

This last development, the staggering of almost all under-the-ocean gas reserves found off the British coast, could solve Britain's last sore-spot—the continuing trouble in Northern Ireland (a very high figure for Britain) and many did not vote either Tory or Labor.

Most crucial for Mr. Wilson is any future heavy-going in the Commons will be

Playwright Busy Since 1971 Parole

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Madden has spent almost half of his 34 years in prison, but he has become a husband, father and National Film Board writer since his parole in 1971. Now he has moved to make his name as a playwright.

His second play, The Night No One Yelled, about prison life, opened at the Tarragon Theatre here this month.

With three writing projects ahead, Mr. Madden proudly says it's start and walks the lengthy corridors of prison life.

"It's one of the things I've tried to show in the play," he said in an interview.

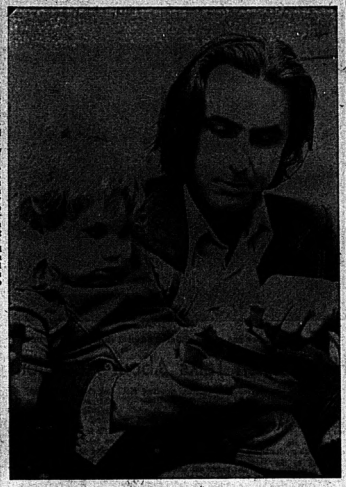
"That sheer weight of time, like a long tunnel without an end, filled with the pressures and frustrations of never getting anything when you want it."

He said a prisoner's life is no different that he did not know how to cross the street when he returned to Toronto once after three years in prison.

Mr. Madden went to training school after his first conviction when he was 13, and was later in and out of prison, usually for burglary. When first sentenced to a penitentiary 10 years ago, he volunteered to edit the prison's magazine.

He later wrote his first play, Criminal Record, about courts, which subsequently produced it prison. The National Film Board shot a documentary around the play, and among the crew was Peter Duffy, founder of the Beggar's Workshop, an amateur company performing The Night No One Yelled.

Mr. Madden joined National Film Board after his parole in 1971 and went to Montreal where he still lives with his wife and son, Sean, almost two years old.



Prisoner Turns Playwright

Customs Officer Enjoys Conversation

NIGHTHAWK, Wash. (AP) — At this isolated and awesomely beautiful spot on the Canadian border, Warren Hood stands guard against tax cheats and smugglers.

Hood is the United States Customs Service man and only resident at the border crossing point.

A visitor's first thought approaching the vehicle inspection station is that whoever has the job was transferred as some sort of bureaucratic punishment. But Hood said he asked for the posting four years ago because he wanted "to get away from the rat race" and the Forest Grass, Mont., border crossing.

"I find this an interesting job," he said. "There are no two days alike because the people are different. I enjoy talking to them. Some people come through here and are over with a 'yes' and a 'no' and a 'yes.' But the next guy tells you where he has been, how many fish he has caught and all the things he has seen and did. That, to me, is interesting."

The station is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. A Canadian customs officer, working out of his inspection station across the road, checks cars entering Canada while Hood checks those entering the United States.

At the end of the working day they close and padlock the gate across the road, forcing traffic to detour back around through Oroville, Wash., and Osoyoos, B.C.

The Canadian guard drives to his home in Osoyoos like any other commuter, leaving Hood alone on the high prairie in the shadow of nearby mountains.

Hood lives just a few feet away in a single-story frame house that he rents from the U.S. government, unfurnished for $118 a month.

"Not everyone would want this job, nor is this a job for everyone," Hood said. "A lot of people couldn't stand this isolation. I enjoy it. It's quiet. It's peaceful out here. You enjoy the fresh air; you can hear the birds sing and see an occasional coyote."

Hood, 53, is a trim, slightly built U.S. Air Force veteran who could pass for someone 10 years younger.

On a typical summer week day, Hood said, 20 to 25 cars will pass through his border station. A holiday weekend has brought as many as 68 and there have been two or three snowy winter days in four years when no one has driven through.

The light traffic flow would be even lighter, Hood said, if everybody knew where they were going.

A good percentage of the people think they're headed for Oroville and accidentally get sidetracked through Nighthawk.

As he talked, a family of tourists from Louisiana travelling in a motor home drove up. The driver asked Hood where he had missed the turn to Oroville.

Hood said that while he enjoys talking to the people, the vehicle inspections themselves are overwhelmingly routine. Occasionally he finds someone with marijuana but has never found any hard narcotics.

Two young men dressed in grubby clothes drove up in a station wagon. Hood went through their car thoroughly than the Louisiana family's vehicle. The youths would be found a set of customers of the day' and he had nothing but time.

He found no unauthorized belongings.

"You make an assessment about each car that comes through," Hood said. "I look for a quick picture based on the occupant, the vehicle and the contents and proceed from there."

He said he just asks questions of about 30 per cent of those who pass through.

Hood works 11 straight days and is then off for three. He usually goes to his vacation home near Spokane and the customs service sends a relief officer from Oroville.

Hood wears a pistol but said he has only had to use it to shoot rattlesnakes.

Occult Interest On Wane

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Age of Aquarius, in which peace and love predominate, is feeling the pinch at the cash register.

According to a palmist, a phrenologist and an astrology businessman, the trade in the occult is slipping.

"When it comes down to the bucks, everybody's the same," said Steve Johnson whose wife, Mary, is known professionally as Sister Hope. She reads palms and playing cards.

Even at a $1 price for basic reading, customers are as thin as they have ever been during her five years in Stamford, said Sister Hope. But, like many of her colleagues, she doesn't depend on palm reading for her support. Right now, her business is running at a loss.

Spanish group, the Anglo-German, and so on. The British group has set up five national groups to maintain closer contacts on a bilateral basis with Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Colombia and Peru.

It has been found that the more the members of the union see of each other's problems, the more effectively and precisely they seek concerted action through their governments.

Parliamentarians Pool Knowledge

TOKYO (CP) — One of the oldest and most influential of international organizations is the Inter-Parliamentary Union which has been holding its 61st annual conference here. The union is in fact much more than 61 years old, but there have been some gaps in the annual meetings, notably during two world wars.

In 1889 British and French members of parliament founded the union to increase under standing among parliamentarians of all nations.

The aim of these parliamentarians of London and Paris was to encourage parliamentary government in general, and to make sure that the Inter - Parliamentary Union should not be government-controlled, their idea then as now was that the union should represent members of all major elected political parties in their capacity as parliamentarians. Party politics were to be kept as far in the background as possible.

Today membership of the union includes 79 parliaments. Obviously not all of them share the same conceptions of parliamentary democracy, but they come to share quite a lot. For example, the secretary-general reported in the official bulletin a few months ago that a delimats of mutual understanding and co-operation had been established.

That is just what the union was founded to achieve, though the founders could not have foreseen the precise form of future problems. But they knew enough to realize how differently political institutions would develop in different countries, and that mattered very much what all countries and all men had in common.

Those founders also knew that in formal speeches the temptation to make the usual nationalist speech, to justify one's own country right or wrong would be inevitable. So what was always really matured at all meetings of members of the union is contacts.

Women Hear Purdy's Poems

Al Purdy, reading his poetry at the library.

More than 70 women gathered in the Corby Library art gallery last night to hear poet Al Purdy reading selections from his work.

The autumn meeting of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Federation of University Women, the event was also open to the public.

Nationally known for his prose, magazine articles and plays as well as his several books of poetry, Mr. Purdy lives outside Ameliasburg. His love of the Quinte area finds its way into many of his poems, about his home on Roblin Lake, about the country north of Belleville, and about the things he's seen around him during the years he has spent here.

Poems tracing Mr. Purdy's experiences also range farther afield in their settings, from Ohio to the arctic wastes. His travels in Canada and abroad have furnished him with the material and memories for poetry that describe his personal growth as well as the events themselves.

Reading poems that tell about his early days riding the boxcars during the depression and about his stories of Indian rock painting on the shores of Lake Superior, Mr. Purdy also gave the audience background information about the writing of the poems.

Helen Allen shows one of the children adopted through her column.

Helen Allen Talks About Adoption

"The children who are featured in Today's Child are not problem children," explained Helen Allen last night in the Park Room of the Four Seasons Hotel.

"Instead, we call them children with problems."

Speaking to the Lodgwins awards Association, Miss Allen talked about the role her Today's Child column has had in the adoption of hard-to-place children.

Since she began the column 10 years ago at the Toronto Telegram, society's attitudes have undergone a great change, she said.

In 1964, there was difficulty in finding parents for a little girl with one defective ear, she recalled. There was no chance for the adoption of severely handicapped children or those with mental retardation.

The impossible-to-place label also applied to children of minority races and older children.

"A few years ago an eight-month old boy was regarded as a senior citizen," said Miss Allen.

"But today we would have no trouble finding him in an adoptive home."

People now are far more willing to take children with health problems as severe as cystic fibrosis and hemophilia, she said. Even degenerative illnesses like muscular dystrophy have not prevented the adoption of children.

"If a child can function within a family then he should have a family," Miss Allen said.

People who adopt children with health problems usually have a special interest or knowledge of the field, or a deep desire to help children who might otherwise be rejected."

Miss Allen showed the audience photographs of several children who have found homes through the Today's Child column, now handled by the Ontario Ministry of Community and Social Services, and through the television family Finder, offered free to provincial stations by CFTO-TV.

"We have less trouble now finding homes for children in every category," Miss Allen said.

"In the last 18 months we've found homes for five mongoloid children, something that would have seemed incredible a few years ago.

"There's an increasing interest in adopting older children as well.

It used to be considered unnatural for a couple to decide not to have babies. But today people can openly admit they find older children more interesting, and start a family with adopted children."

There is an emphasis now upon keeping families of children together, and the public is responding.

"We recently had a family of five children adopted by two families who live next door to each other. One family took two children and the other adopted three, so that the children could grow up together.

"It is clear from the results we see that more people are willing to gamble, willing to take the risks that adoption of special children involves," Miss Allen said.

Senior Citizens Hold Annual Bazaar

The annual autumn bazaar and tea of the Belleville Senior Citizens' Club was well-attended yesterday by visits of the afternoon showers.

Held in the hall of Christ Church, the event was opened by Wilma Summers of the city's Recreation Department.

Convenors for the bazaar were Ada Scales, Ethel Green, Bernice Tryan, Kathleen Moon and Lois Longhurst.

Welcoming guests at the door were club president Mrs. Longhurst, assisted by the first vice-president Hilda Brooks.

Selling tickets were treasurer Edith Hannah and Vera Bedell.

The bazaar featured handmade good and homemade baking prepared by club members especially for the occasion.

Convenor of the bake table was Florence Clarke, and Eleanor Copeland of the Tony Boys.

The apron table was convened by Bertha Coulter and Margaret Bender and the fancy work display by Hazel Reed and Beatrice Lough.

Several of the men in the table convened by Stuart Lough and Sherman Park.

Madge Hutchens and Lena McMillan were in charge of the "Touch and Take" table, and Ada Scales and Bessie M c M u l l e n attended the "White Elephant" section.

Tickets for a handmade quilt were held by Bernice Tryan and Hazel Wager.

For the three grocery baskets by Mildred Taylor and Anna Halley.

The kitchen was organized by Ethel Green, and the tea room by Ina Robbins and Vera Morris. Mary Parks and May Palmer were in charge of replenishing food supplies.

Walking In Their Shoes

If you don't have arthritis, or you're not blind, or anyone close to you has either of these afflictions, maybe the work of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society Quinte Committee and the Hastings County Advisory Board of the Canadian National Institute For the Blind, don't really mean much to you. But, believe me, they mean something to a lot of people. The C.A.R.S. provides patient treatment at R.G.H., provides physiotherapy services, treatment at the Rheumatic Disease Units in Kingston and Toronto, etc. The C.N.I.B. visits the blind at home and in hospital, sponsors a white cane club, supplies talking books and provides home teacher service in Braille, typing, cooking, sewing and personal care. They help people. Help them through the United Way Campaign.

The Four Seasons Way

I don't know about you, but these lovely, crisp, fall evenings give me a great cosy feeling when I'm inside and comfortable. And for serving a fine dining and relaxing, the Four Seasons Hotel gives you exactly the same cozy feeling. The surroundings are so pleasant, the food well-prepared and well-served and there you are with someone very special a lovely wine — and the Four Seasons. Outside it's sharp, clear and cold. And inside it's warm, luxurious and pleasurable. Fine dining always is, but we set superlatives for the Terrace Dining Room at the Four Seasons tonight! Call 962-9411 for reservations.

Examining The Facilities

I paid ServiceMaster a visit at their new location right behind Mastronics on Pinnacle St., across from the Market Square. Here's the place to go! And a fine selection of home and yard care products. And don't discount the ServiceMaster First Aid Kits for Sports and Autos as a Christmas gift. In a compact carrying case, you have fifty-two different recipes for sort of removal, complete with a Dial-a-pat adjustor which tells you which combination of pressure, inside to use, or wind. There it a fantastic array of ServiceMaster cleaning products — and of "G. H. Woods" products too. Drop in at the new ServiceMaster housecentre soon. If something can be cleaned, they can clean it. Call 967-3272 for inquiries.

That Special Christmas Gift

I happen to play the piano and there's been one in my environment practically since I was old enough to apply pressure to keys. So when I talk about the joys of having a piano or organ in one's house, I'm not just giving you a line. The pleasure a piano can give a family is immeasurable. And Scotia's, on the Market Square, carry a fine line of pianos — Mason and Risch. It's still not too late to order one for your family as the time can enjoy playing Christmas carols. A piano isn't just a piece of furniture, it's joy and delight — in any key.

Oh, So Nice To Touch

The suedes and leathers at Woodley Furniture, 272 Front St. are in full splendor. And oh, so nice to touch! And Lucy G. is the designer of some outstanding coats such as a palomo with brye trim (my favorite), tailored and beautiful, a soft grey suede with a silver fox trim, a Jojo brown coat trimmed in fyrr or a blonde leather coat untrimmed — and believe me, it doesn't need it! Or there are military-style leather coats in chic browns with stylish shoulder features and belt detail. They're all there at Woodley's, just waiting to enhance winter — and you. So see for yourself!

A Great Time To Look - - And Choose

There's still some fall color around (let's face it stays as long as possible). And it's a delightful time for looking for that summer or retreat property. You may have considered it this fall, come next summer, you'd find some place to really enjoy it. W. Wright Real Estate Ltd., 240 North Front St. can specialize in finding just the right retreat or summer property. It's one of their specialties and since they have eleven offices in the eastern Ontario, they really know what's available. Drop in or call 962-2242 and hear what they have for you. They've also a great company to list with. You've got the resources of all those other offices working for you, here too.

Winterizing The Esso Way

Ed's Esso, 112 Station St. is ready, willing and able to get your car ready for winter. You know what I mean. They have all the fine range of Esso products, plus an expert mechanical staff to be sure you're ready to go, when the first snow flies. Drop in now. And don't forget those fine Atlas snow tires which Ed's can also put on your car. And you can have confidence in Ed's when you cut off on your way to work. You can also rest a courtesy car for a few days, if your car needs to be being serviced. When it comes to good old Esso service, Ed's is the place.

Not Just Selling Hockey Equipment

Bob's Sports, 26 South Front St. doesn't just sell children's skates, and hockey pads, pants and gloves; it sells "protection." It goes much deeper than that. Bob's people, when they're selling they sell you for your son or daughter fit. You can't buy properly if the skates don't fit properly. And hockey equipment which also doesn't fit properly, is little better than none at all, for helping one still occur. Bob's people spend many hours too — Bob's open seven days a week and five nights. You'll love to help you need in getting the right equipment for your child.

Going Away? Wear Canada

Now, that's not as corny as it sounds. Many people travelling abroad like everyone to know from whence they came. And if you're going abroad at Christmas or know people who is, you might well want to get some of the distinctively Canadian fabrics with which Bernice Tryan specializes. Or of her, as she's wide yet. There are many sizes to stick on your luggage. Or another fabric with your name and address and label for envelopes. When it comes to printing, the people at Richard Ellis never run out of good ideas.

That Special Party Dress

Our seasonal peak entertaining period will soon be with us. And the ladies and gentlemen of the Bay Shop Limited as well, as also her entertaining wardrobe. You'll get so better help in this area than at Jean Smith's West Wind Boutique, on Bay St., at Adolphus. Jean's selection of casual at-home clothes, and her remarkable collection of formal and informal imports in the Import Room, are the best in fashion and quality. And to see these fine clothes, you've only to step just inside the door. By day, The West Wind Boutique is open seven days a week. If you're a complete hostess, West Wind clothes are for you.

A Delightful Atmosphere

I dropped in to the Drift-Inn on Highway 37 near Consecon to see the Duplex Room; a delightful room, enhanced by barewood, maple furniture, gold table cloths, nice music and charming hostess and chef, Pat Harris. And the Duplex Room is the only thing that's a delight — so are the prices: Digby Neck Lobster at $6.50 which is delicious and generously sized and simmered in cream; Porterhouse Steak (12 ozs.) at $6.95; Filet Mignon at $6.75 (8 ozs.); Jaleo Fetiaut at $5.95 and for dessert, Strawberries Romanoff, which Pat says is "like Cherries Jubilee only better". And, of course, there's home made pie. Call 393-2145 for your reservations.

Some Very Positive News

Murray Atkinson of Murrey's Food Market on Front St. has something to shout about, besides his food prices. You may remember, a couple of weeks ago, I mentioned the formation of a number of other Front St. retailers for a test plan of which would be free parking. Well, it's now a reality; Murrey's customers and their parcels intact. Our enlightened City Council shared this sentiment and they will stand will soon be a reality near Murrey's store. If you've had a bad day today and you read this, I'm sure you'll feel better.

Calgary Clinic Treats Infertility

CALGARY (CP) — While much of the world's attention about population control and preventing unwanted pregnancy is centred in India, University of Calgary is trying to help those who want but are unable to conceive a child.

Since it opened in January, the clinic has had some success. Twelve women who at one time thought it would be impossible to bear their own children, now are pregnant.

The problem of infertility occurs in 10 to 15 per cent of couples and does not always rest with the woman. In about 40 per cent of infertile couples it is the man who presents the problem, said Dr. Pat Taylor, clinic head.

Because of this, the clinic uses artificial insemination — injection of semen from another man — as one method of bringing about conception in a woman whose husband has a low sperm count.

When a couple first visits the clinic, they are referred to it from their own doctor, they are treated as a single medical unit, both separately and together.

Once cause is either the husband or the wife may produce antibodies. But often several factors in one or both are behind the problem.

A semen analysis or sperm count can quickly determine whether the infertility rests with the man. If the problem is with the woman it usually falls into one of three categories: tubal, ovulation, or cervical.

Sometimes I think we must be mad trying to help couples have children when so many countries in the world are overpopulated," Dr. Taylor said. "But in a country like Canada I think everyone should have the right to choose whether or not they want a child of their own."

He said that many couples who previously would have resigned themselves to their infertility and adopted children are finding that they aren't enough children to adopt. Such measures as legalized abortion and widespread use of birth control have resulted in fewer babies being put up for adoption.

There are a few women who have come to the clinic because they have had abortions and subsequently decided they wanted a child but were unable to become pregnant.

And there are also some women who have had their tubes tied and later changed their minds and decided they wanted children.

"These are some of the sadder cases one comes across," Dr. Taylor said. "With some other patients one is almost forced to make a value judgment on whether they should be helped to conceive or not.

"But we just can't set ourselves up like that. We have to take a neutral, objective, and scientific viewpoint, otherwise the whole thing becomes too emotional."

The clinic at present does not offer psychological therapy for couples who decide to use artificial insemination. But it is under consideration, since Dr. Taylor thinks it could benefit men who are unsure about being father is children they did not help conceive.

"Although artificial insemination is by far the most controversial and sensational of all the methods used here, we find satisfaction to the other problems more of a challenge," Dr. Taylor said.

If the problem is ovular, it usually the result of failure of the ovaries or their intricate hormonal control system. If the difficulty originates in the, fallopian tubes through which the egg and sperm must travel, they are usually blocked or have not developed properly.

If the problem is cervical, it usually means that the mucous fluid produced by the cervix is not compatible with sperm and kills them as they move through the womb to meet the woman's egg.

Surgery or drug therapy can be instituted to correct many of these problems. But for about 20 per cent of couples seeking help at the clinic, no cause can be found for their infertility and therefore no therapy is undertaken.

The clinic is not designed to offer instruction in sexual techniques. It deals only with the physical reasons for infertility and does not want to deal with emotional and sexual counselling.

In the first eight months of its existence, about 100 cases—some couples and some single people—have come to the clinic. Single women have been referred because they have a problem which could later affect their ability to conceive.

Second Glance

By Vira Richmond Graham

FLIGHT

"I have seen the ultimate black of infinity in a stillness undisturbed by any living thing."
— Michael Collins aboard Apollo 11.

Living close to the world of flight as we in the Quinte area do — Trenton we are dedicating today's Second Glance to this fascinating subject.

We like the way one poet, Major Augustus Post, Aeronautical Pioneer, lets Flight speak for itself, in part:

"I am flight
I come with time,
I annihilate distance,
I eliminate frontiers,
I bring nations together,
I awaken the world,
I speed up trade,
I settle wars,
I strive for trophies,
I bring the future more quickly here,
I am the gift of God to man - - - "

Certainly we all agree there is much to learn from and about flying which borders for most of us on the miraculous. Yet those who do enter the space world admit trying to express ones feeling and impressions isn't an easy matter.

In fact, in the last year two astronauts have written books on their flight to the moon, without giving their reader a glimmer about what it is like to be an astronaut or to go to the moon.

Michael Collins was the third astronaut aboard Apollo 11— he, you remember, didn't walk on the moon with Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. He has written a book which is different, called "Carrying the Fire" An Astronaut's Journeys. Foreword by Charles A. Lindbergh. (Illustrated, 376 pages, published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux Ltd.) His single impression are like little snapshots — sharp, clear. He can write.

"I have been places and done things you simply would not believe," he says. " I have dangled from a cord a hundred miles up; I have seen the earth eclipsed by the moon and enjoyed it ... I do have this secret, this precious thing that I will always carry with me.

"The moon I have known all my life," he says later, "had two-dimensional, small yellow disk in the sky, has gone away somewhere, to be replaced by the most awesome sphere I have ever seen. To begin with it IS large, completely filling our window. Second, it is three dimensional. The belly of it bulges out toward us in such a pronouncedfashion that I almost feel I could. It is three most feel I can reach out and touch it.."

On the way home he writes: "It actually be one hundred thousand miles out, to look our face window and find nothing but black infinity, to finally behold the blue-and-white gold ball in the fifth window, to know how fortunate we are to be able to return to it — all these things are required."

Says one reviewer: "No other science-age art has flown in space has captured the experience so rightly."

Flight and flying can be hazardous as we all know. The other day, when a bird was hit by a plane, a daily newspaper noted that "it won't be long before birds will be the pollutants of the air."

Again flying for many is a spiritual experience, where high above the world the small worrisome problems fade away and "the whiteness of the soul can look out onto uncluttered space."

Thus we close with this with: "May your plane flights and your flights through life, be confident and beautiful, that two-dimensional small yellow disk in the sky, has gone away somewhere, to be replaced by the most awesome sphere I have ever seen. To begin with it IS large, completely filling our window. Second, it is three dimensional. The belly of it bulges out toward us in such a pronouncedfashion that I almost feel I could. It is three most feel I can reach out and touch it.."

'Dream Book' Helps Understanding

DEAR DORIS:

Could you please tell me where I can buy a Dream Book? — Mona.

DEAR MOSS:

Almost anywhere where they sell books.

Used to be we thought of dream books as idle fancies and the interpretations as invented symbols of sexuality or other New students of mental health, psychologists, psychiatrists and others who take a professional interest in human minds, are taking dreams seriously.

Your dream life, properly read and with its incidents and symbols identified, can cast new light on what your subconscious is trying to tell you!

As a simple example, you dream you are climber a hill and something is bolting you back. The professional will strive to identify your main effort in life (the hill you are climbing) and then help you to identify what is your obstacle is. Once discovered, you have a better chance of meeting it head on and winning out, in real life! Confidential to Appalled Parent: It is distressing to see young people going against all you hold sacred about sex. The loveliest ones are concerned themselves. Many eventually get to counsellors they respect with desperate enquiries about how to "get out of the sex game."

Yet with today's many instances of marriage breakdown, and little concern for them, it is time that there be standable when a couple, find and all go their own way each other, hesitate to commit themselves for life.

Your daughter wants you to bring up this subject, or she wouldn't be skirting it so often. She wants your security and your ideas. Help her out.

Think through her feelings and then help her know you care, but that the decisions must be hers.

(Please make letters to Doris, in care of this newspaper, as brief as possible - not more than two pages. And remember that stamped envelope.

Ann Landers' 'Vatican Roulette' Unsafe

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old high school senior who needs an answer. I hope you will print the advice because there is no way I can risk getting a letter with such information in the mail. My mother would strangle me if she knew I would break loose.

My steady and I have been going together for 14 months. We started to have sex three months ago. Each time I urge me to stop because we tried to three times before and failed. We even made promises to each other and took an oath on the Bible. It didn't help.

What I need to know is this: When is the safest time for me to have intercourse because I sure don't want to get pregnant. I hope you won't suggest planned Parenthood for anything that has to do with birth control. It is against my religion. Also, my boy friend thinks (and I agree) that any artificial methods would cheapen the beautiful love we have for each other. Please, Ann, try to understand and help us.—Very Anxious

Dear V.A.: What you are already doing is against your religion, dummy. I wish you both had felt it was sinful to play Vatican Roulette because you definitely are going to need it. The rhythm system is the worst and most unreliable pregnancy. (In fact, at least 15 per cent of the time it doesn't work).

The system has to be worked out with a professional, according to each woman's cycle. The problem lies in the fact that most women's cycles are somewhat irregular. If a woman miscalculates by even one day she has a new name. It is Mother. My advice is to go to Planned Parenthood or your family doctor and take any more foolish chances.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother had a beautiful gold bracelet. Since I was the only daughter, it was natural for her to give it to me. Whenever she wore that bracelet, she mentioned that one day it would be mine.

A few weeks ago mother passed away. The gold bracelet was not with the rest of her jewelry. I asked my brother if he could tell me what happened to it. He said mother had given the bracelet to his 19-year-old daughter. That her granddaughter gave two hoots for her grandmother's wishes. Today when I saw her wearing the lovely bracelet, my blood began to boil. What should I do?—Dad

Dear D.: Tell your brother the bracelet was promised to you and you'd like to have it. The bad your mother didn't put the promise in writing. She could have prevented what is sure to be a great deal of unpleasantness.

Dear Ann: I know you aren't a doctor but you have good connections. Here's the problem. When I get tense I perspire profusely, especially my hands. It's very embarrassing when I'm in a group and have to shake hands, especially in a receiving line. I wore cotton gloves once and felt very, out-of-place because no other women had gloves on.

Three doctors have given me medicine but nothing works. I would bless you forever if you could suggested something — do?—Dad

Dear Wet: Your problem is not uncommon. It is called hyperhydrosis. Some drugs give relief but the side effects may cause problems. If you've seen three doctors I suggest you see one more. A dermatologist. If he is persistent he may hit on the drug or combination of drugs that will solve your problem without creating new ones.

Minnelli Biography Reveals Garland Lore

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I Remember It Well is the title of the new autobiography of Vincente Minnelli, who has sometimes been remembered less for his superbly styled movies than for being husband and father of two superstars.

Minnelli was married to Judy Garland for four years in 1945. They collaborated on four films and one daughter, Liza, born March 12, 1946.

He also directed such films as Meet Me in St. Louis, Madame Bovary, An American in Paris (Oscar for best picture), Lust for Life, Father of the Bride, The Bad and the Beautiful, Last for Life, Gigi (best picture, best direction, 1957) and Some Came Running.

With collaborator Hector Arce, Minnelli has written careful detail with the beginnings of director for a major studio, his rise and his fall out of his 35 films for MGM. Also the problems of dealing with the crews.

The Production Code administrator objected to Gigi because "all the characters were unmarried and opposed marriage as an institution," and "her boy and himself in relations with many women and the girl was being trained for life as a mistress."

The administrator finally relented and Minnelli filmed Gigi in his usual good taste.

Minnelli's pride in Liza shines through in his autobiography.

"I've always been more a part of the audience than her father, a super-fan who happens to love her very much."

Father and daughter had wanted to make a film together but so far it hasn't materialized. Minnelli is considering other projects, admitting he works to please himself—"but I'm the harshest person to please that I know."

The book adds revealing data to ever-growing Garland lore. Minnelli writes of their first meeting at MGM when he was newly arrived from the New York stage and she was an established, if personally insecure, star.

"I was attracted to her open manner, as only a man who has been reserved all his life can be," says Minnelli.

Their romance was slow to bloom when she reluctantly agreed to appear in Meet me in St. Louis. He was nine years older but they had a common bond: both had spent childhood in theaters all over the country.

Minnelli learned that Judy sometimes relied on amphetamines to get her through a shooting day.

"I always have to be my best in front of the camera," she told him. "Well, sometimes I don't feel my best.

"I use these pills. They carry me through."

They started living together when Meet Me in St. Louis finished shooting. Their arrangement displeased Judy's mother, "a strong-willed woman who attempted to dominate Judy."

Unable to rest after the pep pills, Judy resorted to sleeping pills. She tried to stop, writes Minnelli, "and there were brief periods when she took no drugs at all.

"Then life would get too much for her and I'd come home and find her speech and gestures going double time.

"I'll quit," she often said. "I promise."

A week after her divorce from composer Dave Rose became final, Judy and Minnelli were married. On their New York honeymoon, she made a symbolic gesture: she threw her vial of pills into the East River.

For the first time in her life, Judy turned domestic, baking cakes and doing needlepoint as she awaited the birth of her first child.

"Judy was so desirous of a perfect birth that she tried to stop totally away from barbiturates and amphetamines during her pregnancy," says Minnelli.

Motherhood provided no magic solution for Judy's disquiet and a few days after finishing The Pirate, she agreed to enter a psychiatric hospital.

But the treatment didn't help. She was back on pills again.

"She had been raised on fear and the threat of misfortune," he writes. "She didn't dance to her mother's fiddling. Wherever she turned, Judy felt betrayed."

Down to 90 pounds and groggy from pills, she was fired from Annie Get Your Gun and one day tried to slash her neck with a butcher knife, plans Katharine Hepburn appeared at the Minnelli home to lecture her: "You're one of the three greatest talents in the world. And you've hit the gutter. There's no excuse for that. No. Now, goddammit, do it."

Such counsel revived Judy's spirits, and she went on to a glorious comeback. But her marriage to Minnelli shattered under the strain. He remembers now that they had failed each other, he being unable to cope with her problems, she being unable or unwilling to create a home.

When Judy was told that the studio had sent her to a total of 76 psychiatrists, she retorted: "So what? I never told any of them the truth. There's more than one way to get even with you people."

That confession made Minnelli conclude that "much as I'd loved her in the final analysis I loved Liza and myself more."

Minnelli learned of Judy's death in Paris in a telephone call from Liza in New York June 22, 1969. "Mama died today," the daughter said simply.

She added: "I have to make sure she didn't kill herself. Mama couldn't have done that. She was in such a great mood during the last few days."

The London coroner assured Liza the drug-overdose death had been accidental, Minnelli writes. He adds:

"We'd both gone through so much with Judy, but despite all the difficulties, we never found her as tragic as the public made Judy. She didn't carry herself as a tragic person, and we took the cue from her."

AT THE PARK — In Color — This is a picture of Bill Bixby in a fun role as a father who is trying to get a "Baby, Baby, Baby" to sleep. Carol Lynley is the mother who is trying to get some sleep herself. Bixby is a widower who has custody of his daughter and is trying to be a good father. Carol Lynley is a nurse who is trying to be a good mother. Both are trying to be good parents. In short, a delightful comedy.

Ellis: Federal Controls Coming

The federal government will soon face the necessity of imposing economic controls Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, said Tuesday.

The economy is showing signs of a slowdown while inflation still continues unchecked, he told a meeting of Belleville Lions Club.

"I think before this session of Parliament is over some form of controls will either be imposed or we will have a recession that will hurt all of us," he predicted.

Slowing sales now are evident in the automobile, lumber and steel industries. This could lead to unusually high price cuts which would also affect the economy, he said.

Government department estimates demonstrate the inflationary trend, said Mr. Ellis.

This year's public works estimates are $2,000 million, up 30 per cent from $201 million two years ago. Defence spending now proceeds even with budget increases.

Mr. Ellis also told a questioner it is "very likely" he'll get higher pay.

"I fully expect there will be an increase in members' salaries. It's been rumored long enough," he said.

He said the "big majority" of MPs are finding their financial situation very difficult because of the expenses you incur in Ottawa."

Before he left Ottawa for the Belleville meeting Mr. Ellis was given a new appointment by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

He was named to a steering committee which will organize a national Conservative caucus to help review policy. The group will have 286 members and no fee each federal riding. It has its origins in the last election when there was concern that party members did not have sufficient influence on policymaking, said Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Ellis is one of three MPs from Ontario on the eight-member founding committee.

Delegations Delay Official Plan

Hopes for early approval of the city's long awaited and controversial official plan were all but dashed as a result of Thursday evening's special meeting of council which saw passage of the document again delayed.

Following a four-hour meeting at which a number of delegations asked for changes in the draft plan, council bowed to the request for more public input and voted to purchase another 50 copies of the plan and make them available to the public.

Printed copies of the plan, along with colored maps setting out zoning and land use, will be set up at various locations including public libraries, following which another public meeting will be held before the plan goes back to council for approval.

Following council passage, the plan will go to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

After the vote to hold another meeting on the plan, Alderman Wes Corke said this means the plan would not see approval this year.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey, however, said she hoped additional copies of the plan can be made available within the next week or 10 days.

Although disappointed that the official plan had not received council approval Mayor Jeffrey said she hoped the public will understand that such an important document cannot be rushed through Council.

"We must do it in the right way," she said.

Lack of proper communications and failure of council to adequately acquaint the public with provisions of the Part was the complaint of several of the delegations appearing before council.

Several of the requested changes for the official plan had never been considered by the Quinte Planning Board or by the Subdivision and Zoning Advisory Committee of city council, it was learned.

Alderman Jean Smith asked that these requests for changes go to the planning board for comment before a council vote was taken.

Aldermen Stu Meeks and Arthur Keegan brought in the motion calling for additional copies of the plan to be purchased and for a further meeting before council.

Former Alderman Gerald Joyce, local realtor-realtor was critical of the fact that only 50 copies of the plan were available for the public.

Mr. Joyce asked for higher density residential zoning for property he owned west of Frank St. and east of Collings.

Former city solicitor John C. Miller, now in private practice in the city, appearing on behalf of a number of property owners in various sections of the city, said the problem with the official plan is lack of information on what the plan really calls for.

He said he had expected public meetings after the plan had been put together and suggested that now is the time when the public should be involved.

Commenting on the claim that no copies of the official plan were available for the public Mayor Jeffrey said copies are available for reading at city hall and that colored maps had been placed in the city hall council chamber.

Other points suggested before council included rezoning changes included D. G. Mackay representing Mr. Farland Gardiner, local realtor; Douglas Grant, seeking acceptance of present zoning for a seven-acre property on North Front St., east from May, who was concerned about possible discrimination against his property for future park requirements in the west College St. area.

Quinte Planning Director, Roger Brady, outlined the background of events leading up to preparation of the official plan and set out the aims and objectives of the plan.

He admitted that there had been errors of commission in the text of the plan but said these would be cleaned up before the plan went to the Ontario Municipal Board.

He warned, however, that to make changes many times the cost was now going through changes would be found necessary.

Future of Trail in Hands Of Local Youth: Director

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The Quinte Hastings Trail Association is down to its last $7.

In a bid for public attention its volunteer directors are planning a public hike Oct. 26.

If the response is standard, many may maybe meet — as the hikers will be going in pairs.

It's a consoling trend for the association.

"We've not have much money," Jim Staveley, association president, says forthrightly, but we've plenty of activity this fall — nearly all from youngsters and young people."

School students, cadets, scouts are using the trail in growing numbers — a good sign, says Mr. Staveley.

In the future they may become the now sorely-needed help for trail maintenance.

Since it opened two years ago, the big outdoor project has been a success from west of Sagonot.

The 220-mile picturesque pathway — from Lake Ontario in Prince Edward County to Trenton — and its north Hastings County — has had little help from individuals or organizations.

Many use the trail, says Mr. Staveley. But, few members of the public at large have taken on the membership the association once hoped would pay maintenance costs.

Only 75 less than a dozen individuals took out membership cards during 1974-75, secretary Grant Harvey.

Every township abutting the trail in both counties was asked to subscribe $20 membership fee, he reported.

The Highlands of Hastings Trail Region and Madawaska Tourist Council donated a total $700, to help meet the year's bills of almost $1,000 to date.

Trail directors now are keeping crossed fingers on applications for five federal Opportunities for Youth Program grants. That's one submission for each of the five electoral ridings crossed by the trail. Totaling $65,000 the grants would involve some work programs employing 25 on needed repairs and maintenance.

Success with LIP applications has been mixed. Originally the trail plan won acceptance as a make-work project and received $60,000 for creation in 1971-72. But last year a bid for $65,000 was refused.

But working support not money still remains an imperative of the organization, Mr. Staveley emphasizes.

"Even if we pushed membership the inference is we're not money hungry, but the emphasis is on getting help."

The lackluster public response now contrasts with growing activity by special-interest groups involving youth.

During the summer, teenage organizers of an outdoors Opportunities for Youth scheme, marked 18 miles of paved highway shoulder. They took 230 youngster camping and hiking.

Air and army cadets now plan hiking activities, says Mr. Staveley.

Some 13 schools from Bird's Creek to Brighton to Trenton and Belleville have adopted groups sections of the facility.

"It's a very, very definite asset," says Bob Shaw, Belleville Boy Scout leader. "Our Boys have used the trail from Glen Miller to Frankford. It's just fantastic for them."

There are signs one Belleville service club is showing interest in the trail's needs, says association secretary Harvey.

But the current interest among young people may secure the trail's future.

"If we can get enough youngsters knowledgeable now through participation, it's quite possible they'll be willing to help in the future," he says.

Cost of Power Doesn't Dampen Consumption

Rising utilities costs are being taken in stride by Belleville customers of the utilities commission.

rates went up by 12 per cent.

In spite of this, customers are continuing to increase their consumption of electricity and are still paying their bills on time, says utilities general manager Neil Bolton.

The Belleville commission has followed a policy of increasing rates only once a year, usually July 1.

A special arrangement to ease the load for old age pensioners, is not being used extensively, says Mr. Britton.

The commission arranged for senior citizens to pay their hydro bills every month, instead of once every two months, and the individual senior citizens can arrange the payment date to be into the arrival of his pension cheque. However, only a few senior citizens have taken advantage of the plan.

UCS Searching For New Officer

The future of credit counselling in Hastings county is up in the air, Wayne Miller, who has been United Community Services volunteer credit counselor has announced that he can no longer take on new clients. He will continue to work with his present caseload.

United Community Services directors, who set up the credit counselling service, Thursday night announced plans of serving their clients. UCS president Virginia Chrysler suggested that the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs be approached for a grant that would pay 50 per cent of the cost of credit counselling.

Another approach was Belleville local branch of the chartered accountants, who had, a year ago, expressed interest to take on credit counselling on a volunteer basis.

Telecare, an emergency telephone service operated by Belleville churches, also has credit counselling service and their clients will be referred to them until a permanent service can be set up by UCS.

United Way Goal Still Far Away

The United Way campaign, opened Sept. 23, has achieved $18,000 of its objective of $140,000.

It is still hampered by a lack of volunteer canvassers, United Community Services board members indicated at their regular meeting Thursday night.

UCS director Gordon Mullin, however, said he was optimistic in his report of this year's campaign.

Miracle Mart, the supermarket at Quinte Mall, now has instituted a payroll deduction plan for its employees, he said. The church has a province-wide campaign in session, with recognition to the clove that produces the highest percentage of employee participation.

Mr. Mullin said he feared the percentage of employee participation contrasts, given the church committees on the number of dollars raised in each division of the campaign.

"It is better to have everyone give a little, rather than concentrate on the big giver," he said.

Among the contributors is Montreal Expos, who sent down two Expo passes to be used during the campaign.

The Bridge Street United church choir is raising money from the Silk bequest, underwrite the cost of 1,000 UCS bulletins for distribution in city churches.

Since the inception of the United Way campaign, Bulletin boards have been placed in shops, malls, motels at banks, and in the mall. The messages were made by a retired couple in the city and are unique, says Mr. Mullin.

"No other city in North America is using them," he said.

The city of Ottawa has applied for permission to adopt the bulletins, Mr. Mullin said, he expects the idea to spread across Canada.

Brothers in Court

Five brothers charged with assaulting two police officers and possession of a weapon have chosen to appear before a judge and jury when they face court sessions on Nov. 18.

Leonard, Glenn, Eric, Larry and Gordon Lucas appeared in provincial court before Judge J.L. Clendening Thursday. A ban on publication of evidence was imposed at the request of the defence.

The charges stem from an August 17 incident involving a street brawl in the Hillcrest area.

Moving In

Phil Brooks, shown here hauling furniture, will open a major auction hall on the city's western fringe in the Westgate Plaza, October 26 with an introductory auction sale. The hall is located at the rear of the plaza and will specialize in top quality auction pieces.

Just Enough to Win-A's World Champs

OAKLAND (AP) — Joe Rudi played a gassing game Thursday night with Manager Dick Williams' intellectual relief ace Mike Marshall of Los Angeles Dodgers.

He hit a game-winning home run that gave his Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Dodgers and the 1971 World Series, four games to one.

Rudi ripped Marshall's first pitch in the bottom of the seventh inning deep into the left field stands after the game and ninth Dodger relief pitcher to throw fastballs hitting at Dodger left fielder Bill Buckner.

Marshall, the tireless Dodger reliever, smiled patiently as the mound ace asked to be restored.

When it was, Rudi stepped in to swing.

"It hit an inside fastball, belt high," said Rudi. "I believe it or not, I was looking for it.

"I'm tired to tired on arms," Marshall's world three games when the reliever didn't forbear taking any warmup pitches after the brief delay.

"Usually, they do," said Rudi. "Last night, they were jamming me."

Yes, I thought rather than waste one or two pitches warming up, he might try to sneak one by me. He did, and I hit it."

Rudi's drive put the A's in front to stay and manager Alvin Dark made sure they stayed there by bringing in his top reliever, Vida Blue, to start the eighth inning.

Fingers won his first game and saved the fourth and fifth in this Series in which four of the five games were decided by a 3-2 score.

Fingers' performance earned him the Series's most valuable player award and a new automobile.

The season ended officially when Fingers, relieved pitcher Vern Joshua's bleeding grounder and hopped in joy at he threw out the batter.

Fingers got into a jam and out of it almost as quickly, thanks to a base-running blunder in the eighth by the Dodgers' Bill Buckner.

Buckner opened the eighth with a home hit to left-center field that squirted under the glove of Dodger outfielder Jim North for an error. Buckner circled second and kept right on running.

"I was going on my own," he said later. "They still haven't gotten to the ball and on that play, there's no time to look for the third base coach."

However, a perfect throw from Reggie Jackson and relayed by Dick Green nailed Buckner at third.

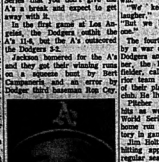
"We're the champs!" exulted Jackson in a blatant A's dressing room. "I don't need to say anything more.

"We knew we're a great ball club. We knew we're not going to lose.

The Dodgers learned from the Series that you don't give the A's a break and expect to get away with it.

In the first game at Los Angeles, the Dodgers outhit the A's 11-4, but the A's outscored the Dodgers 5-2.

Jackson homered for the A's and they got their winning runs on a squeeze bunt by Bert Campaneris and an error by Dodger third baseman Ron Cey.



JOE RUDI
Series Winning Blast

Fingers throttled the Dodgers with some great relief pitching before 35-game winner Jim (Catfish) Hunter came in to get the last out.

"This club always seems to score just enough," said Oakland manager Alvin Dark, using a phrase that he would repeat often during the series.

Another 3-2 score resulted in the second game at Los Angeles, on Rudi's first time the Dodgers were the winners. Joe Ferguson hit a two-run homer for the National League champions and Oregonian Marshall snuffed out a ninth-inning Oakland rally.

After the A's scored two runs in the third on a base hit to the ninth inning, spotter Herb Washington ran for Rudi, but was picked off first base by Marshall in the most embarrassing play of the Series for Oakland.

It was a big mistake, Washington confessed, but the last one cost the world champions.

Back in the comfort of their own ballpark, the A's took a 2-1 Series decision in Game No. 3. They scored two unearned runs after Ferguson, batting behind the plate from right field, thumbed Buckner's third bounce in front of the plate.

Bill Buckner and Willie Crawford hit home runs for the Dodgers, but they came too late.

The bumpersent Fingers saved the victory for Hunter. As you might expect, the A's were outhit by the Dodgers 7-2 but Oakland still found a way to win.

"We hope hoping for—a laugher," laughed Fingers. "But we knew we never go out.

The fourth game was spicey by a war of words between the Dodgers and the A's. Bill Buckner, the Dodgers' defiant left fielder, called the A's an indifferent team. Lastly a few of their players could make his club. He lived to regret it.

Pitcher Ken Holtzman, who hits as well as he pitches in World Series play, unloaded a home run in Oakland's 5-3 victory in game No. 4.

Jim Holt, hitless in 25 previous hitting appearances during the regular season, delivered a two-run single in a four-run sixth inning that broke the game open. The Dodgers Fingers again bailed out an Oakland starter.

That set the stage for Thursday night.

"We never win them easily," said Oakland second baseman Dick Green, the defensive star of the Series.

Vida Blue, still looking for his first World Series victory, was given an early lead, but couldn't hold it.

A Dodger error set up Sal Bando's sacrifice fly in the first inning. Ray Fosse then hit a mistake pitch from Blue over Don Sutton into the left-field seats for a two-run Oakland lead.

It stayed that way until the sixth, when the Dodgers tied the game with single of their two best run producers of 1971.

Jimmy Wynn hit a sacrifice fly and Steve Garvey singled in the second out to tie Blue. Dodger had pulled even with the A's at 2-2.

This quieted the capacity crowd of 49,367 fans at the Oakland Coliseum for a while, but they didn't stay that way for long.

In the next inning, Rudi smacked the leadoff pitch from Marshall into the left field seats and the A's had all the runs they needed.

"They wanted a pennant in '71 and we got one," Rudi said a dejected Wynn. "We'll just have to take another shot at this next year."

The A's, who are the first club to win three consecutive World Series since New York Yankees won five in a row between 1949 and 1953, will be looking back at that.

"We beat the Cincinnati Reds two years ago and they said they (National League) weren't impressed," said Rudi. "We beat the New York Mets last year and they weren't impressed. Now we're impressed with us.

"And the Dodgers in their playoffs said they weren't impressed with us.

"I wonder what they think now."

Marlies Down Petes

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros scored three unanswered third-period goals for a 6-4 win over Peterborough Petes Thursday night in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action before 2,445 fans. It was the only game scheduled.

The loss was Peterborough's first of the season at home.

John Smrke scored three Toronto goals and Mark Napier, Bryan McSorley and Craig Crawford had single goals.

Rod Lemieux, Tony Cassolato, Gary McMonagle and Paul Evans scored for the Petes who were outshot 29-26.

Spitfires Out Front

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Windsor Spitfires took over sole possession of first place in the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League Thursday, beating Niagara falls Flyers 5-1 before 2,325 spectators.

The Spitfires pulled two points in front of the Ida Weld Sabres while remaining unbeaten through their first eight games of the season. Buffalo at Welland was postponed.

Napier scored the winner for the Marlboros at 16:38 of the final period, tipping a shot past Peterborough goaltender Greg Millen.

Napier, a 6-goal scorer last season for Toronto, was playing his first game after refusing to sign an OHA Major Junior A contract. He signed the contract Thursday.

Boudreau added Toronto's insurance goal at 18:14.

Toronto led 3-1 after one period but trailed 4- going into the final period after Petes scored three goals in a two-minute, 1-second span early in the period.

Dark Knew All Along

OAKLAND (AP) — Alvin Dark joked a reporter after he was named manager of Oakland A's, and he had better watch what he would come up with another baseball world championship.

"It almost sickens me that I won two straight World Series. They were going through the season just looking forward to playing in it again," Dark said Thursday night after the club he inherited from Dick Williams finished off Los Angeles Dodgers with a fifth-game, 3-2 victory.

"I know the series would bring out the best in them," said Dark.

The A's players granted the National League champions some praise. But they tempered it with some verbal digs.

"If anything, they need a little more humility," third baseman and team captain Sal Bando said. "They're a good club, but I'm surprised they didn't scramble and claw more. Maybe they were a little nervous."

Joe Rudi, who won Thursday night's game with a home run leading off the bottom of the seventh, said it was the same old story—a National League team taking the A's in little fightly.

"After they beat Pittsburgh in the playoffs, the Dodgers said they weren't impressed by us," said Rudi. "Well, they've got all winter to think about it."

Right fielder Reggie Jackson, who combined with second baseman Dick Green on the fielding play that killed the Dodgers' last rally, agreed. He said: "I don't think the Dodgers played up to their capabilities."

But the controversial owner added: "I will have to sit down and talk about next year with him. He did a real good job. He's a fine gentleman. We were very happy to have him."

The A's players' dressing room, Bill Buckner recounted the series of plays that nailed him at third base when he decided to lead off the eighth inning.

"I saw them still chasing the ball and figured I had a good chance of going to third," said Buckner. "It took two perfect throws to get me."

Centre fielder Bill North let the ball get past Him and Buckner said just before he rounded-to second, he saw North and Reggie Jackson still chasing the ball.

"On that play you don't look at the (third base) coach," Buckner said. "I can't do my own and it was something I had a good chance to make an extra base."

Jackson retrieved the ball, threw to second baseman Dick Green who relayed to shortstop man Sal Bando was fast in time. Buckner was tagged on the play.

Buckner had been the target of left field fans who threw debris at the outfielder and there was a delay before the start of the seventh inning while Buckner protested to the umpires.

When play resumed, Rudi blasted the first Mike Marshall pitch of the game into the left field stands, producing the deciding run.

Low Sparks Capitals In Team's First Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ron Low proved Thursday to Chicago Black Hawks at least that he belongs in the National Hockey League.

The 24-year-old native of Biville, Man., blocked 32 shots, including all 18 in the final period, to help give Washington Capitals their first National Hockey League victory — 4-3 decision over the Black Hawks.

In other league action St. Louis Blues downed the winless Montreal Canadiens 2-0, Boston Flyers 4-1 in a rematch of last year's Stanley Cup finalists and Buffalo Sabres dumped California Seals 6-1.

Low, who was Toronto Maple Leafs' eighth choice in the 1970 amateur draft, has spent all but the 1972-73 season inthe Leaf farm system. That year, he had only 21 games and posted a 3.89 goals-against average. He was the first player picked by the Capitals inthe expansion draft last June.

The Capitals took an early 1-0 lead before the hometown crowd of 9,671 in Landover, Md., on a goal by Denis Dupere at 12:46 of the first period.

Chicago tied it at 16:07 of the same period as Jim Pappin's goal and took the lead 14 seconds into the second on a goal by Gerrnain Gagnon.

Washington came back with second-period goals by Dupere and Lou Anderson, but Chicago tied it 3-3 at 14:41 of the second on Jim Pappin's 20-year-plus goal.

Jack Egers fired the winner, the only score of the third period.

Trojans Upset Saints

Sparked by the two-touchdown performance of Rick North, Moira Secondary School Trojans knocked Quinte Saints from the ranks of the undefeated in a senior Big-4 Quinte high school football league match, Thursday.

North scored and closed the scoring for the winners in the hard-fought contest. Final score was 25-21.

Saints had a 21-15 lead at the half but could not cope with Trojans powerful running attack in the second half.

Running back Mike Tayler was a standout for the losers, accounting for a touchdown and logging the ball for important yardage, making second effort easy.

In junior action, Quinte topped Moira 19-7.

Steve Lemke supplied two Saints' majors and Bill McQuaid's pass to Tim Duval produced another.

Larry Walsh put Trojans on the score board in the fourth quarter, going all the way on an off-tackle play.

Cornerstone First in QHL

Cornerstone Construction jumped into first place in the Quinte Hockey League Thursday night with a 4-3 victory over Shannon. The win gave Cornerstone four points for the season on two consecutive victories. The loss left Shannon's in a tie for last place in the league with Belvedere. Both teams have one point this season on a tie. Belvedere lost to Reid's Dairy, Thursday, 5-3.

Al Mott, Doug Jobin, Murray Bryden and Roger Johnston each scored once for Cornerstone. Rick Sandford, Danny Tomkin and Clark got one goal each for Shannon's.

Reid's evened their record at 1-1 with Thursday's win. Moe Hunter scored top goal for the Dairymen with two goals. Craig Cooper, Lionel Reid and Jim McKay each scored once.

Dalhac Lambert got both goals for Belvedere.

Lions Get Untracked Too Late in Oshawa

OSHAWA (Special) — After a slow start, Belleville Lions came on in the third period to hold their own with Oshawa Parkway in an Ontario Minor Hockey Association Major Midget game, here, Thursday, but dropped an 8-3 decision.

Down 6-1 after two periods of play, Lions fought back in the final 20 minutes as the teams traded two-goal bursts and each side managed 15 shots on goal.

Belleville team manager Gerry Murphy picks Oshawa as the club to beat in the AAA series.

"They're big and fast but give us a couple of games and we'll be in okay, too," said Murphy.

Pat McArthur led the Parkway attack with a pair of goals. Lions got singles from Randy Farrar, Clinton Kendall and Ron Beck.

ROOKIE DEMOTED

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota North Stars sent rookie Richard Mulvey to the New Haven farm club of the American Hockey League Thursday.

Old Fashioned Hustle Will Get the Job Done

All out hustle. Unified effort as a team, as a team.

Sometimes, those qualities can overcome great odds.

Always, they say a lot for the team that possesses them.

In the recent Canadian Forces National Soccer Championships at Victoria, B. C., the championship went to the Quebec representative, CFB Valcartier.

An observer reports that the champs may have lacked some of the soccer skills but were long on desire and gave it everything they had, all the way to the title.

"It's give them (Valcartier) hell 'quarter," Ray Hore was saying earlier this week.

Ray and Andy McWilliams, stationed at CFB Trenton, were part of the CFB Borden team that represented Ontario.

Both learned the game over there and they are knowledgeable soccer men who not only have the know-how on the field but qualify as solid exponents of the game.

Ontario finished with one win in five games but Ray will tell you the Borden team managed to play well in all its outings. If it has a gnawing disappointment, it is in the realization that he will not likely get another chance to take part in the champion-ships.

But Ray Hore can always look back on some occasional days on the soccer pitch. He has given this area some very entertaining moments while pursuing the sport he enjoys so much.

Now, his thoughts turn to Ray of Quinte Soccer Association Cup action. His Whitley Spartacans team meets Trenton Spartacans in the Belleville Charity Cup final, Sunday, at Centennial Park in Trenton.

Ray won't wound to see his club lose 1-0 last Sunday to Spartacans in the Trenton Challenge Cup showdown. He's determined this weekend's match will produce a result more to his liking.

Back in it, C for a moment, Valcartier put together four-wins and a tie to take top honors.

Second place went to defending title holder Esquimalt (Pacific) with four wins and a loss. Fredericton's team was in Valcartier.

Cold Lake, Alberta (Prairies) was next in line with three wins and Halifax (Atlantic) finished fourth. Moncton was fifth and Europe, sixth.

Europe dropped a heartbreaker to Valcartier. The team that went on to capture the championship scored with 15 seconds to play, shading Europe, 2-1.

It was that kind of a tournament.

High School Mud Bowl

Quinte Saints' Mike Taylor, drives his way through mud and Moira Trojan defenders to gain valuable yardage in Thursday's Bay of Quinte Senior Football League contest at Moira. Douglie Taylor's heroics and second effort lunges like this one, his team dropped a 25-21 decision to the Trojans. The loss was a big upset for the Saints — the first this season — and dropped them into second place in the east division. The Moira win was only their second this year.

OFFERS TO BE HOST

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government offered Thursday to be host for the 1975 Pan-American Games, which were called off a day earlier by Sao Paulo, Brazil.A Mexican government spokesman said telegrams were sent to the Pan-American Sports Organization offering to stage the hemispheric sports carnival in this country.

Stags Spoil Racers' Opener

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dan Gratz and Marc Tardif connected on goals less than two minutes apart during the third period Thursday night and Michigan Stags spoiled the World Hockey Association debut of Indianapolis Racers 4-3.

A record 14,123 was on hand in the new Market Square Arena for the season opener for both teams.

With the score tied 2-2, Gratz scored on a 30-footer from left of the net with 11:36 gone in the final period. It was the second power-play goal of the night for the Stags.

Tardif beat Racer goalie Andy Brown on a breakaway 1:41 later, sewing up the victory for the visitors.

The Stags stunned the crowd with two goals within the first two minutes of play in the opening period as Ed Johnstone and Steve West each scored from scrimmles in front of the Racer goal. Johnstone's goal, with 14 seconds gone, came just seconds after Indianapolis defenseman Rob Ash was sent to the penalty box for interference on the first of the game's 12 penalties.

Indianapolis, a WHA expansion club, came back with the only goal of the second period as Steve Richardson broke in front of the bet with 1:38 gone. Bobby Hull then tied the game at 3-3 with a 35-foot power-play slap shot at 3:31 of the final period.

Indianapolis outshot Michigan 30-28.

Rideau Rally at Smiths Falls

Seven Cars Out of Running Early

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Less than four hours after the start of the Rideau Lakes rally, fifth in the 1974 world championship series, seven cars had retired from competition—two in spectacular crashes.

The only injury reported was to Tim Birchall, the Canadian navigator of a Toyota Corolla which rolled in a twisting gravel road, caving in the roof and windshield. Driver Victor Wejer of Poland was uninjured.

The other entries which retired included favored Fiat 124 Abarths driven by Sweden's Markku Alen and Ilkka Kivimaki. It broke a back wheel on the third stage.

Walter Boyce of Ottawa, reigning Canadian rally champion, had trouble steering his factory-backed Toyota Celica ahead of the rest of the pack after being first off the starting ramp. A special twin-cam engine is expected from Japan to not arrive in time and he had to make do with the reduced power of a small engine.

The other drop-outs in the early going were Canadians Randy Black and Tom Burgess, whose Datsun blew a head gasket shortly before the start; Gle Pederson of Denmark and Dave Golem of Canada whose Datsun rolled in the second stage; Mauro Pregliasco and Angelo Carraglio of Italy, whose Fulvia Lancia retired with undisclosed mechanical ills and three Canadians gary Nell and Don Ramsay, whose car suffered a blown engine; and Bob Wagner of the United States and Terry Beadon of Canada, whose Manta hit the road and damaged its front suspension on a rock in the second stage.

Provisional standings after five of the rally's 45 stages had Italian pair of Dominico Paganelli and Domenico Russo in first place in their 124 Abarth with their 36.45 penalty points based on one point for each second behind time.

Second were Sandro Munari and Mario Mannucci of Italy in a Lancia with 39.55 penalty points. Third were Brian Culcheth and Johnston Eyre of Britain in an Austin Marina with 37.36; fourth Guy Chasseril and Jean-Pierre Rougot of France in an Alpine-Renault with 37.52; and fifth were Lampinen of Sweden and John Davenport of Great Britain in a Lancia with 39.52.

6 Swedes Banned At Home

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Six Swedish players, now in the World Hockey Association, have been disqualified for life in Sweden for refusing to pay their former teams $15,000 compensation, it was reported Thursday.

Ulf Nilsson, Anders Hedberg, Lars-Erik Sjoberg and Curt Larsson of Winnipeg Jets plus twin brothers Thommy and Christer Abrahamsson of New England Whalers were given the ultimatum to pay the money.

When they didn't pay, the Swedish Hockey Federation board decided to ban them from playing and coaching in Sweden.

There was no agreement between the Swedish federation and the WHA when the Swedes signed their contracts last summer. The federation now has an agreement with both the National Hockey League and WHA.

Now, the NHL and WHA must compensate Swedish teams when their players sign with the two professional leagues.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Saturday, October 19

Aries (March 21-April 19) Generally speaking, much that is new and exciting is important to you because your focus now is on the future. Be receptive.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Spend the time learning new things that you feel offer rewards, but not another. You don't understand what can be personally derived.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Take advantage of any social opportunity that permits you to mix with the bons or cognoscenti of your set.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You are likely to be less than fussy about being choosy for others that afford them joy. You'll get much fun from it as they will.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Your good fortune early in the day: You are liable to be in on a secret that will have a lot of additional benefit to you.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Over the next few days unusual conditions will present themselves. They'll be of material or financial value to you and your family.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) People you'll have commercial contact with today will do you little favors they wouldn't do for others because of the way they'll treat them.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Certain material things you want will come to you, with surprising ease, even as the day's events. Keep all channels open.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Spend the time learning new things that you feel offer rewards, but not another. You don't understand what can be personally derived.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today's job is what you can deal with today and they will treat you in the same manner tomorrow. Be sure to be helpful and charitable.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Friends and contacts will be particularly receptive to what you offer the next few days. Cooperative efforts, advantages will be offered.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Accomplish tasks today and tomorrow on issues you deem the most important in your life at this time. Strides can now be made if you apply yourself.

Opening lead—10 6

By Oswald and James Jacoby

No series of articles on obligatory falsecard plays would be complete without today's hand. In one form or another, this hand has been appearing in bridge columns for 30 years or more.

South wins the spade opening and leads a club. He is not going to make his slam if East holds all four missing clubs, but West follows and now the slam is cold.

A happy-go-lucky South would rise with the king of clubs on the theory that queens always dropped; a slightly more careful South would play dummy's jack to be sure of his contract against any 3-1 or 2-2 break and to make seven if West had started with three to the queen; very careful South would play low from dummy. This would give up one trick for sure but would insure success of the slam against the presence of all four cards in the West hand.

So, you are West. You know South is a careful player. You know that if you play the eight, nine or 10 he will duck in dummy and pick up the suit the second time around. You play your queen.

South should still play low but will not. Thirty points in 2 N.T. points and he just may play the ace or king and wind up in the ash can.

The CARD Service

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
	1 ♠	Pass	1 N.T.
Pass	2 ♥	Pass	2 N.T.
Pass	3 ♥	Pass	3 N.T.
Pass	4 ♥	Pass	4 N.T.
Pass

You, South, hold:
♠ A K 10 4 3 ♥ Q 10 4 ♦ K Q 10 7 ♣ 8 7

What do you do now?

A—Just bid six spades. Your partner has told six hearts over your five notrumps to show two kings. What do you do now?

TOMORROW'S QUESTION

Instead of showing one king your partner has bid six hearts over your five notrumps to show two kings. What do you do now?

TB in Home Can Be Harmless

By G. C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband's uncle has TB and he was found to have tuberculosis. The doctor now is treating him at home, but this time when we asked what precautions should we be taking. Mrs. R.D.

TB being a communicable disease, I can understand that you are worried—but at the same time I can tell you that you really have little need to worry.

The drugs now being used for the treatment of tuberculosis, if they start their work rapidly. This has made it possible to treat more patients at home. But the question has lingered. How safe is it?

A report at the annual meeting of the American Lung Association, by Dr. Richard L. Riley of Johns Hopkins and Dr. Allan C. Mills of Baltimore, is most encouraging.

They tested 89 members of families with TB patients being treated at home, using skin tests to see whether the TB germ had entered their bodies.

They found none who picked up the germ after treatment had been started—and 16 acquired the germ before treatment was begun.

Their "post" precaution is to make sure that none of your family acquired the germ before a family's case was discovered and treated. It can take as much as a couple of months before the skin test will show a change in a person that is wise. If the germ has been transmitted to anyone in the family, the use of course treatment must start at once, but TB when treated early is an encouragingly readily controlled.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, eight months old, had pyloric stenosis at five weeks, was operated on, and recovered in fine shape. Two weeks later, a double hernia. But since then he has never had even a cold or fever.

My mother-in-law claims the baby's power is wasted and he'll never be able to eat very much and will be very small. Every time she sees him she has to say something like "he'll need a brace because his feet point outward" or "he has bronchial asthma" because of tight air passages.

Can you get her to understand that my baby is not an invalid?—Y.M.

Well, I'll try. The little boy has had more than his share of physical problems for one so young, but your mother-in-law is totally off base in her opinions about what is going to happen to you, or what!

His current state of health should convince her that she ought to stop making these gloomy predictions. Only observer I can think of for you to do now is to let her see that the doctor says that isn't so."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Are rheumatic fever and St. Vitus dance the same thing? You said that rheumatic fever sometimes results in "heart trouble or Huntington's chorea." You are saying that Huntington's chorea is the same as St. Vitus dance, but it's not.—Mrs. K.

You are correct; that was an error and it should have been Syndenham's chorea.

Both types of chorea involve involuntary trembling and movement. Syndenham's, or St. Vitus dance, occurs occasionally as a complication of rheumatic fever but is time subject.

Huntington's chorea occurs in older people and, unfortunately, does not subside spontaneously.

Discuss Controls

PURPLE SPRINGS, Ala. (CP) — Improved grasshopper control in 1975 was the subject of a federal-provincial research project completed here during the summer. Six different insecticides were tested on 100 plots of land. Officials said the most effective treatment was a different species of grasshopper have varying reactions to insecticides.
